PREFACE.

1691969

Not long ago it was usual to apologize in the preface for the publication of a genealogy. Its motives, objects and uses were misunderstood, not comprehended, or misconstrued. By many it was attributed to a weak vanity or pride of relationships or ancestry, and regarded as a spurious claim to consideration on account of the merits of others by those who had no merits of their own. A pedigree was sarcastically likened to a potato plant, the best part of which is under ground. The genealogist was regarded as a sort of learned ignoramus, of the grovelling, dry-as-dust fraternity, whose pursuits and acquisitions were equally uninteresting and useless. It was not understood how an interest could be felt in remote progenitors, or sympathies be excited by the trials and sorrows of people far distant, or long dead.

A great change has taken place in this respect. Now, not only is it permitted to trace out our ancestors, to be grateful for the fruits of their labors, to revere their virtues, and to sympathize with their sufferings, but the old ignorance and indifference is seen to be connected with certain moral deficiencies or perversions, and the man who cares nothing for his forefathers or kindred, like him who has no music in his soul, is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils, and is not to be trusted.

Even those who have no kindly sentiment in the matter of genealogy are beginning to apprehend some of its manifold uses and applications. The life insurance agent finds a guide in taking his risks. The conveyancer is aided in tracing his land titles. The lawyer is furnished with facts in cases of medico jurisprudence. The teacher may more wisely direct his efforts by known edge of hereditary aptitudes and tendencies. The physician may feel more assured of the correctness of his diagnosis of morbid physiological conditions. The story writer may find examples of romance in real life, and facts that are stranger than fiction; the essayist and statistician a mine of facts and figures, and the clergyman when called upon to "minister to a mind diseased," may know better how to "pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow, or cleanse the purged bosom of the pernicious staff that weighs upon the heart."

The theories and speculations of Darwin, of Galton, of Herbert Spencer, of Klaproth and others, which have been widely disseminated among the masses, have had much to do in bringing about this change. "Man's natural abilities," says Galton in Heredity and Genius, "are derived by inheritance under exactly the same limitations as are the forms and physical features of the whole organic world."

"Both moral and physical qualities are communicated by descent far more than they are developed by education, and there is no ascertained limit to the nobleness of form and mind which the human creature may attain by persevering obedience to the laws of God respecting its birth and training."—Ruskin's Political Economy.

"To come of respectable parentage," says Herbert Spencer, "is prima facie evidence of worth in a belief as in a person."

"How shall a man escape from his ancestors," says Emerson. These, and many more that might be quoted, are broad assertions of a general law that like begets like. This law has received the name of heredity. The word is not found in comparatively recent editions of Webster, though now in common use among writers. It will soon be given a place in the lexicon. The newness of the word denotes the newness of the idea in its concrete form. Its more striking manifestations in particular instances, have been noted from time immemorial. The rendevolens of Montaign, the Bavarian under life in the Austrian Imperial family, the historical instinct of St. Simon, are well known instances. Victor Hugo says "The good humor of Louis 17th, was inherited from Henry 4th." In a school of thirty boys at Stratford-on-Avon, Wm. Hewitt easily identified the "Shakspeare Boy" (a descendant of Shakspeare's sister) by his likeness to the portraits and busts of the great poet. In heredity and environment, Darwin finds the evolution of man. The influence of environment works slowly and with continually diminishing force. While heredity, being the sum of the accretions of uncounted centuries and tending constantly to greater fixity in its forms, is well nigh omnipotent in the determination of individual character.

The study of genealogy in its broader signification, must therefore be of transcendental importance. It is the study of mankind. European genealogy which concerns itself, for the most part, with the pedigrees of kings and noblemen, the heritage of honors and titles, of offices and estates, and the fictitious splendors of primo-genitive lineage, is the natural offspring of European laws and social customs. In like manner the form and spirit of American genealogy should conform to that of the national life, the central idea of which is equality. This idea harmonizes with the widest range of kindred sympathies, as well as with the philosophy of hereditary transmission in which there is no "lineal and direct" descent, or perhaps it would be more proper to say in which all lines of descent are equally lineal and direct. The use of such terms, therefore, except where law or custom creates an artificial distinction, is tautological and absurd as implying that descent can be other than lineal, and that the child is not directly descended from the mother. So, too, the old notion of the inferiority of the maternal element in the genesis of the family—a remnant, perhaps, of man's barbarism, and woman's degradation—has no foundation in nature. On such grounds and for such reasons it has been our aim to include in this work, as far as possible, all the descendants, of whatever name, of a common ancestor. Manifestly the time and labor required for such a work is much greater than would be needed for a record of the paternal lines merely, but very few are aware of how much greater the work is, for it can be shown from general laws and averages that in the aggregate of seven generations (which is about the average number counting from the first settlement of New England) of descendants from a common ancestor, those bearing other names than the original patronymic, will outnumber the latter in the proportion of 64 to 1. This is not stated as a fact, but as a calculation. It is in general an approximation to the fact. But proportioned to the increased labor is the value of its results, for the chances are 64 to 1 that the family characteristics will be found in the female branches, or, to speak more exactly, that 64 heiresses will be found in the female lines to one in the male. In view of these facts and considerations, it seems strange to find objectors to the comprehensive plan above indicated; and a class of genealogists of recent origin called patrilineists, who exclude on principle all not born to the family name. Such a genealogy seems to us a classification on the false and shallow basis of a conventionalism, inasmuch as a family name is a fiction so far as it implies any superiority of the paternal to the maternal side in reproduction, and as the root and reason of the whole matter is relationship, or descent, the adoption of such a rule as that of the patrilineists which for every one admitted to the family table or record excludes fifty or sixty children and heirs of the same blood, simply because social custom has changed their names, is a notable instance of throwing away the oyster and retaining the shell; of rejecting the substance and making much of the shadow; of putting a symbol in the place of the thing it symbolizes. We know a person who is descended in six different lines from an ancestor, in the published record of whose posterity he is not named. Though a Hebrew of the Hebrews, figuratively speaking, he is accounted no better than a Gentile. The writer of this is a Baldwin by four descents, yet by this rule would have no place in the book of the Baldwins.

It may be admitted that a special interest attaches to identity of surname. A good or bad reputation associated with particular names creates prepossessions or prejudices, and influences our casual impressions of persons of the same patronymic whom we do not otherwise know. But this very association arises from the presumption of relationship; and so in every aspect of the subject and in every line of inquiry we are inevitably led back to this one idea of kinship (kindship) as the root and branch, the sum and substance, the long and the short, the foundation and the cap stone of the whole matter. If it be said that the proper objects of genealogy are not to gratify the natural curiosity or interest of kinship, or to furnish aids to professional work, or material for philosophical study, we reply that in that case it has no object worthy of the attention of beings with reason or of beings who love. To refer to the records of other names for the female branches of any particular family is simple mockery for the reason that such records, for the most part, have not been collected or published, and never will be; and as to those which are published, they are to the general reader practically inaccessible in ninety-nine cases in one hundred. It is conceded that everyone has the right of assigning his own limits to a self imposed task, but the work of the patrilineist is too narrow in its scope, and too artificial in its classification to merit the name of family history or to serve to any considerable extent the purposes, ends and uses of genealogy. Such collections might be more appropriately called pedigrees or genealogical directories of the names of Jones, or Brown or Robinson, as the case might be.

It has been said that such researches are futile because of the multiplicity and obscurity of the channels of ancestral influences. Within the period covered by this work every person living has had 64 ancestors (baring the intermarriage of cousins); therefore he inherits from any one of them but one sixty-fourth part of what he is.

The fallacy here is that a human being is the resultant of all his ancestors, like a chemical compound of so many ingredients of equal proportions or values. But what if we admit this proposition? The corollary is, instead of there being no reason, there are sixty-four reasons for the search; for on this theory the production of a man or woman of any desired pattern would be as simple as the compounding of a doctor's prescription, by mixing in due proportion the elements composing it. The law of heredity is indeed sure and universal, but its operations are for the most part inexplicable. Whence the diversity among children of the same parents, which makes each one a mystery to all the rest? How account for the anomaly of Napoleon—his gigantic intellect and dwarfish heart—among the progeny of Charles and Letitia Buonaparte? In what unexplored regions of genealogy shall we look for the springs and sources of Shakspere's mighty genius? Few explain that strange phenomenon called Atavism, which is forever playing hide and seek in human organisms, the recurrence of remarkable traits or peculiarities of remote ancestors, skipping over the intermediate generations, like those streaks which sink into the earth, and, after hidden windings in subterranean channels, come to light again, far distant from their points of disappearance?* Even so profound a thinker as Thomas Carlyle, confesses himself in the dark about these things when he says, in his Sartor R. scruples, "In a psychological point of view it is, perhaps, questionable whether from birth and genealogy, how closely scrutinized soever, much insight is to be gained." It is a wise mother that knows her own child. Through this beneficent mystery of transmission, the birth of an infant in whatever grade of social life is the opening of a future of infinite possibilities, and parental hope and love and imagination may paint its future in the brightest colors without rebuke from reason.

It was our privilege, a few years since, to spend several days in delighted contemplation of Kensett's "Last Summer's Work." This consisted of a large number of oil paintings of landscapes, hung on the walls of the New York Academy of Design for exhibition preparatory to their sale by auction. In this study we became so familiar with the peculiar coloring and the general tone and spirit of the artist's productions, that ever since we have been able to point out a Kensett, when hung among other pictures, at a glance. In like manner the accumulation of a vast number of details concerning a great number of persons sprung from a common ancestor has stamped upon our mind the impression of certain physical, mental and moral qualities, either peculiar in themselves or in the force and energy of their manifestations. These qualities I call characteristics. It is unnecessary to do more than allude to them here. That the blood is or has been prolific is a matter of common observation. Joined to that is the quality of endurance. Some families increase but do not multiply; that is, many children are born, but few survive to maturity. Of William Tuttle's twelve children not one died young. The race is not only prolific, but is fitted to endure. It follows that wherever they have been long seated their descendants will be more numerous, as a rule, than those of other settlers of equal date. This is certainly true of New Haven. The fact is indicated in many ways. Of the 58 members of the 2d Co. of Governor's Guards, in 1775, 14 are found in this imperfect record. A similar proportion is found in the Church Manuals. Of the 12 to 16 officers and directors of the N. H. Col. Hist. Soc., usually about one-half are of this fold. So of the city banks and other prominent institutions. An accurate and well informed observer says that nearly every person in the rooms of the N. H. Col. Hist. Soc. at the fall reception of 1882 was of this family. A city directory of the "town born" of New Haven, or the Assessor's list of its tax-payers, with valuations annexed, compared with a complete record of resident descendants of William Tuttle, would be to many a surprising revelation in respect to comparative numbers, wealth and social position. It is said that from one-third to one-half of the taxable wealth of New Haven is in the hands of this family. In every association of prominent

*The theory of Darwin is that "geonomes of innumerable qualities, derived from immovable ancestral sources circulate in the blood and propagate themselves generation after generation. citizens it is largely represented in numbers and influence, sometimes constituting the majority. For instance, while writing these lines we casually take up a pamphlet containing Dr. Bacon's Centennial discourse, dated 1879, and find a request for its publication, signed by forty-nine among the most influential of New Haven's worthies, of whom we recognize eighteen as of this lineage. At the funeral obsequies of the late Henry Farnam, four of the eight bearers were of Tuttle descent. A large number of similar facts might be cited. To some extent the same seems to be true as to Hartford. These things cannot be attributed to coincidence or chance; they are too many. At least one in twenty of all the graduates of Yale College, from its foundation to the present time, are akin in this line. In North Haven, Conn., of twenty two deacons of the first church, from its foundation in 1716 to 1864, eleven, or one-half are of this family. In some branches, nine-tenths are church members, and so general is the religious inclination that I set it down as a family trait.

It seems to be the order of nature that to those who have much, much shall be added, and those who have little, the little they have shall be taken away. To virility, strength and excellence of physical organization is added energy in the males and beauty in the females, with their usual concomitants of successful undertakings and early marriages. Energy is nervous force or intensity which is said to be the secret of family distinction. Self-reliance, courage and straightforwardness are the breathings of persons happily so constituted. To be weak is to be miserable; deceit, hypocrisy, and intrigue are too often the resources of the feeble.

Honesty in its broader and deeper signification is the rarest virtue under the sun. The lantern of Diogenes, misunderstood as the cynicism of a sour philosopher, is in reality a symbol of the peering, longing search of man for the noblest work of God. Still this virtue is not so scarce as it may seem to common experience and observation. Away from the struggles of crowded populations, the competitions and tricks of trade, and the corrupting atmosphere of cities, hidden beneath the surface of human character, it exists in threads and veins, and sometimes shows itself in patines of bright gold. No very deep insight is requisite to recognize the same spiritual quality in the payment of a penny fare [p. 271]; the selling of a cow [p. 491], the fidelity of art to truth and nature [p. 477] and in the "honest method" of that sublime argument, "The Freedom of the Will" [p. 383]. Said the clerk of a large Connecticut town to the writer: "The Tuttles are honest; they give good measure." It has seemed to us that this virtue has been largely developed in this race. Under favorable circumstances, now fast giving way before the march of human progress, and the changing conditions of social life, this quality has been handed down in some lines from father to son for many generations, until it has ceased to be a virtue by becoming a second nature.

It is surprising to note how many families owe their collected or their published records, wholly or in large part, to persons of Tuttle lineage or affinity. Of these are the Ddwights, the Falwards, the Stronges, the Wetmores, the Chauncyes, the Townsends, the Dawsons, the Trowbridges, the Cogbills, the Hughes, the Atwaters, the Reads, the Seymours, the Fowlers, the Bronsons, the Days, the Dickermans, the Notts, the Doolittles, the Yales, the Woleotts, the Bidwells, the Andrews, the Harts, the Mulfords, the Mansfields, the Todds, the Humphreys, the Burrs, and perhaps others that we cannot now recall, suggestive of a paraphrase to Fuller's saying that "in other countries men are made Heralds, but in Wales they are born Heralds."

Not to particularize further, it may be as well to give a general description of the Welsh character as a summary of what we desire to say on this point. Devonshire (the source of the New England Tuttles) is more Welsh than Wales itself in the distinctive peculiarities of its people. The statistics of crime in Great Britain show that one Welshman to ten English and fifteen Irish are convicted of crime. They are strongly emotional, poetical and religious. "The Welsh nature," says Prof. Green in his History of the English People, "is steeped in poetry." It appears in the national festival of the Eisteddfod, and in a romantic literature which has leavened the imagination of Western Europe. In the old time, "in every house, strangers who arrived in the morning were entertained till even-tide with the talk of maidens and the music of the harp." "They are a nation of singers. Almost everyone sings. In their own country (Wales) they are born Calvinists. In foreign lands they maintain their homogeneity as tenaciously as Jews. The Welsh miners of Pennsylvania hold annual musical contests, in which harmonies are heard that might astonish some people who imagine that the only light of their sunless toil is the miner's lamp. The brief summary of Miss Blakeman in her History of Susquehanna Co. is as follows: "They, the Welsh people of that county, are very respectable and well to do, religious, musical, all readers, many teachers and college graduates, no Roman Catholics, emotional, poetical, practical, stable, temperate, industrious and honest."

Now the question arises, that inasmuch as such "characteristics" are common more or less to all families, how can they be ascribed to one ancestor more than another in any given case? We answer, let us suppose that all the families in which the children of William Tuttle or his more remote descendants married were written up. We should then have a basis for comparison. If it were found on such comparison that the branches of such families as were of Tuttle descent exhibited more of these characteristics, or exhibited them more decidedly or more generally than those branches of such families as were not of Tuttle descent, then it seems to us a fair inference that such characteristics were inherited from or through the Tuttle ancestor. Now so far as we have the material for comparison, in the published genealogies of the Wells, Chamaeys, Edwards, Dwights, Trowbridges and others, likenesses do appear in the branches of Tuttle descent that are not found to the same extent in the others. And the inference derived from such likeness is strengthened by apparent diversities and contrasts between the Tuttle branches and the others. We do not intend to pursue the comparison; we merely suggest it as furnishing ground for a reasonable probability, and as the foundation in part of our own conclusion in regard to the above inquiry, deduced from a vast array of facts that have come under our observation in the compilation of this work. Our conclusion is that the characteristics referred to, are more clearly and decidedly traceable to the Tuttle stock than to any other.

It is plain that somewhere along the ancestral lines of this strain of blood a remarkable energy has been infused that has shown itself in every form of human activity and achievement. In theology it produced an Edwards; among educators a Dwight and a Woolsey; in art, a Kensett; in literature, a Peter Parley. It learned all languages in the sweat and grime of the blacksmith's forge, in Burritt. It marched to the sea with Sherman. It wrote histories with the half-blind eyes of Prescott. The books it has written would fill a large library. Its memorial windows and tablets are seen where ever genius and piety are so recognized; and in perhaps more than one instance it has changed the spirit of a weak and helpless woman as in "Chloe Lankton, bedridden, and pain-racked for many a long and weary year, into something so sublime and beautiful in spiritual strength and grace, as almost to revive our old faith in the reality of heavenly winged visitants." We do not pretend to account for it. The history of families in this respect is analogous on a small scale and within narrow limits to that of nations; for instance, a little knot of men on the banks of the Tiber, energised from some unknown or unseen source, build Rome, and all men became Romans. This energy is called patriotism or love of country. It was an intense and entire devotion to one idea. Those who were absorbed in it were elevated, expanded, strengthened, renewed by it as by a divine afflatus, and the Roman citizen became the type of a nobler manhood than the world had yet seen. It was a new birth. So the religious disposition being heritable and cumulative, may become as pure and absorbing in families as Roman patriotism was in its best days, and far more powerful in its formative and in its active influences. The world is not only governed by ideas but it is shaped by them.

A remarkable feature in our family history, as it would be in any other, is the branch of Elizabeth. It is an interesting genealogical study. Both the parents were of the same Welsh race. There is evidence that the mother had the nervous, sensitive and excitable temperament of genius. Richard Edwards, being an only child, inherited ample means and gave his children the best education the country afforded. To educate is to bring out, and to train, it cannot create talents or character. The ministerial profession was then almost the only field for the employment of able and educated men. So all things conspired to favor the natural bent of their son Timothy. The process was continued, and in the next generation reached its highest development in his son Jonathan. From the very beginning this branch has been noted for its high regard for education, its scholarly culture, and its religious disposition. It is said to include a larger number of eminent persons than have sprung from any other one of the New England founders. It is wonderful, says a late writer, how much of the grace and culture of American society has sprung from this root. The same pursuits continued generation after generation in the same families, originally set apart by nature for a chosen work, has resulted in a heritage of confirmed aptitudes, enlarged natural capacities, delicacy and refinement of physical organization, manners, sentiments and tastes; a sort of "Brahmin Caste in New England," as Dr. Holmes put it, of which the Edwards family form a considerable proportion, and in which it holds a high rank. The same is true, perhaps, to an equal extent of the branch of Hannah. In most of the others the conditions were not so favorable, and the natural tendencies were more or less overlaid, checked or diverted at the outset by the hard necessities incident to life in a new country. They are therefore all the more striking when they do appear as showing the force of the original bent in the face of adverse antecedents and circumstances.

Parton, in his Life of Aaron Burr, notices the singular predominance of the feminine element in this stock. Of the seven children of Richard Edwards by the Tuttle mother, six were girls. Of the eleven children of his son, Timothy Edwards, ten were girls. Of the eleven children of his son, Jonathan, eight were girls. The order of nature as to the numerical equality of the sexes were subverted by some strong hereditary force. It was also manifested in a superior delicacy of organization. The phrenologist tells us, says Parton, that Burr had the temp-rament of a woman. The biographer of Major Winthrop speaks of "the warmly delicacy of his character." It seems evident enough that this and other peculiarities came from the Tuttle blood, for the six children of Richard Edwards, by his second wife, Mary Talcott, were all boys but one, and though they received the same advantages of education as the children of the Tuttle mother, they and their descendants did not manifest those peculiar traits and energies that have made the name of Edwards famous in New England, and when the Edwards family is named the posterity of the Tuttle mother is understandable.

We have called attention to this point on account of a remarkable claim that has been set up in favor of the Stoddards as the source of the excellencies of the Edwards race. It probably originated in the natural partiality of Mrs. Edwards for her father's family, when her son Jonathan became famous. It was tea-table gossip in East Windsor in her life-time, and came down as a tradition. Dr. Sereno E. Dwight found it there when inquiring among the old people for materials for his Life of Edwards, and put it in his book as a tradition. It was taken up, in the Stoddard Genealogy, and, if we remember, repeated in the second edition with the Downings admitted to a share of the honor. It appeared again in a book notice in the N. Y. Evening Post. In an essay and review in the New Englander, it was reiterated in still more decided terms, and finally the Rev. B. W. Dwight, whose estimable genealogical labors do honor to his Welsh heritage of blood, formulated in the following terms, and published it in his Dwight Genealogy:

"The children of Mary Edwards were widely noted for fine forms and features, which came (tradition says) from the Edwards lineage, and to them from the Stoddards. They (Timothy Edward's children) inherited their clear, fine, expressive features from their mother (Esther Stoddard), taking their physical and in a great degree their mental proportions from her. Her son Jonathan was nearly six feet high, and her ten daughters used sometimes to be spoken of as Mr. Edwards' sixty feet of daughters, exaggerated, though all were remarkably tall." Again, "The propelling force of the Dwights comes from the Edwards connection, also the personal beauty, tradition says, and the personal beauty comes to the Edwards from the Stoddards."

This statement, though qualified by "tradition says," has been largely accepted as authoritative, the qualification being overlooked or disregarded. As a worthless tradition not only without foundation in fact, but as contradicted by fact and inference, as we will try presently to show, it would not be noticed here but for the reason that it has been received with credit by many who usually require a reason for their faith, and has caused us some embarrassment and disappointment. If the tradition is true then we are committing a sort of larceny in placing the Edwards in our record. If it is not true then it is our duty to reclaim and recover if possible the stolen goods.

In offering our objections to the conclusions involved in the statement of Dr. Dwight we must not be understood as intending any disparagement of the Stoddard family, or of the mother of Jonathan Edwards, though comparisons have been made, not in the best taste and unwisely as we think between the father and mother of that eminent man. The mother of Edwards may have been a "very smart" and a very beautiful woman, but apart from the tradition, we have and can have no positive knowledge of the "mental proportions, the propelling force or the personal beauty" which her daughters are presumptively said to have inherited largely from her. While as to the father, his sixty years of ministerial life and labor afford abundant means of judging. Nor can we overlook the opinion of President Chauncy who said that he had read all the writings of the Rev. Solomon Stoddard (father of Mrs. Edwards) and thought that his abilities had been "much overrated."

The real question, however, is not one of smartness or comparative ability, but of likeness, or of kind. Not how great or how much, but of what nature. Are there such similarities or idiosyncracies as to justify the Stoddard claim? We think not. The Stoddards are English. The Edwards are Welsh. A distinction that centuries of contact and intercourse between the two races living under a common government have not been able to efface.

Of the Downings we know very little, but can safely say that Edwards was extremely unlike Sir George. But let us look at the matter a little more closely as to resemblances.

"A pious disposition," says Galton, "is certainly inherited."

"When a boy," says Jonathan Edwards, "I was exercised and concerned about my soul and was abundant in religious duties." Sarah Pierpont, afterwards his wife, became truly pious when not more than five years of age.

The mother of Edwards, strange to say, did not join the church nor make profession of religion until she was forty-four years of age; and this though the daughter of one clergyman, the wife of another, and living in an era and in a community of general church membership. In fact, the material influence usually so strong in shaping and directing the plastic mind of childhood, seems to have been to some extent inoperative in the family of Timothy Edwards, the father himself assuming the instruction and mental training of the children, and in his absence, Jonathan and the younger girls reciting to their elder sisters. So far then we may assert that wherever their mental proportions may have come from, their religious tendencies and mental training plainly did not come from their mother.

If we go back another generation to Rev. Solomon Stoddard we find incongruities and contrasts still more marked and decided. He maintained that the Lord's supper is a converting ordinance, and that all baptised persons not scandalous in life may lawfully approach the table, though they know themselves to be destitute of true religion; and this dangerous innovation so fatal to the purity of the church, he did more than any one else to uphold and defend. To Edwards, so profoundly earnest and sincere, this doctrine and practice could not be otherwise than hateful. He opposed it strenuously and suffered bitter persecution, rather than connive at it. This difference was simply an outward sign of an inward spiritual incongruity. Every man is born a Calvinist, an Arminian or what not, and his nature more or less modified by circumstances and education is supreme, and stamps itself on his opinions, and expresses itself in his life and influence. The comparative effects of the preaching of Stoddard and of Edwards is a further illustration of this law. The sleepy religion, in baneful fellowship with the wide-awake worldliness of the Northampton church as Edwards found it, aroused and startled by his vehement spirit and his "awful words" shook off the unnatural alliance, broke up the hollow truce, ceased the unseemly masquerade, and grasping the old weapons of its warfare, resumed the conflict. Henceforth its victories were seen in numerous revivals. Such a power could not be confined to the narrow limits of a single parish. It went forth conquering and to conquer. It spread far and wide throughout New England, crossed the ocean into foreign lands and made itself felt to the farthest bounds of protestant Christendom. This was "the great awakening." We see here a marked resemblance to his father Edwards, as Jonathan himself declared, that he knew of no church in Western New England, excepting his own, in which revivals had been so frequent as in his father's. On the other hand, how wide the contrast to the ministerial character and influence of his grandfather Stoddard. They were akin, but not of a kind. Edwards was not an offshoot, but a graft on the Stoddard family tree. "By their fruits shall ye know them."

We cannot therefore be accused of presumption or of arrogance, in claiming for the Tuttle connection a part at least of the "nervous force" and the controlling religious tendencies of the Dwights and the Edwards, for such traits are as sharply defined and as traceable as any peculiarity of physical conformation. The question as to mental proportions and personal beauty is too vague for discussion. The fact itself, of the beauty of the Stoddards, seems like the other part of the statement to rest on tradition or on mere assumption. The comparatively late marriages of most of the daughters of Rev. Solomon Stoddard seems to point to a different conclusion. Anyway it is of no importance in this connection, for the terms "personal beauty" are so widely applicable as to include every type of the human race, and if we accept as a fact (of which, however, we can have no definite knowledge) Dr. Dwight's description of the style of beauty, "the clear, fine, expressive features" of Timothy Edwards' daughters, it points rather to the nervous and intellectual Welsh constitution, than to the easy going, brawny, full-fed and full-blown English.

According to the deductions of Galton and others from the study of genealogical facts and hereditary forces we may anticipate from the same strain of blood other minds and characters of exceptional power and dignity in the future whenever the necessary conditions shall exist. These conditions are partly under the control of man, and are summed up in the command to love God supremely and our neighbor as ourself, for, correlated to great intellectual vigor and emotional intensity of constitution are certain perils, the consciousness of which should be ever present as a warning against the promptings of ambition, selfishness and passion. Integrity, cheerfulness and moderation are great conservators; but the only sure safeguard is a sincere religious faith. Without this no high development of manhood or of womanhood, of strength or of beauty, can be attained nor long maintained.

The work is not as complete as we desired to make it. We had prepared a considerable list of books to be consulted, letters of inquiry to be written and record hunting tours to be made for the purpose of tracing lines that so far have eluded our search. We desired also to procure documentary proofs of the Devonshire origin of the New England Tuttles, their parentage, antecedents, relationships, pedigrees, etc. Of the fact of such origin itself, we feel assured from circumstantial evidence which seems as strong as such evidence ever can be. Some correspondence to this end was had with a learned member of the Harleian Society of London. He confirmed our views and stated the cost of getting copies of the needed records at $125 at the outside. After several vain attempts to get assistance we left the matter in abeyance, hoping that some enabling circumstance or state of things would "turn up" "in the sweet by and by." In the meantime we continued our efforts in other directions. No serious difficulty would be met, it is likely, in tracing the pedigree back several generations. Bernard Quaritch of London advertised the Genealogical Manuscripts of the Devonshire Tothills in his Catalogue of June 15, 1859. The family, or a branch of it, as early as 1591, had long been seated at Exeter, whose parish registers are among the earliest in the Kingdom, beginning 1535.

While these things remained undone we felt reluctant to publish, but finally, as the work had been long expected and impatiently waited for, as the materials already gathered and arranged were more than sufficient to fill a large octavo volume, as they had been twice in jeopardy by fire and might at any time be irretrievably lost by some unforeseen casualty, and mindful of the deepening shadows that gather around even the brightest pathway at our time of life, we came to the sudden conclusion, about the 1st of January, 1882, to print the book at once. We were enabled to do so by availing ourselves of an offer by Tuttle & Co. of Rutland, Vt., made many years since, to publish it at their own risk. Not a line or word of written contract has ever passed between us; but as we pen these closing paragraphs a nearly complete copy of the work lies before us and it is our simple duty to say that they have generously and nobly fulfilled their task. To our subscribers it will speak for itself. If we are spared, and the opportunity is given us, we propose to print, in due time, a small supplementary octavo, containing additions and corrections, and we shall be glad to receive the same from any source whatever. Communications directed to our present address will reach us wherever we may be.

In view of the popularity of our family gatherings and the advantages that accrue from combined or associated effort, we here propose a permanent organization of descendants, to take charge of the arrangements for future meetings and to further such objects as may properly come under their supervision.

We beg pardon for the poor sketch or notice of Chloe Lankton, whom we regard as one of the most beautiful and interesting characters in our book. While we were preparing a more adequate account, in the Summer of 1882, we were disabled for several weeks by a severe accident. When sufficiently recovered to resume work, an accumulation of unanswered letters and other pressing affairs absorbed our time and attention until it was too late for its introduction. In relation to other faults and shortcomings we ask not that they be overlooked, but as far as may be, corrected and remedied, and that our work, as a whole, may be accepted by those whom it chiefly concerns, in a spirit rather of thankfulness for whatever in it is worthy, than of censoriousness for its failures.

To those who have aided in gathering materials, credit is given in the body of the work. If any are omitted, it is through oversight for which I ask pardon. An especial acknowledgment is due, and is here cheerfully paid to Dea. Edmund Tuttle of West Meriden, Conn., who, in the early stages, helped me far more than anyone else in collecting what might be termed the contemporaneous genealogy of the family, by interviewing and corresponding with descendants, copying Bible records, grave-stone inscriptions, etc., in his own and adjoining towns. He also co-operated actively in getting up and arranging the first family meeting.* We are also indebted to Prof. Charles H.

*This was held in West Haven, Sept. 3, 1873—two centuries from the death of the founder, William Tuttle. It was largely attended, the number being estimated at about 1,500. A collection was taken up Farnam of Yale College, for valuable additions to the record of Dea. John Whitman's descendants.

For the fine McClellan portraits we are indebted to the McClellan brothers; to the generosity of Mrs. and the Misses Strickland, for that of Elizur Burritt; for that of William Tuttle, and in part for that of Pres. Tuttle, to J. N. Tuttle, Esq., of Newark, N. J.; to Hon. Payne Pettibone, for that portrait; to A. A. Marks, for his picture, and to the family of Hon. Hiland Hall for the fine engraving of himself.

And now, grateful for the courtesy with which, almost without exception, my inquiries have been received and answered, and retaining very pleasant memories of personal interviews, hospitalities and epistolary favors, I lay down, at least for a time, with a sense of relief, my arduous, though self-imposed and gratuitous task.

G. F. T.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Oct., 1883.

to defray the incidental expenses of the committee. This it did fully and something over, as we are informed, but we are not able to present figures, having had nothing to do with that part of the matter.

The second meeting was held in September, 1874, at Railroad Grove, in West Haven, and was even more numerously attended than the first. A large clam-bake was served up, to pay for which, voluntary contributions were taken, amounting, with subsequent collections, to nearly $200, as we were informed on the best authority. It seems to have been a very expensive and a very unsatisfactory affair all round.

In February, of the present year (1883) Mr. S. G. Davidson of Bethany, Conn., took the initiative for a third meeting, which was held at High Rock Grove, on the Naugatuck R. R., Aug. 15, 1882. Four passenger cars, chartered by Mr. Davidson to convey the people from New Haven, were all filled to overflowing, and two more cars were added to the train by the R. R. Company, which were also filled. By chartering the cars 50 cents was saved to each passenger, the regular excursion fare being 75 cents. There were no general expenses to provide for, the use of the grove being given by the R. R. Co. and the programmes being furnished by our publishers—Tuttle & Co. of Rutland. Thanks are due to Mr. Davidson for his successful management of the affair.

I refer to these money matters because many persons find it difficult to conceive how a man in his right mind can voluntarily assume such a task as I have partly accomplished, without a prospect of a hope of pecuniary recompense. To such persons all self-sacrifice is a mystery, if it is not a folly. It is my duty to say in self-defense, that in this connection I have not received a dollar excepting in the instances named below; not that I should be blameworthy if I had, considering that I have spent in this work upwards of $25 for postage stamps and stationery alone, but the truth should be known. Except for the purpose of tracing the English pedigree I have never asked for such aid, and in the earlier stages would have declined it had it been offered, determined that this lab' r should be free, even in appearance, from the taint of Mammon-worship. Latterly, however, my available resources have been much crippled, and I should have been glad, for the book's sake, of more help. At different times during the last fourteen years I have received (all unasked) $25 from the late Samuel B. Tuttle of Goshen, Conn., $10 from the late H. B. Tuttle of Cleveland, O., $5 from the late Daniel Tuttle then of Burnside, Conn., and $1 from David Tuttle of Springdale, Pa., $5 from W. T. Rigby, Esq., of Clear Water, Mich., and the same amount from Hon. Payne Pettibone of Wyoming, Pa., in all $51. To this should be added the gift from Thomas R. Trowbridge, Esq., of New Haven, of the Trowbridge Genealogy; from Joseph N. Tuttle, Esq., of Newark, N. J., the Newark Centennial; from Hon. Payne Pettibone, of the Wyoming Censuses; from Hon. Hiland Hall of North Bennington, Vt., his own History of Vermont and several pamphlets; from A. Bronson Alcott of Concord, his New England Note, from Mrs. Strickland and the Misses Strickland of New Britain, Conn., The Authors Memorial, The Hart General, and the History of New Haven, from Rev. E. E. Atwater of New Haven, the Atwater Genealogy; from Dea. Edmund Tuttle, the Hiland pamphlet; from Capt. Charles H. Townsend, the Townsend Genealogy and several pamphlets; from Pres. Tuttle of Wabash College, the Life of William Tuttle, from Rev. Samuel Orcutt, the History of Wolcott, and from A. W. Bruen, Esq., two copies of the American reprint of the Life of John Bruen, all of which were gratefully received.

ABBREVIATIONS.—b., born; bap., baptized; d., died; m., married; wf., wife; wid., widow; f., father; s., son; dau., daughter; cous., cousin; sis., sister; bro., brother; mo., mother; gr. dau., granddaughter; gr. s., grandson; unm., unmarried; chil., children; chh., church; s. i., sans issue, or without children; desc., descendant; res., residence or resided; rem., removed; bur., buried; rt., right; conv., conveyed; est., estate.

When the name of a town or locality is repeated in the same paragraph the initial letter only is used.

Other abbreviations, if not such as are in common use, will be understood in connection with the context.

ARRANGEMENT.—The general arrangement is in lines—all the descendants of the eldest child being given first, followed by the next eldest and so on. This might be termed the vertical plan, in distinction to the arrangement by generations, or horizontally in strata or layers of generations. The lineal or vertical method was found the most convenient in the actual work of compilation, besides possessing other advantages, such as economy of space, less repetition and greater facility of tracing descent. The arrangement by generations involves the necessity of turning over the leaves of the whole book to trace any given line, while by the lineal plan every line is comprised within the compass of a few consecutive pages. It is, perhaps, not assuming too much to call the lineal the natural arrangement.

To reduce repetition and the scattering of families to the minimum, the final paragraphs in the record of a line are made to include as much as possible without confusion or overtaxing the attention. The clear and open arrangement by offsets is the best for this purpose; but after setting up sixteen pages in this way it was found impracticable on account of space. Instead of indicating the children, grandchildren, etc., by offsets, it is done more compactly by varying the type—names of children in Roman; grandchildren in SMALL CAPITALS; great-grand-children in italics; great-great-grand-children by reversion to the common type, and great-great-great-grand children by enclosing their numbers in parentheses. Example, p. 176:

37. Caleb Tuttle had:

I. Sarah, (record fully given, p. 177).

II. Caleb, " " "

III. Thomas. (As his record would be so long as to disrupt the list of Caleb's children, and too involved in itself, it is dropped, to be taken up on the next page under the number 373.)

IV. James, record fully given.

V. Enos, had:

1, Deborah, m. John Bradley and had:

1, Alathia, 2, John.

3, MARY, 4, ESTHER, 5, PHEBE, m. Elijah Osborn and had:

1, Eli, 2, Enos.

It will be seen by referring to the text that the children and grand-children of Enos follow in the same consecutive order as in the example. This is the key to the whole arrangement.

NUMBERING.—The system was devised by Rev. Dr. John E. Todd [p. 90], and is here used, by his permission, for the first time in any publication. It was adopted by the compiler as the simplest and best known to him. It obviates the cumbersome serials hitherto deemed essential, and each number serves the purpose not only of identification, but is also a genealogical history of the person to whose name it is attached. Example—On page 1, John Tuttle is the first child of William; his number is 1 throughout the genealogy. On the same page is a list of his children, of whom Samuel was the 2d; this number, placed on the right of his father's number, is 13. On pages 24 and 25 are Samuel's children, of whom the 6th is Josiah, which makes his number 136. On page 3d are Josiah's children, of whom the 4th is Jehiel; his number is 1364. On page 37 are Jehiel's children, of whom the 1st is Isaiah, whose numbering is 13641. In recapitulation we have:

- |        |         |                       |
|--------|---------|-----------------------|
| 1.     | John,   | 1st child of William. |
| 13.    | Samuel, | 3d " John.            |
| 136.   | Josiah, | 6th " Samuel.         |
| 1364.  | Jehiel, | 4th " Josiah.         |
| 13641. | Isaiah, | 1st " Jehiel.         |

That is to say: Isaiah Tuttle was the 1st child of the 4th child of the 6th child of the 3d child of the 1st child of William Tuttle, as represented by the number 13641 at the left of his name. The same plan is pursued throughout, whether the line of descent is through male progenitors, as in the above instance, or female, or made up of both. When the number of children exceeds 9 the two figures composing the number are enclosed between two periods, as on page 501, Lucius Tuttle, No. 923.19., being the 10th child of Elyraim, 923.

The numbering of each genealogy forms a separate system by itself, having no connection with the rest.

The numbers in brackets, with p. refer to the page. Other numbers in brackets refer to the branch in which related matter may be found, as [1], branch of John; [2], branch of Hannah, etc.

A slight mistake was made by the draftsman in the drawing of the Tothill Arms. The crest, instead of resting on the shield, should be raised above it and separated by a slight interval.

In regard to dates, the difference between the old and the new style is now so generally understood as to need no explanation. The dates prior to 1752 are old style, for the most part.

Names and surnames, their origin and signification, have been the subject of much speculation and research. In early times an individual had but one name, and that probably a word descriptive of some personal peculiarity, as Long, Short, White, Black, etc. As population increased, the requirements for new and distinctive names multiplied, and occupations, trades, natural objects and almost everything else, have been pressed into the service. For the most part these are sufficiently indicative of their origin to enable any one to classify under appropriate heads a large proportion of all the surnames he has ever seen or can remember.

The primitive custom of adding the father's name to the son's, by way of distinction, continued among the Welsh long after surnames had become general among the commonalty of the rest of Britain, and so it happened that the common Christian names of Edward, William, Robert, Richard, etc., enter so largely into the family nomenclature of that people. They also extended it so as to include more or less of their pedigree or paternal lineage—a custom which Fuller illustrates in his quaint and humorous style as follows: "Thomas ap. William—ap. Thomas—ap. Richard—ap. Bewell—ap. Evan Vaughn, Esq., was born of ancient and worshipful parentage at Morton, in Flintshire in the reign of Henry VIII, (1509-1547). This gentleman, being called at the panel of the jury by the aforesaid names, and many more, was advised by the judge for brevity's sake to contract his name. So he called himself Morton."

This example was followed by other gentry of Wales, who, leaving their pedigree at home, carry only one surname abroad with them, whereby much time, especially in winter when the days are short, is saved for other employment."

The higher ranks were the first to adopt surnames. In France, about the end of the tenth century, the barons began the custom by taking the names of their estates, and this is the general origin of family names among the nobility of Europe. The oldest surnames in England are the names of places in Normandy. Surnames so derived are classed as "Place Names."

Localities named Tothill or Tuthill are still numerous in Great Britain. A late writer in the London Notes and Queries says: "I wonder how many Tothills are now left in England? Tuthill, near Thetford, Norfolk Co., has been so called from the time of the great battle there between Edward the Martyr and the Danes, A. D. 871.

Toothill, also called Beacon Hill, near Caernarvon Castle.

Tothill or Tothill Fields, a large tract on the south-west side of Westminster. It comprised the land between Tothill street, Pimlico and the river Thames. "An uncertain boundary," says Jeremy Bentham. It adjoined Westminster Abbey and was once within the limits of the sanctuary of that house. Stow says: "From the entry into Totehill field, Tutte street is called Petty France."

In Nichol's account of receiving the Queen in the College Church of Westminster on the first day of Parliament, Oct. 13, 1597, it is referred to as follows: "Toothill street, lying in the west part of the City, taketh name of a hill near it, which is called Tothill, in the great field near the street."—Progresses of Queen Elizabeth. In an ancient lease it is called Toothill. Often named by Stow in his Survey of London, under the varying forms of Tothill, Toothill and Tutte. In 1248, Stow says Henry I considered the expediency of granting a fifteen day's annual fair to the Abbot of Westminster, to be held at Tuthill or Tothill (now Tothill Fields) during which time all trade should cease within the city. Again, he says: "In the time of Edward I, (1272-1307) a freshet in the Thames River overflowed at Tothill as Matthew of Westminster reporteth."

In time of Henry III it was possessed as a manor by John Maunsel, a priest and King's Counsel, who afterwards became Lord Chancellor of England. Here he entertained (1256) the King and Queen of England, the King and Queen of Scotland, Prince Edward (afterward Edward I.) and a great number of the nobility, knights and bishops. The house not being large enough large tents were used.

On the 25th of Aug., 1651, the London and Westminster trained bands drew out into Tuttle's Fields, in all about 14,000. The Speaker and divers members of Parliament went there to see them.

At Tutbury in Stafford Co. are the ruins of a castle built by one of the Kings of Mercia, and re-built by John of Gaunt, in which Mary, Queen of Scots, was confined 1569-70, and again, 1584-86. There is also a Norman church or Priory, founded in 1070.

Totnes is the most ancient town in the kingdom. It stands on the river Dart, in Devon, and consists principally of one long street; some of the houses having piazzes, while the upper stories project considerably over the lower. The Castle, the keep of which is still in tolerable preservation, is a large, circular, turreted building, standing on an immense artificial mound, from which the town and castle derive their name.

Toothill in Yorkshire is a remarkable round topt hill, near which there lived a flourishing family nearly seven hundred years ago, the first of whom was Richard de Toothill, who took his surname from the name of this place. It is plain that other families, widely separated in point of locality and in ethnological derivation—Saxon, Celts or Norman, might, under similar circumstances, assume the same name, and as a matter of history, it does appear as a surname at a very early date in different parts of the country.

The first name on the roll of Battle Abbey (1066) is Toteles.

In 1230 John le Harpur de Wakefield and Eleanor, his wife, granted to Thomas de Touthill an annual rent of 8 s., which said Thomas had recovered in 1230 from William, son of Adam del Lee, in Old Linley (Halifax) Yorkshire.

In 1285 Isabel Scott and Alice, her daughter, granted lands in Rastriek (Yorkshire) to John de Toothill, whose descendants are afterwards called de Toteshill.

Of the same family was Hugh de Toteshill and Joan, his wife, who had grant of the Manor of Brighouse for their lives (1349) and John de Toteshill, their young son, after their decease.

They held lands in fee both in Fixby and Rastriek. The Manor of Toteshill is described as "Manerium de Toteshill, in Villa de Rastriek in 1332, and Sir Wm. de Beaumont granted to Thomas de Toteshill and Wm., his son, the moiety of the town of Fekisby (Fixby) with wards, marriages, etc."

In Devonshire "John Gifford held Acket of Alice de Toteshill in 1292."

In an old church at Redenhall, Norfolk Co., an inscription still exists: "In 1464 Richard Totyl or Tuthill was buried in this church."—Bloomfield.

Geoffry Warburton installed by Bishop Smith, rector of the parish of Stapleford (Herts), Aug. 7, 1499. He died, and George Washington installed, May 4, 1504. He resigned, and Robert Wyckin installed, Dec. 19, 1506. He resigned, and Wm. Toteshill installed by Bishop Atwater, Oct. 3, 1516. He died, and Wm. Felds succeeded, 1528.—Clutterbuck's History of Herts.

John Tuttebury, 2d, Baron of the English Exchequer, 1401.

The Norfolkshire Tuthills were seated at Saxlingham. William Tuthill of that manor married Susan, daughter of Peter Osborn of Chicklunds Abbey. Sir John Osborn, son of Sir Peter, was ancestor of Sir Danvers Osborn, Gov. of N. Y., 1751. Dorothy Osborn, who, says Macanley, "was besieged by as many lovers as were drawn to Belmont by the fame of Portia," among them Henry Cromwell, brother of Oliver, was granddaughter of Sir John. She married Sir Wm. Temple.

Bloomfield's History of Norfolk, Eng., describes the arms of Tuthill in the church at Newton, granted one of that name at Saxlingham. A Chevron Azure, 3 Crescents Argent.

An inscription in the Chancel of the same church, to "The loving wife of Roger Dallyson, son and heir apparent to William Dallyson of Laughton, Lincoln Co., Esq." She was daughter and heiress of William Tuthill of Newton, Gent, and Elizabeth his wife, and died Sept. 27, 1585, in the 39th year of her age. A brass plate (now lost) was inscribed, "Here lyeth the body of William Tuttell, gent, who endeth this life, 28th of March, 1591." He was born at Saxlingham and married the daughter of Mr. Woolsey of Norwich, by whom he had only one daughter, who married Roger Dallyson. "Arms of Tuthill and Woolsey: Or on a chevron, between 3 woodpecks, azure, 3 garbs of the field."

Of this family, shown by arms confirmed to him, was William Tuthill, Esq., of the Manor of Tuthill in Cambridgeshire, father of Francis, son and heir of William, who had son, Col. Robert Tothill, who commanded a regiment temp. Charles I., and for service rendered to that monarch had arms confirmed to him, 1640.—Three Crescents, &c.

The crest of the Norfolk Tuthills is A bee Volant in pale proper.—Book of Fam. Crests.

"In the History of Halifax by Rev. John Watson are some further details in relation to the Yorkshire branch, the first of whom was Richard de Toorthill, named above. He had sons Thomas, Matthew and Richard. Matthew had lands in the graveship of Hipperholm, in 1314, and was witness to a deed in 1337. He had John, who lived at Silkley, and who had Hugh (a witness to deeds in 1338) and John de Toothill, which Hugh had Thomas.

Thomas, eldest son of the first Richard, married Modesta. Thomas, above named, had by Modesta, William, Hugh, John and three daughters.

William de Tothill, son of Thomas, married Sibyl, daughter and heiress of Thomas de Fekisby. By this Sibyl he had Margaret, his daughter and heiress, who being in her minority at the time of her father's death, was in the custody or wardship of Earl Warren (John de Waren, Earl of Surrey).

This Margaret married Richard de Thornhill, in the time of Edward III, and carried all her father's estates into that family, where they still continue. And is said to have had the lands of Isabel, relict of John Scot, and her daughters. Now, it appears from several deeds, that about 1287, this Isabel and her daughters granted to one John de Toothill, certain lands in Rasterrick, called Lindlands; his name is omitted in the above pedigree, and it is no further certain who he was, than that Thomas was his heir, and that his name occurs in deeds before and after 1300. Most of these descents are proved from deeds belonging to Thomas Thornhill, Esq., of Fixby, in which William, son of Anabil de Rasterrick and Ellen, his wife, daughter of John Scot, with Alice, her sister, grant lands to Thomas de Tothill, for his life, and after his decease, to William, son of the said Thomas, and if William died without issue, to John, son of the said Thomas, and for default of issue in the said John, to all his sisters. As Hugh is not mentioned here, he probably was dead; but his existence is proved in 1331 by a deed wherein Thomas de Tothill grants to William de Tothill and his heirs, remainder to John, brother of said William, remainder to Hugh, brother of said John, remainder to sisters of said Hugh."—Hm. W. H. Tuthill's Address.

Arms of Tothill of Tothill: Or, on a Chevron Sable, three Crescents Argent.

Lysons, in his History of Cambridgeshire, says the Manor of Totchill or Totchall, in the parish of Swaffham Prior, was so called from an ancient family of that name, and is supposed to have passed to Co-heiresses in 1439. The coat of arms of the family upon a monument still remaining in one of the churches of the parish, is, "Argent, on a Chevron Azure, three Crescents, Argent."

From the similarity of arms it would appear that all these families were identical in origin.

The late Hon. W. H. Tuthill in the address quoted above, copies from a letter of Mrs. Louisa C. Tuttle [p. 166] in which she gives an account of a visit made by her husband to Sir George L. Tuthill, an eminent physician of London. The visit was for the purpose of making inquiries in relation to the Tuthills: "He was very politely received, and obtained from Sir George much interesting information with regard to the family. The tradition being referred to, that the American Tuthills originally came from Hingham, England, Sir George remarked: 'The same family as my own; we were from the City of Norwich, and our ancestors were originally from Hingham.' In the course of the conversation, family traits and peculiarities were spoken of, among others, the tendency of the hair to become grey at a comparatively early age, and Sir George referred to his own hair, which was almost white, although but little over forty years of age. The peculiar color of the eyes, so universal in the family, was mentioned: A gray, slightly dashed with hazel, which was at once corroborated, somewhat to the amusement as well as satisfaction of both, by observing that their own eyes were exactly alike. Other traits and resemblances were referred to and discussed by Sir George, who was ardently devoted to physiological investigations, and he expressed the decided conviction that our branch of the family and his own were from the same parent stem." Subsequent researches proved that such was the fact, for Sir George was descended in the sixth generation from John Tuthill, brother of Henry of Hingham, ancestor of the Long Island Tuthills. Sir George L. Tuthill was the associate of Sir Henry Halford, and the personal friend of Coleridge and Charles Lamb. He had a very high reputation, especially in his treatment of diseases of the brain. He was knighted in 1829, and died in 1836, leaving an only daughter.

The Tuthills of Ireland claim a still more ancient descent, and if the old Irish histories are to be credited, their ancestry commenced before the Christian era. "They all concur in stating them to be of Milesian descent, through the well-known sept or tribe of O'Toole (which seems to be but a variation of the name) and that their territory extended over a great portion of the beautiful hills and valleys in what is now known as the counties of Wicklow and Kildare.

They would appear to have been a warlike race, for when Ireland was overrun by the English, they heroically refused to submit to their rule, carrying on for many years an unequal contest against the armed hosts of a tyrannical invader.

Caunden, the father of English antiquaries, says, "The O'Tools and O'Birns obstinately withstand all law, and live in implacable enmity with the English."

It is noteworthy that he applies the name O'Toole and O'Pothill indiscriminately; for in again speaking of them, he says, "In 1311, Tassagard and Rathcante were invaded by the rapparies; namely, the O'Brennes and O'Tothills; the day after St. John Baptist's nativity; whereupon in the autumn soon after, a great army was raised in Leinster to defeat them, both in Glendelvy (Glendalough) and in other woody places."

"In 1331 O'Toole, the chieftain of the Irmil, at the head of a numerous band, plundered the castle and demesne of Talloght, (5½ miles S. W. by W. from Dublin) slew many of the Archbishop of Dublin's people, and defeated Sir Philip Britt and a body of Dublin men who had been sent against him."

"In 1398, O'Byne and O'Toole fought a battle against the English, in which Mortimer, Earl of March, and a vast number of English were slain."

McDermot, (the annotator of the "Annals of Ireland by the Four Masters,") says, "the territory of the O'Tuathails or O'Toole's chieftains of Hy Muireadhaigh, or Hy Murray, was quite an extensive domain, in the western part of Wicklow, comprising the greater portion of the present baronies of Talbotstown and Shilelagh, in that county, and extended as far as Almain, now the hill of Allen, in the county of Kildare, thus containing a great portion of the baronies of Naas, Kilcullen, Kilkea, and Moone, and Connell in that country."

The O'Tooles were in ancient times styled princes of Imaile, which appears to have been a name applied to their territory, and is still retained in the Glen of Imaile in Wicklow, where they had their chief residence; and they also had castles in Carnew, Castle Kevin, Castis Dermot and other places.

They took their name from Tuathal, one of the early kings of Ireland, from whom they derive their descent, and being one of the head families of Leinster, of the same race as the McMurrroughs, they are eligible to be kings of that province. The Celebrated St. Laurence O'Toole, Archbishop of Dublin, at the time of the English invasion, was son of Murtogh O'Toole, Prince of Imaile; and many distinguished chiefs of the name are mentioned in the course of these annals. They maintained their rank, and held large possessions down to the Elizabethan and Cromwellian wars, when their estates were confiscated, several of them were knighted at various periods, and Sir Charles O'Toole, an officer in King James' army, is said to have been the person who killed the Duke Schomberg at the battle of the Boyne, and several of them were distinguished officers in the Irish Brigades in the service of France and Spain.

The O'Tooles are still numerous in the counties of Wicklow, Dublin and Kildare.

The illustrious Prelate, thus referred to as St. Laurence O'Toole, and whom Camden calls Lawrence O'Thohill, is quite a distinguished character in Irish history. He was b. in A. D. 1105, his father, Murtogh O'Tuathail† or O'Toole, was the Chieftain of Hy

A history of the descendants of these five sisters would comprise the romance of English history for two hundred years.

Muray, and his mother a daughter of the kindred tribe of O'Byrne—his possessions comprised about half of the present county of Kildare, from which he was dispossessed by the English invaders and driven into the fastnesses of Wicklow.

Laurence became so celebrated for his learning and piety, that when he had attained his twenty fifth year, he was made Abbot of Glendalough, and upon the death of Gregory, the first Archbishop of Dublin, was by acclamation seated in the archiepiscopal chair, in which he continued until his death in 1189. He was so renowned for his sanctity, that in 1226 (forty-six years after his decease) he was canonized by Pope Honorius III, and thus, says his biographer, "a scion of the old Celtic race was placed on the calendar of Saints."

Lover, in his Patronymica Britannica, says that the O'Tooles or O'Tuoghalls claim an ancient Milesian descent from Cathaoir More, King of Leinster, of the Hermonian race, ancestor of Laogaire, the first Christian monarch of Ireland, contemporary with St. Patrick."

The early history of Ireland, before the introduction of Christianity is somewhat obscure, but according to Keating, O'Flaherty, and the old annalists, the Milesians were originally a colony from Scythia, near the Euxine and Caspian seas, now called the Crimea.

The Scythians, who were by the Roman writers designated Celts-Scythians, were the most ancient inhabitants of Europe after the deluge, and were descendants of Japhet. They formed settlements in Spain, and Milesius, one of their race, became King. Heremon, Heber and Ir, the sons of Milesius, came to Ireland with a large fleet and a powerful army, and after a sanguinary battle, became masters of the whole country, and according to Keating, gave to its throne 174 Kings; the most of whom (as well as the early Kings of Scotland) were descendants of the Hermonian Branch of this ancient race.

One of the most renowned of these Milesian Monarchs was Tuathal Teachtmhar, or Tuathal the acceptable. (He obtained the sobriquet of Teachtmhar, the welcome or acceptable, from his being the deliverer of the nation from the tyrants of a hated oligarchy.)

Tuathal is celebrated as one of the greatest of the Irish Kings, for his wisdom and valor. In the revolt of the Firbolgs he was forced to fly from the kingdom to North Britain, but returned A. D. 130, and after fighting 85 battles was successful in recovering the crown. During his reign, which lasted thirty years, he reformed the abuses and corruptions that had prevailed in public affairs and introduced in Ireland a state of plenty and public tranquillity never known in it before.

Warren naïvely says, "It must be observed that until this reign, few or none of the ancient Irish would submit to any trade or manual labor, lest they should degrade their origin, or bring a storm upon their families; but when they saw that by the order of this wise Monarch, the legislature took trade and manufactures under their special care and management, many of the Milesians condescended to follow some employment and to make themselves good for something beside cutting one another's throats."

This good King was slain in battle by an usurper whose name is given as Mal or Mail, who reigned four years, when Feidlim, the son of Tuathal, avenged his father's death by slaying the usurper and regaining the crown.

Feidlim was, from his great love of justice, surnamed the Legislator. He not only gave excellent examples of equitable government in his own private conduct, but by causing wise and wholesome laws to be enacted, the people of Ireland became more humane, honest and contented than they ever were before. His just and useful administration continued for nine years, when (a somewhat unusual circumstance in those turbulent days,) he died a natural death, and was succeeded by his son Cathoir More or Cathir the Great, from whose youngest son, Fiacha Barceanda, the O'Tooles claim a lineal descent.

The connection, if any, between the Tuthill or Tothill family of England and that of the same name in Ireland, is perhaps at this time unknown, at any rate, I have never yet been able to obtain any documentary proof that our English ancestors were originally from Ireland, although the conjecture is a plausible one.

The celebrated Edmund Spencer, who resided a short time in Ireland, and who in 1596, wrote his "View of the state of Ireland," says the O'Tooles are so called from the old British word Tol, i. e. a Hill country. And the idea of a common origin has some support from the descriptions and illustrations of Heraldry. The Coat of Arms of the O'Tooles of Ireland being a lion passant, argent. The Totyls of Wales, a lion rampant, sable. The Tothills of Devonshire a lion passant, sable. The Totellolls of Yorkshire bearing as a crest, a lion standant, gules; and the Tuthills of Cambridgeshire and Harsfolkshire the like crest of a lion standant, gules, ducally crowned and collared and lined, or.

The lion, one of the emblems of the highest nobility, being the conspicuous bearing of the families, would indicate a common descent.

Nor is an emigration of some of the tribe of the O'Tooles to England, after the confiscation of their estates, at all improbable. It is well known that during the days of Wallace and Bruce, large numbers of the native Irish acted as auxiliaries to the English in the wars between that nation and Scotland—and it is not an improbable surmise that many of them after their term of service expired, preferred to remain and make their homes in England, there to live in peace and security, instead of returning to their native country, devastated by civil war and cursed by dissensions, anarchy and strife.

In Ripper's Fadra will be found a mandate issued to David O'Tothill setting forth that the King (Edward II.) was about to march against his Scottish rebels, and requiring him, (as the chief of his tribe,) the attendance of all the force he could muster commanded by himself in person or by some nobleman of his race."—Hon. Wm. H. Pitt's address.

From the foregoing it seems clear that this family name, in all its forms, is derived from those eminences, natural and artificial, once so common in Great Britain, called Tothills; and that various families not traceably related to each other bear a common patronymic by adoption of the place name of their residence.

The origin and meaning of the word Tot or Tut has been the subject of much discussion and speculation among the English scholars and antiquaries, and various theories had been advanced in relation to it; but, without presuming to pass judgment on the question, it seems to us that none of them is so satisfactory as that which we find in Allies' Antiquities and Folklore of Worcestershire, pp. 223, 291, 317. This essay is so clear, thorough and convincing that for ourselves we feel that no more need be said. At this stage of the world's history it is, generally speaking, a long way back to the beginning of anything, and the Tatlike name is no exception to the rule. We copy the article entire:

PLACES AND ETYMOLOGY OF TOTHILL.

"Tutnall, Tetnal or Tortendall (alias Oakfield), a hill in the Parish of Claines, lies about three miles north of Worcester, and had communication by signals with the camp at Onibersley, Ostorius' supposed fort, and with Embury Hill, Toorthill in Laxbridge, Toot-hill, Treshill or Toothill farm in Wamdon; Tutnal, Tutual Mount and Taina Place in Tardelbig; Touthill (Tothchel) Cross, Tutsill Common Field, and Little Tutsill in Eldersfield; Tutbach in Lower Sapey, all in Worcestershire. Mythe Toot or Tute near Tewkesbury in Gloucestershire; Tatnall Bridge near Talton in Herefordshire, and Tatenhill and Tutbury in Staffordshire. Domesday Book notices Tothelel in Bloomsgrove, Teotintune in Worcestershire, Tetelerie; Titelala and Tatenhall in Staffordshire. Tetes-thorpe in Herefordshire, Tut-nelle in Somersetshire, Totesham in Middlesex, Totaled in York, Totale in York and Lincoln, Totenais and Totescombe in Devon."

Dr. Thomas in his survey of Worcester cathedral, etc., notices Teottington, Tetintun, Taterington, and states that King Offa gave five manors of land at Teottington to the Monastery at Brewood.

There is a difference of opinion as to the etymology of the names of these places. Some say it comes from the Saxon word "teutan," to look out, and others from the Celtic god, Teutates. Bryant derives the name of such round hills from Tith, and says when towns were situated on eminences fashioned thus round, they were by the Amorians (i. e. descendants of Ham) called Tith, which answers to תִּתְ in Hebrew, and to τίτων and τίτωος in Greek; that they were particularly sacred to Ornis and Osiris, the deities of light, who by the Grecians were represented under the title of Apollo. That these mounts were not only in Greece, but in Egypt, Syria, and most parts of the world; that they were generally formed by art, being comprised of earth raised very high, which was sloped gradually and with great exactness, and the top of all was crowned with a high tower.

Although the Anglo Saxons may have used such hills as lookout stations, still many of them may have been of ancient British origin and derivation, and the fact that all of the above mentioned hills or places in Worcestershire are either close to or were upon the sides of roads appears to favor the opinion that they were sacred to the Celtic Teutates, who was the guide over the hills and trackways.

Bryant says Theuth, Thoth, Taut, Tautes, are the same, little diversified, and belonging to the chief God of Egypt. That Eusebius speaks of him as the same as Hermes. That from Theuth the Greeks formed ΘΗΟΣ which with that nation was the most general name of the Deity. That it was the same Deity which the Germans and Celtae worshiped under the name Theut, Ait or Thentates, whose sacrifice were very cruel, as we learn from Lucan.

The following interesting passage upon the subject is extracted from the Worcestershire Miscellany: "Cesar, in his remarks upon the religion of Britain, observes that Mercury was the chief object of popular veneration; that there were many images of him, and that he stands as a guide over the hills and trackways (see Kemble's Saxon in England, p. 339, and as to the identity of this Mercury with Woden), not that the Roman Mercury was actually worshiped by that name before Cesar arrived in Britain, but stones being sacred to Mercury among the Greeks and Romans, and Caesar perceiving the artificial mounds surrounded by a stone or Similarum were particularly venerated, he hence concluded that Mercury was the god held in particular esteem. Now Mr. Bowles says the Egyptian Thoth (Thoth, says Bishop Cumberland, was the son of Misraim, the son of Ham, and grandson of Noah), Thot or Tot, the Phoenician Taatus or Taute, the Grecian Hermes, the Roman Mercury, the Tantates of the Celts (so called by Lucan from the Celtic Da Taith), Deus Taatus, are universally admitted to be the same. (But the Gentleman's Magazine, Jan., 1829, pp. 45, 46, where doubts are expressed as to the identity of the Egyptian Thoth with Hermes or the Gaulish Mercurias Tentates, and arguing that Taat or Tantates was the Egyptian Hercules, a symbol of the sun.) A stone was the first ancient representative of Thoth, Taute or Tent (the Latinized Tentates of Lucan) which being placed on eminences, natural or artificial, and more especially near roads, were thence called Tothills or Tenthills, and in many instances in various parts of the kingdom are so called at present."

A writer, designated as Merlin, in the Gentleman's Magazine, March, 1829, says: "When the Cimmerian Druids migrated from Asia into Europe they carried with them their patriarchal traditions, their Chaldean lore and their Cadmean alphabet, together with that grand and characteristic badge of distinction, the name of Theu-tate. He further observes there is no language, ancient or modern, into which this name is so easily and naturally resolvable as the Cimbic or British, and that Thentate is nothing more nor less than Dhne-Tad, the universal parent or God the father." Merlin says "the druids cherished this revered offspring of patrimonial tradition, till obliged by the stern Romans to relinquish it for the gods of the conquerors." Mr. Bowles, too, observes: "It will not be denied that as the Celts worshiped Mercury, that is this Thoth, the druids secretly taught the immortality of the soul. The secret worship was of one infinite God, whose representative was the circle." Mr. Bowles also says Mercury's name in Celtic was Da Taith, from which Lucan calls him Teutates. According to my idea Thoth, Taute, Toute, Tat, Tet, Tey, are all derived from the same Celtic root, and were in names of places in England indication of some tumulus or conical hills dedicated to the great Celtic God, Taute or Mercury, when there were Ubique per Angliam plurima simulae, according to the testimony of Cesar.

The reviewer of Mr. Bowles' work, in the Gentleman's Magazine, Feb., 1829, p. 140, observes: "It is plain from Livy that Mercury Eρῶτος (or Kalis) was called among the Celts, Mercury Tentates and both these tumuli (referred to by Mr. Bowles) were on the sides of roads. Cesar proves the application, for he says of the Britons that they made Mercury Viarum atque itinerum ducem; hence the case concerning the Toothills is very satisfactorily made out."

The name of Tuttie is thus traced back to those natural or artificial mounds or hills in Britain, which two thousand years ago were sacred to a pagan worship, and thence through dim milleniums to the deified founder, Thorh.* Thot or Tot—of that ancient and vanished civilization which flourished on the banks of the Nile before the beginning of historic time. The fact is replete with associations and suggestions of the most interesting character, for however slender the thread that connects us with them, the connection is clear and unbroken, and like the small wire along which thought flies with the speed of light and unites the uttermost parts of the earth, this little word reaches back to distant generations and centuries and brings them near to us in thought. The meaning of the word Tothill is "The Hill of God." Such a name should be ennobling to its possessor, like that of Fine, which suggests the sacredness of the House of God, and whose motto is, "Bring nothing base to the Temple." "It is," says the London Notes and Queries, "a grand old name."

Many of its orthographic variations may be gathered from the preceding account. In early times uniformity in such matters was discarded, and the same person signed his name to the most important documents, as deeds, conveyances and wills, in divers ways. Even Richard Tothill, an intelligent and educated man and a good printer, seemed to have no rule or guide but caprice. "How many ways," says Hansard in his Typhographia, "did Richard Tothill spell his name?" And Stow, in his Survey of London, spells it in three different ways. The following is a partial summary of variations: Turhill, Tuttill, Tuttill, Tutoll, Tuthill, Tuttell, Tutle, Tortle, Tothill, Tottell, Tortle, Tothille, Totthall, Tothyll, Tothyl. The Irish Clan of O'Toole is also called O'Torhile and O'Tothill, indifferently, and the same name is indicated by Tuathail, Tuathal, O'Tothill, O'Tuoghall, O'Torhville, Tothill, Toythill, Totthill, Tothelle and Touthle.

For a while after the immigration the name appears in New England under different disguises. William of New Haven wrote it Tuttell and Tuttle, and perhaps in other ways. His wife wrote it Tutte. One of the sons signs his name Tutle, and in the early records it sometimes appears as Tountle. In the next generation or two it settled down to its present form in all the New England families, excepting among the descendants of Henry Tuthill of Uingham, who have generally adhered to the more correct orthography of Tuthill. That Tothill is the correct spelling appears from the history and derivation of the word, and is also implied as to the last syllable by the Crest of the Devon family, "On a hill." The change to its present form is no improvement, and is to be regretted. "It is a dreadful name to stranger ears." There is no magic in it. It may be a consolation to know that the letter T, which takes so prominent a part in its composition, occupying three of its six places, was once a letter of great dignity. The Roman Tribunes indicated their assent to the decrees of the Senate by subscribing the letter T. The Egyptians considered this letter as the symbol of life.

We should not feel satisfied to leave out of this account some mention of those grand monuments which for 35 centuries have stood as memorials of the name of Thoth.

He seems to have been the founder of the Egyptian Civilization. In the ancient mythology he is called the son of Jupiter, by Maie, for whom the month of May was named, and the first month of this Egyptian year was called Thoth, and began about our 20th of July. Thoth is the inventor of commerce, letters, music and the reckoning of time. He is the God of Wisdom; he records the final judgments and conducts the souls of men to their final rewards or punishments. He is represented as ibis-headed, a bird that preys on serpents, (ignorance and vice) and therefore sacred to the Egyptians. His wife is Ma-t, the daughter of the Sun. She is the Goddess of Truth, and is characterized by an ostrich feather—the emblem of truth—upon her head. These myths are part of a system of personifications, emblems and fables designed to teach the great religious ideas of Monotheism; the divine origin and future existence of the soul, the warfare of good and evil, and the final judgment for deeds done in the body.

It became the custom of the kings of Egypt of the 18th and 19th dynasties to compound their names with those of their gods, as Thotmes from Thoth, Rameses from Ra, the sun, &c. The 18th dynasty began, according to the most recent chronology, with Aahmes I, about 1700† B. C. and ended with the accession of Rameses, about 1400‡ B. C.§ This was the period of Egypt's greatest power and prosperity, and to it belong the paintings and papyri which have come down to modern times, and those great monuments which have excited the wonder and admiration of succeeding ages. It includes the entire period of Jewish history in Egypt from Joseph to that of Exodus.¶ The 2d king of this dynasty was Amenophis I, who resigned about 1656 B. C. The 3d king was Thotmes I, about 1633 B. C. He was a great warrior and marched his armies as far as the Euphrates. He excavated the great rock temple of Amunra at Thebes. His son Thotmes II, was the 4th king of this dynasty. He married his sister Hatchepu, and after his death she reigned alone until she associated a younger brother, Thotmes III., in the government, and after her death he reigned alone; in all 55 years. He was the 5th king of the 18th dynasty, and is styled Thotmes the Great. He flourished about 1600 B. C. He was perhaps the father of that maid of Egypt who took the infant Moses from the rushes. He was succeeded by his son Amenophis II, and his son Thotmes IV, was the next king; and to him is the monolith that now stands in the piazza of St. Peters. It was brought to Rome by Caligula and set up in the Vatican Circus, but afterwards removed to its present location. Amenophis III., son of Thotmes IV., built two temples at Thebes; also the great temple of El Uksur, and the vocal statue of Memnen and its fellow, still standing among the ruins of Thebes, and now known from recent discoveries to be his own statuary. He is supposed to be the Pharaoh of the Exodus.

The 2d king of the 19th dynasty was Sittif, and the 3d was Rameses II, "the great" the Sesostris of the Greeks, who flourished about 1333 B. C.

Thotmes III, of the 18th dynasty erected at On (Heliopolis) the loftiest obelisk now existing. It is 108 feet high. It was removed by Constantine the Great to Alexandria, and thence by his successor Constantius to Rome, where it now stands in front of the church of St. John Lateran. He also set up before the temple of Amen at Heliopolis, a pair of obelisks upon which were inscribed his legend; to which some two or three hundred years later, Rameses II, added two lateral columns. These obelisks remained where they were first erected until Augustus Cesar, Emperor of Rome, in the 8th year of his reign (23 years B. C.) removed them to Alexandria and set them up in front of a temple he founded called "The Cesarianum." In course of time one of them fell and was buried under the drifting sands of the desert. In 1877 the prostrate one was dug out, removed to London and set up on the Thames embankment. In 1879 its fellow was presented by the Khedive of Egypt to the city of New York, and in the fall of that year it was taken down and its removal commenced under the superintendence of Commander Gorringe of the U. S. N. In Feb., 1881, he successfully completed his task, and it now stands erect in the Central Park of New York city. (It was our privilege to witness this 3d erection.) The expense of removing it was about one hundred thousand dollars, which Wm. H. Vanderbilt is said to have defrayed. Exclusive of the foundation and pedestal it is sixty-nine and a half feet high.

The hieroglyphics on the four sides of the London Obelisk were translated by Samuel Birch, Esq., LL. D., D. C. L., F. S. A., Keeper of Oriental Antiquities in the British Museum. They are the same as those on the New York Monolith. The central lines recount the titles and attributes of Thotmes III. The side lines to Rameses II, are of the same import. One of the central lines will give an idea of all the rest: "The Horus, lord of the upper and lower country, the powerful bull; crowned in Uas or Thebes, the King of the north and south. Ramon Cheper, has made his monument to his father, Haremehu (Horus in the horizons) he has set up to him two great obelisks, capped with gold, at the first time of the festivals of thirty years, according to his wish he did it, the Son of the Sun Thotmes (III) type of types did it, beloved of Haremehu (Horus in the horizons) ever living."

Some remarkable discoveries have recently been made in Egypt about four miles east of Thebes. A gallery has been found cut in the face of an almost perpendicular mountain, ending in an almost inaccessible cave or well. The gallery is 250 feet long and the cave 36 feet deep. In the well were found some four thousand objects, among them thirty-six royal sarcophagi, with the inner cases and mummies intact, belonging to Pharaohs, queens, princes, princesses and high priests of the 17th, 18th, 19th and 21st dynasties. They include among others, Rameses I, and II, and Sittif I, of the 19th dynasty, and Ademes, Amenophis I., Thotmes I., II, and III., and Hatshepsu, sister of Thotmes III. Some of them have glass eyes and look quite life like.

TOTHILLS OF DEVON.

The first of this branch known to us is William Totyl. His name stands at the head of a pedigree taken from Meyrick's Hereditie Visitations of Wales, Vol. 1, p. 183, dated Oct. 24, 1591, and received from Ryehard Tottyll, whose arms, as described, are the same as in the frontispiece, excepting that the lion is rampant instead of passant, and is differenced with a mullet, denoting that he was the third son.

His arms are impaled with the arms of Grafton. From the above visitation, from Polwheles Devon, and from sundry English Co. Histories and other works we have gleaned the following accounts of this branch, which, though but a fragment, is sufficient to show the standing, character and associations of the family at the time of, and a hundred years antecedent to the settlement of New England. A copy of the pedigree in Tuckett's Devon, has been kindly forwarded to us by Ainsworth Spofford, Esq., Librarian of Congress.

William Totyl, called in the pedigree, Esq., of Devonshire, was bailiff in 1528; again in 1548; High Sheriff<sup>2</sup> of Devon in 1549, and Lord Mayor of Exeter in 1552. At this period Exeter was the political capital of the West of England, and second only to London in importance. The great manufacturing and commercial cities of Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, etc., were insignificant hamlets. In the time of Charles the 1st it contained about 10,000 inhabitants. Its venerable Cathedral was begun in the 13th century. It is a city of great antiquity—a Bishopric and the capital of Devonshire, which is one of the most beautiful counties in England, and one of the largest, being second only to Yorkshire in size. In regard to sheriffs, Fuller remarks: "The reader will not be disappointed at the many armless (i. e. lacking Coats of Arms) sheriffs of London. They were not so cognizable persons as the sheriffs of counties. The latter were men of known and grown estate, eminent for family." That he was eminent for family in another sense than that intended by Fuller appears in the fact that he had 36 children, though probably not all by one wife. In the pedigree his wife is called "Elizabeth Mathew of Vorcanwg," and she was doubtless the mother of Geoffrey, John, Robert and Richard, and perhaps of several more. She was daughter of Geoffry Mathew of Glamorganshire, which some Welsh genealogists have traced back to Gwaethwyl, Prince of Cardigan and Gwent, while others deduce it from Yorkelyne. Burke, in his Landed Gentry, says the name was of considerable distinction in Cornwall and Devon at an early date. Of this line was Sir David Mathew of Llandaff, "Great Standard Bearer," Admiral Thomas Mathew, M. P., Col. John Mathew, who took a leading part, under his relations on the maternal side, Sir Richard and Sir Bevil Granville in the civil war in the west of England, George Mathew, High Sheriff of Glamorganshire, 1592, who married, 1620, Elizabeth, Viscountess Thurles, mother of James, Duke of Ormond, and settled in Ireland, Tobias Mathew, Archbishop of York, and Cecil Mathew, married Baron Talbot and is represented by the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot.

<sup>2</sup>It has been observed of the Saxons, that when they divided the realm into provinces, called, in Saxon, Shires, and in Latin, Comitatus, i. e. Counties, they removed the government of them from the ancient custom of the Romans, from whom it was descended to them from their German ancestors, in conformity to which they constituted certain of their chieftains a preside over their Shires, which they called Ealdormen, or, in Latin, comites, or Countes. King Alfred, for more ready administration of justice, allowed the Earldom or Counts to make deputies who were called The Comites or I's Clerks, and in their own tongue, Sheriffs, i. e. the Shire-reeve from the Saxon word Grefa or Gerfa, i. e. free or -prefect or Steward to distribute justice to the people, in their provincial or county courts. Finally the Sheriff became the chief executive officer, for maintaining an attachment on the King. They were usually men of high rank and great power in the realm. In the reign of King Edward I, the election of Sheriff was granted to the people, before and since 1313 by the King, though Edward II continued to appoint Sheriffs for several counties. Elections grew so tumultuous that by statutes of Edward III, Henry VI and Henry VIII, the Chancellor, Treasurer, Pres. of King's Council, Chief Justices and Chief Baron are to make the election.—Hastel's Hist. of Kent Co.

Venerable trees adorn the grounds, and "the park beautiful in itself, with its little undulating hills and dales, commands extensive and varied prospects." On the deceas. of his dau. 2, Grace, b. 1605; d. Dec. 24, 1623; m. William Tothill of the Middle Temple, Esq., and had one child, Henry, b. 1623. About  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Exeter, close to the village of Exminster stands an old church in which a monument has this inscription: "This monument is erected to the memory of Grace, wife of William Tothill of the Middle Temple, Esq., who had issue Henry, and died the 24th of Feb., 1623, in the 18th year of her age, and both buried in this aisle. She being daughter of Henry Tothill of Peamore, then Sheriff of Devon, and Mary his wife.

If Grace could length of days thee give,
Or virtue could have made thee live,
If goodness could thee here have kept,
Or tears of friends which for thee wept;
Then hadst thou lived amongst us here,
To whom thy virtues made thee dear;
But thou a Sainte did'st Heaven aspire,
Whilst here on earth wee thee admire;
Then rest deere corps in mantle claye
Till Christ the raise the latter daye;
Thy years were few, thy glories being run,
When death did end thy life begun."

Under the effigy which is reclined as a pedestal:

"Speake Statue, tell her story,
Its grace inherits glory."

George Tothill, prob. descended from Jeffery, was Bailiff 1662, again in 1664, Lord Mayor of Exeter 1668, again in 1677. By mandate of the King made Alderman of Exeter 1687; next year William, Prince of Orange, landed at Torbay and advanced with his small army towards Exeter. The Prince had been informed that the people stood ready to receive him with acclamations of joy and that all the gentry of the west would join him at his landing. But the cruel disposition of the King James, and the recent atrocities of Kirk and Jeffreys, had filled the minds of the nobility and gentry with dread of the awful consequences of failure. One of the officers of the Prince who preceded with a few horsemen was put under arrest and confined by the authorities of Exeter. The next day Lord Mordaunt and Dr. Burnet, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury, arrived with four troops of horse and found the gate shut against them. The Lord Mayor assigned as a reason the obligation of his oath to the King. Lord Mordaunt ordered the Porter to open the gate on pain of death, and upon his refusal, says Jenkins in his Hist. of Exeter, "George Tuthill, Esq., one of the Aldermen, opened it and admitted the troops."

For several days scarcely any person of note came in. Of the magistrates of Exeter only Alderman Tuthill and one other at first declared in his favor. This appeared so unfavorable to the Prince that he began to doubt the success of his expedition and at one time proposed to reembark for Holland. But the spirit and firmness of Alderman Tuthill seem to have inspired the gentlemen of Devon and Somerset with courage for they soon began to come forward in great numbers and the revolution became an accomplished fact. Subsequently being largely engaged in mercantile business he met with very heavy losses at sea and became much reduced in circumstances, which owing to the knowledge of King William he gratefully awarded him a pension of £200 per annum. He is perhaps the Mr. Tothill referred to as the purchaser of Bagtor.*

9. Richard Tothill, described in the pedigree as one of the justices of the peace of Castile Gwys (Wiston in Pembrokeshire) and London; was a printer and stationer of London, where he resided for forty years at the sign of the Hand and Star, in Fleet street, near Temple Bar, during which period he printed 78 books, chiefly on law. His first license dated April 12, 1549, to print books on common law for seven years; renewed May 3, 1556, for seven years; renewed for life Jan. 12, 1558.

His first imprint bears date Oct. 1, 1551. His second, Oct. 1, 1552. "A Manifest Detection of the most Vile and Detestible Vice of Dice Playing." In 1552 he printed an abridgment of the "Chronicles of England," by Richard Grafton (his father-in-law). This edition contains somewhat in relation to the controversy between Grafton and Stow. Same year he printed "The Tragical History of Romeo and Juliet," a metrical paraphrase from the Italian of Bandello, translated by Arthur Brook, with Sonnets. (See Watton's History of English Poetry, Vol. III, p. 571.) In 1553, Grafton's Chronicles of England, containing 1398 pp., besides a table of the bailiffs, sheriffs and mayors. Grafton's Rebus on title page and under it, "imprinted by Henry Denham† for Richard Tottle and Henry Toye."

In 1570, Richard Tottle printed an Abridgment of the Chronicles, which contained a remarkable prologue against John Stow, who replied in 1573. In 1571 he printed a Treatise containing Tables and Rules, by R. Grafton. In 1579, in conjunction with Benneman, he printed "Stow's Chronicles."

In 1578 he was made Master of the Stationer's Company, and held the office for six years, and probably re-elect in 1581, for "lately having retired for the benefit of his health, the business of the company was sometime at a stand, as appears by an ordinance of the court of assistants, Sept. 30, 1589." After his retirement the London business was carried on by his son.

In 1583 he gave to the company for the relief of the poor, Tullie's offices in English and Latin, Moral Philosophy, Romeo and Julietta, Quintus Curtius in English, Mr. Dr. Wilson on Ursute, Two English Lovers, Songs and Sonnets by the Earl of Surrey. A book, "Diall of Princes," bearing his imprint, is in the Astor Library. The State library at Hartford also contains one of his imprints. Hansard's Typographia contains a drawing of his device of the "Hand and Star," and of his monogram and motto, of which the engraving below is a copy.

bought a fine estate near Amersham, in Bucks, called "Shardeloes," where "he had the honor of entertaining Queen Elizabeth." Hughson's Circuit of London says: "The old manor house of Shardeloes appears to have been the occasional residence of Queen Elizabeth." After the dec. of William Tothill, Shardeloes became the property of the Drakes by marriage of his daughter Joan Tothill to Francis Drake, and has continued to be the family seat down to our own time, for as late as 1836 Sir Trywhitt Drake, M. P., was of Shardeloes, and High Sheriff of Bucks. The house has been added to and changed in many respects. Among the pictures are a fine portrait of Queen Elizabeth and the Destruction of the Spanish Armada, in which Sir Francis Drake participated as Vice-Admiral with his relative, Sir John Hawkins, as Rear Admiral. The "Monument Room" has several Drake monuments, of which that to Montague Gerard Drake (1728) is very magnificent.

Sir John Denham,<sup>4</sup> Poet, was her nephew. It is said that Wm. Tothill of Shardeloes had 33 children, of whom were 1, Joan, and 2, Katharine, but may be confounded with his grandfather on this point.

A curious letter from one of this family, dated Liston, 1471, seems to impute inactivity to the reformers in his neighborhood. In 1227 there was a bloody affray between Oliver Dynham and the Canons. The Drakes of Ashe, in Devon, were a very distinguished family, of whom was John Drake, Esq., one of the Council at Plymouth, a member of the original company established by King James, 1602, for settling New England. We have gone thus largely into details in this account of the Devon Branch for the reason that all the circumstances point unmistakably to it as the source of the four Tuttle families who came over in 1635.

EMIGRATION TO NEW ENGLAND.

The circumstances which led to the colonization of New England are matters of history, and require only a brief allusion here. England was on the verge of a great civil war, the end and outcome of which no man could predict, but which would certainly bring widespread calamity, ruin, and death in its train. The establishment of the Plymouth Colony had pointed out to the English reformers a way of escape from the religious persecution they had so long endured, and from the evils of the impending conflict.

Between 1629 and 1640, these hard alternatives were pressed upon the harassed and long suffering people of England. On the one hand, the horrors of civil war intensified by religious animosities. On the other, a savage wilderness on the far side of 3000 miles of ocean. Those who chose the latter were certainly not lacking in courage. To the known dangers to be braved and hardships and sufferings to be endured were added those which are always the most dreadful in anticipation, the unknown. The manner in which the exigency was met by those who stayed and did battle, as well as by those who fled to the wilderness, shows that they were men fit to become "the sires of Empires yet to be."

In the early part of the period above named occurred "the great emigration," and the planting of the principal New England Colonies. The more cautious and prudent—those having the strongest attachments and the largest interests at home, would naturally be the most reluctant and among the latest to leave. And so it happened that the later emigrants, those who came between 1635 and 1640, were, as a general thing, of a higher class than those who came earlier; or perhaps it would be more proper to say the later emigrations comprised a larger proportion of the higher classes than the earlier. The company of Eaton and Davenport, who came in 1637, and a little later founded New Haven, is a well-known instance. The Tuttles came in 1635, as appears from Drake's Researches, from which we copy the following list of

The same month John Bill, aged 13, came in the Hopewell.

It appears from the above list that three distinct families of Tuttles came together in the Planter. Of these, John settled in Ipswich, Mass., Richard settled in Boston, and William in New Haven.

Another John Tuttle came with his family in the "Angel Gabriel," in the same year, 1635, and settled in Dover, N. H.

John Tuthill<sup>5</sup> came with his brother Henry about the same time, 1635. He was a widower in 1637. "After a few years," says Charles B. Moore, "he returned to England, where he m. a 2d wife." Settled at Weybread, Suffolk Co., and left descendants there. His brother Henry was of Hingham, Mass., and Smithfield, Long Island. We propose to give some account of all these families before proceeding with the main object of our work.

The late Hon. W. H. Tuthill of Tipton, Iowa, had been for many years prior to his decease, collecting the genealogy of the Southold family.

Henry Tuthill, with wf. Bridget, from Norfolk Co., Eng., was of Hingham, 1637; freeman, 1638; constable, 1640. He sold his property in 1644, and rem. to Southold, L. I. He d. before 1650, and his wf. Bridget who had m. Wm. Wells, was also deceased.—Strong Gen. Hist.

The above record is from an old Bible, printed 1599, defaced and torn.

<sup>5</sup> The term husbandman was used to designate those who tilled their own lands, in distinction from others who hired the lands they cultivated.

The parish register of Tharston, Norfolk Co., Eng., says that Henry Tuthill of Tharston had John, bap. Oct. 26, 1607; William, bap. Oct. 21, 1609; Henry, bap. June 28, 1612 (father of John of Southold). Dr. Hathfield, in his History of Elizabeth, N. H., calls John of Southold, nephew of William of New Haven, evidently identifying the latter as the William who was bap. at Tharston 1607. The date agrees with the age of Wm. of N. H., who was 26 in 1635. But this coincidence cannot be regarded in this instance as proof, or as evidence of identity, as there must have been a great many contemporary Williams in England, and there is nothing in corroboration, while the probabilities that Wm. of N. H., was brother or near of kin to his fellow passengers of the Planter are well nigh conclusive.

<sup>6</sup> Constables in early times were selected from among men of property and consequence, and who had some knowledge of law.—Fuljry's Hist. of New Eng.

21. John Tuthill, jr., called "Chalker John," a man of note, of great natural shrewdness and energy; affable and of sterling honesty; was a great favorite with the people and held many offices; justice of the peace; one of the commissioners that laid out the "Kings Highway," the first public road that extended the whole length of the Island from Brooklyn Ferry to Easthampton; mem. of the N. Y. Col. Leg., 1693-4, also from 1695-98; sheriff in 1695; m. Mehitable, dau. of Mary Wells afterwards Mary Mapes.—Hon. W. H. Tuthill.

22. Henry Tuthill was father of Henry 3d, who was father of Henry 3d, whose son, Anna Tuthill, m. John Cleves (s. of Rev. Timothy Symmes, b. July 10, 1742). He was an officer in the rev. army, and after one of the judges of the Supreme court of New Jersey. Not long after the war he bought a tract of land some twenty miles in length, on the north side of the Ohio river, including the site of Cincinnati. He removed to Ohio and res. at North Bend, then called Cleves, having been appointed by Washington U. S. Dist. Judge for the North West Ter. He d. at N. B., Feb., 1814. He m. (2) Widow Halsey of N. J.; (3) Susanna, dau. of Hon. Wm. Livingston of N. J. Her sister was wife of John Jay. By 1st m. he had:

I. Anna, who lived with her grandfather Tuthill at Southold, educated at the female academy at E. Hampton; afterwards a pupil of Mrs. Isabella Graham, and res. in her family. In 1794 accompanied her father and step-mother to res. at No. Bend, where she m. Nov. 22, 1795, William Henry Harrison, then a young officer in command of Fort Hamilton; afterwards President of the United States, in which office he d. in the White House at Washington. She d. Feb. 25, 1851, a. 88 yrs. and 7 months. About the year 1853 the computer while engaged in surveying a route for the Cincinnati & St. Louis R. R., accepted the proffered hospitality of one of the sons of President Harrison, then living a few miles below North Bend (Hon. Scott Harrison.) Mr. H. referred to his Tuthill relationships, saying his family had always held them in high esteem. Rev. Joseph Tuthill Daryea, D. D., is of this family.

JOHN TUTTLE OF DOVER, N. H.

John Tuttle, the immigrant ancestor of the New Hampshire family, sailed from Bristol, Eng., in the "Angel Gabriel" in 1635.* The vessel was wrecked at Pemaquid, on the coast of Maine, Aug. 15, 1635. He went first to Ipswich, Mass. In 1640 his name appears among the first settlers of Dover, where he received lot No. 7 of the 20 acre lots. There were 24 of these 20 acre allotments laid out to as many persons, and that of John Tuttle is the only one of the 24 that is now and always has been owned by descendants of the first grantee. He d. in Dover, June, 1663, a. abt. 45, leaving wid. Dorothy and three children. Wid. Dorothy appt. Admx. He was no doubt of the Devon family, as he came from that part of England, and the same arms were in possession of his descendants. A tradition says that he had a brother who settled in Conn. For the first 150 years all of this name in New Hampshire were his descendants.—Rev. Charles W. Tuttle, Esq., pub. in N. E. Gen. Reg., April, 1867.

*A fellow passenger in the "Angel Gabriel" with John Tuttle of Dover was John Cogswell "of Chebasco." He had been a merchant in London. He lost considerable property in the wreck. After living ashore some time in a tent he embarked, a passenger, in a vessel commanded by Capt. Galley, and took up his abode in Ipswich. He had an unusually large grant of land, 300 acres at Chebasco the next Oct., when there were only two families residing in that parish. He was a wealthy and prominent inhabitant of Ipswich. He d. One of the six Dover Commissioners to the N. Hamp. Convention. In 1705 Col. Richard Waldron and Judge Tuttle were the "two provincial men," of Dover to hear and determine matters relating to Mr. Allen's Claim.<sup>3</sup> He was Chairman of the Board of Public Surveyors of Land; one of the leading members of the chh. at Dover, and with other members of the General Assembly in 1698 subscribed a declaration adversely to transubstantiation, the invocation or adoration of the Virgin Mary or any other Saint, and the sacrifice of the Mass, as "superstitions and idolatries."<sup>4</sup> As Capt. of the Dover Co. he had charge of the defenses of the town, and was often with his Co. in scouting and hunting expeditions against the Indians. He left a large est.; wif. Mary, execx.; Lieut. Tristan Heard and Capt. Francis Mathews named as trustees for his grandchildren. ## RICHARD TUTTLE OF BOSTON.

Admitted to the church, March 3, 1636. Same month chosen on a committee with Thomas Oliver, Thomas Leverett, William Hutchinson and others, to oversee and regulate the internal affairs of the town. Nov. 5, 1638, he was chosen constable of Boston. Same year he had an allotment of land at Rummey Marsh, Chelsea and Pullen Point, 161 acres.

1638, John Odlen sold his great lot of 84 acres at Rummey Marsh to Richard Tuttell for £29, 8 s.

Jan., 1638-39, Nicholas Willys sold his great lot of 49 acres upland and marsh at Rummey Marsh to Richard Tuttell for £30 12 s. 6 d.

May, 1639, Robert Harding of Boston sold his pieper allotment at Rummey Marsh, about 50 acres, to Richard Tuttell for £33 5 s. 8 d. He contributed with others for the maintenance of a school teacher. He d. May 8, 1640. For fair simile of his autograph, see Drake's Hist. of Boston, p. 243. Oct. 31, 1642, Widow Touthill had liberty granted her to remove her windmill into the Fort, which must be placed as Capt. Gibbons directs, and next yr. "the highway already begun for Wid. Tutteil's windmill to the fort, should be laid out 20 feet wide." Anne Tuttle in 1650 had house and lot in Boston and farm at Rummey Marsh.

The lot in Boston that Geo. Griggs mortgaged to Wm. and John Tuttle was bounded on the east by Mrs. Tuttell's lot.

Probably Richard Tutteil had no other children than those who came with him in the Planter. The wid. Dorothy Bill* lived at his house and was probably his sister. By order of the court he was to be responsible for her "or anything about her," supposed to mean that he would support her and her children.

I. Anne Tuttle, b. in Eng., 1623.

II. John Tuttle, b. in Eng., 1625; m. Feb. 10, 1647, Mary Holyoke.

2. John Tuttle, b. in Eng., 1625; called cousin by wid. of John Tuttle of Ipswich. In 1652 he was Constable for Rummey Marsh, and lived there. In 1655, Capt. Robert Keyne, Mr. Edward Hutchinson, John Tuttle, John Doolittle and Thomas Stockton to run the line between Lynn and Boston, and between Charlestown and Boston. "Perhaps removed to Lynn, maybe freeman there, 1691, possibly that Lieut. of Cavalry that was discharged, 1673."—Savage. He m. Feb. 10, 1647, Mary, dau. of Edward Holyoke† of Lynn; chil.:

I. Mary Tuttle, b. April 18, 1653; d. Feb. 27, 1728, a. 75; m. Dec. 14, 1672, Caleb Carter of Charlestown. His will proved 1694.

The following are doubtless descended from Richard of Boston, but I am not able at this time to connect and place them.

John Tuttle, Edward Tuttle, Elisha Tuttle, Jonathan Tuttle, freemen of Boston, 1689-90, were probably sons of John and Mary (Holyoke).

*John and Dorothy Bill, son James, a. 21, and dau. Mary, a. 11, came over in the Planter, 1635, and had besides, probably Thomas and Philip. John Bill d. in Boston, 10th month, 1638; believed to be son of John Bill, bap. 1575, who appears in London, 1613, as publisher to King James, after receiving the royal license as King's Printer. The name of "Printing House Square" was given to his place of business, still so called, and the London Times is printed there. The Am. Bible Society has a number of Bibles with Bill's imprint. His first wife was Anne, dau. of Thomas Mountford, D. D., author of Mirror of Modestie, pub. in London, 1621.—Bill Genealogy.

†Edward Holyoke of Lynn was from Tamworth, Warwick Co., Eng., where he m. June 18, 1612, Prudence, dau. of Rev. John Stockton, rector of Kinkolt. His will, made Dec. 25, 1655, gives "to my son Tutteil that £4 that should have been paid yearly to me, but of which I have never received a penny, for the house in Boston, my best doublet and breeches to son Tutteil."—Lewis' Annals of Lynn. Inv. £651. John Tuttle and John Doolittle, appraisers.

The father of Edward H. of Lynn was Edward, and is thought to be the same Edward Hollyooke mentioned in the will of Shakspeare's wife's (Anne Hathaway) father, where he is spoken of as having a claim of 20 s. for wood.—N. E. Gen. Reg.

JOHN TUTTLE OF IPSWICH.

Brother of Richard of Boston. The settlement at Ipswich, Mass., was begun in March, 1633, by John Winthrop, jr., (afterwards Gov. of Conn.) and twelve others; who were joined next year by Rev. Thomas Parker and one hundred others from Wiltsshire, Eng. John Tuttle joined the settlement the same year that he arrived in the Planter, as appears by the town record in 1635: "a road four rods wide is reserved through John Tuttle's, 150 acres east of Mill river to the common." He was made a freeman March 13, 1639; Representative 1644. In 1651 he is called "Mr." a way being reserved between "Mr. Tuttle's swamp and the ends of the lots." —Felt's Hist. of Ipswich. March 13, 1650, John Tuttell of Ipswich, merchant, gave bond for £2000 to Daniel —faiyax and Isaac Legay of London, merchants, to pay £1180 10 s. in provisions and cattle before Nov., 1650, and he consigned to them goods, &c., value £812 3 s. and a penny as per invoice signed by Joanna his wife. The bond was discharged by payment in full in 1652 by Mrs. Joanna Tuttle. He went to Ireland about the time that the disheartened colonists at New Haven were negotiating for the purchase of the city of Galloway in Ireland for a future home. He established himself advantageously there and did not return. He d. at Carrickfergus, Dec. 30, 1656. His wife Joanna followed him to Ireland in 1654. She was before m. to John Tuttle a widow Lawrence.* The Dame pamphlet contains a fac simile of John Tuttle's autograph. i.

*The Lawrence Genealogy with a strange obtuseness calls John Tuttell's wife "foster mother" to the Lawrence children. In 1650 she writes to Geo. Giddings as her son and so calls John and Simon Tuttle and John Lawrence; John Tuttell, aged 32 yrs. in 1650, which identifies him with Richard's son of that name, she calls her cousin nephew. Besides William, John and Jane, wife of Giddings, she had a son Thomas Lawrence who came afterwards. They were from St. Albans in Herts —Narr.

George Giddings settled at Ipswich and d. June 1, 1676. He was Deputy to the General Court 1647, '48, '50, '54, '56, '58, '60, '62 and '70. Long a ruling elder of the 1st church. —Felt's Ipswich. few exceptions this branch produce their most brilliant men from Meshach*. Jabez comes from this line, and the males are all very prolific, each producing from 15 to 18 children, who scattered to the four quarters of the Union, and so far as I am able to learn, prove a credit to their country and name. From this one comes the greater part of the descendants of the first Michael. It seems also to be the most prolific. I suppose the Tuttle blood accounts for it—and produces the most men of note. You may safely draw the outlines of Sarah's descendants very strong and then not overdo it."—Randolph W. Farley.

*Randolph W. Farley, Esq., of Nashua, N. H., who has spent several years collecting the history of the Farley family, and to whom I am under obligations, says that a painting of Farley Castle was brought over in 1775 by Michael Farley of Ipswich, Mass., and has been seen within 50 years. About 50 years since, an English writer published a history of the castle in verse. The family is represented as of Welsh derivation or early amalgamation.

Michael Farley (with two sons) Michael and Meshach, came over in 1675 as agent for Sir Richard Saltonstall, and settled in Ipswich, Mass. Meshach m. Sarah Burnham as above.

minute men, organized by the Provincial Congress, and marched with it to Lexington; arriving after retreat of the British, he proceeded to Cambridge. On the 16th of June, 1775, was ordered to Charlestown with three regiments, and directed to throw up works on Bunker Hill, but Breed's Hill being more suitable, the defences were erected there. The next day Gen. Howe, with a force more than quadruple that of Col. Prescott, after a contest among the most desperate in American annals, and with immense loss, succeeding in dislodging him. Col. Prescott was one of the last to leave the intrenchment, and offered to retake the position the same night if the commander-in-chief would give him two regiments. In 1777 he resigned his command and went home, but in autumn of same year joined the northern army under Gates, and was present at the capture of Burgoyne, his last military service. He was a mem. of the Mass. Legislature several years. He d. Oct. 13, 1795, highly esteemed as an energetic, brave and patriotic citizen. His statue erected within the enclosure of, and near the great monument on Bunker Hill, was unveiled with appropriate ceremonies June 17, 1881.

Col. 1783, with high honors; taught school in Brooklyn, Conn., and in Beverly, Mass., at the latter place two years, and studied law meanwhile with Nathan Dane, founder of the Harv. law professorship. Invited by Washington to join his family as a private teacher, but declined. Prae. law in Beverly, afterwards in Salem; rep. that town in Mass. Leg., afterwards Senator of Essex Co. In 1805 offered and declined a seat on the bench of the Supreme court of Mass., and again in 1813. In 1809, to relieve himself of a part of his business, rem. to Boston; served several years as one of the governor's council. In 1814 appointed delegate to the Hartford convention. In 1818 appointed Judge of Court of Common Pleas for Suffolk Co., but resigned next year. In 1820 a delegate to the convention for revising the constitution of Mass. LL.D. from Harv. 1824, and from Dart. Col.; mem. of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; d. in Boston Dec. 8, 1841, a. 82. Daniel Webster announcing his dec. to the Supreme court, then sitting in Boston, said: "At the moment of his retirement from the bar of Mass., he stood at its head for legal learning and acquirements;" m. Dec. 18, 1793, Catharine Green, dau. of Thomas Hickling, and had seven chil., of whom four d. in infancy.

I. William Hickling Prescott, b. Salem, Mass., May 4, 1793; d. of paralysis, in Boston, Jan. 28, 1859; Harv. Col. 1814. In his last year at col. while in the dining hall a classmate playfully threw at him a crust of bread, which struck one of his eyes and deprived it almost totally of sight. Excessive use of the other eye in study so injured it as to prevent reading for several years. Subsequently it improved and he was enabled to use it many hours of the day; but during the latter part of his life he could read only a few moments at a time, and could hardly see to write at all. Under these circumstances his great historical works were composed. Ferdinand and Isabella, 3 vols., 1837, translated into German, French and Spanish; History of Mexico, 3 vols., 8 vo, 1843. London and New York; History of Philip II, 3 vols., 8 vo. He also wrote brief memoirs of his friends, John Pickering and Abbott Lawrence, and a series of essays, pub. in the North American Review, comprising the chief fruits of his studies in French and Italian Literature, on Molière, Italian Narrative Poetry, Poetry and Romance of the Italians, and others on kindred topics. These were republished in London and New York, in a volume of miscellanies, which have passed through several editions. He was elected a corresponding member of the Royal Academy of History at Madrid, and a member of nearly all the principal learned bodies in Europe, and in 1845 he was made a corresponding member of the Institute of France. In person he was tall and slender, with a fresh and florid complexion, and lively and graceful manners. "His personal appearance," says Mr. Bancroft, "was singularly pleasing, and won for him everywhere in advance a welcome and favor. His countenance had something that brought to mind the 'beautiful disdain' that lowers on that of Apollo. But while he was high-spirited, he was tender and gentle and humane. His voice was like music, and one could never hear enough of it. His cheerfulness reached and animated all about him. He could indulge in playfulness and could also speak earnestly and profoundly; but he knew not how to be ungracious or pedantic." He m. May 4, 1820, (his birth-day) Susan, dau. of Thomas C. and Harriet (Linzee<sup>65</sup>) Amory. I. CATHERINE, b. Sept. 23, 1824; d. Feb. 1, <sup>65</sup>Harriet was dau. of Capt. Linzee of the British Navy, who, at the battle of Bunker Hill and burning of Charlestown, commanded the British Sloop of War "Falcon," which lay in Charles River and bombarded the troops under Col. Prescott on Bunker Hill. The sword which Capt. Linzee wore on that occasion descended in his family to his granddaughter, and on her m. to Wm. H. Prescott it came into his possession. The sword which Col. Prescott wore at Bunker Hill also descended to his grandson, and thus the two swords met at last in peace, and were kept crossed over the books in Mr. Prescott's library, until his death, and then they were transferred by his will to the Mass. Hist. Soc., to be kept in the same relative position.

WILLIAM TUTTLE.

Prior to the embarkation on the Planter in April, 1635, we have no positive knowledge. The usual time of a voyage from Gravesend to Boston was about ten weeks. He arrived with his family about the first of July. About a year later "Mrs. Elizabeth Tutteil united with the church in Boston July 24, 1636."<sup>4</sup> There are two subsequent entries on the church record: "Mrs. Elizabeth Tutteil brought to be baptized a son Jonathan, July 2, 1637," and "Mrs. Elizabeth Tutteil brought to be baptized a son David, April 7, 1639."<sup>5</sup> The colonial records of Mass., of New Haven and of Conn. contain in a few scattered fragments nearly all that is known of William Tuttle. From these, however, we are able to form some idea of his social position, associations, circumstances, employments and of his general character.

In the passenger list of the Planter he is called "husbandman." The distinction between a husbandman and a farmer was, the husbandman was a proprietor and tilled his own acres; the farmer was a leaseholder or paid rent. It appears, however, from a petition on file in the Secretary of State's office in Boston, that he was a merchant, and this might be partly inferred from his joining Mr. Eaton's company, many of whom had been engaged in commercial pursuits in the old country, and whose purpose was to found a commercial city in the new. The petition is as follows, without date: "To the right worshipful Thomas Dudley, Esq., and to the magistrates and deputies of this General Court, now in Boston assembled. The humble petition of Major Nehemiah Bowne, Edward Tyng, William Tuttill, Joseph Youngs, William Payne, John Mialam, and James Oliver, with divers others, being merchants and owners of the ketch, called the Zebulon, now belonging to Ipswich." Abstract of Petition.—Intend to send the said ketch to the Indies and ask for two guns to arm her. This is refused.—Mass. Arch., vol. 60, p. 168.

In 1638 George Griggs had permission of the court to "sell his house and garting under it and twenty acres of his great lot to Mr. Tuttell of Ipswich and Mr. Tuttell of Charlestown for his redeeming out of their debts."—Drake's Hist. of Boston.

This item is suggestive in several particulars. First in the use of the title Mr. which was very rare indeed, especially in the case of young men. William Tuttle was

*Record of First church in Boston.

The title Hon. was entirely unknown in our records until 1633, and subsequently for many years was applied only to the Governor, and seldom even to him. The next title was that of Esq. and meant the same as in England, temp. Elizabeth and James I. Mr. Thomas Wills was a magistrate for 17 years, dep. Gov. 1 year and was chosen Gov. the 2d time before he was dignified with Esq. The next title was Gentleman, but seems to have been soon discarded in Conn. The prefix Master (Mr.) belonged to all gentlemen including those designated by the higher marks of rank. Master corresponds very nearly to the English word gentleman. In Conn. it embraced clergymen and planters of good family and estate who were members of the General Court. Those bred at an university and those of sufficient education to manage the general affairs of the colony, civil or ecclesiastical, and who had been sufficiently well born. Comparatively few of the representatives of the town, even though they might be returned year after year, were honored with the title. To be called Mr. or to have ones name recorded by the Secretary with that prefix 200 years ago was a more certain index of the rank of the individual as respects birth, education and good moral character than any one of the high sounding titles with which many men of no note whatever in our day or swift locomotion are content to style others in order that they may be enriched in their turn with the same spurious currency. It may be observed by reference to our colonial records that there were scores of men of good family and in honorable stations who still did not possess all the requisite qualities of Masters. It was seldom that young men of whatever rank were called Masters. Sir was sometimes applied to young gentlemen undergraduates at a college. Goodman was used in speaking of the better sort of yeomen, laborers, tenants and others above the grade of servants, who owned a small estate and bore a good moral character. There are several instances of deputies to the General Court being called Goodman. Goodwife or Goodly was the corresponding feminine title. Mrs. was applied to the wives of Masters and also to unmarried females of the higher class. Military then but twenty-nine years of age. It also suggests some sort of community of interest, partnership or relationship between William and John Tuttle as common creditors of George Griggs. The latter was called a carpenter, but it is said was formerly a London printer. A mortgage from George Griggs of Boston to William Tuttle of New Haven, dated the 8th of the 8th month, 1659, of a house and ground in Beacon street, Boston, bounded by street on the north, the lane on the east, the lot sometime Thomas Pettit's on the west, and the Common on the south, to secure a debt of £10, is recorded in Suffolk Deeds. Payment of £13 10s. was made in corn, flesh, etc., English commodities at prices current. In this record the lot is bounded east by Mrs. Tuttle's lot.

On the 23d of July, 1637, Messrs. Davenport and Eaton, with their company, arrived at Boston, and in the fall of that year Mr. Eaton and others made a prospecting tour of the shore tract on Long Island Sound, between Saybrook and Fairfield, for the purpose of selecting a site for an independent colony, which they had determined to plant, declining the very liberal offers made by Massachusetts to induce them to remain in that jurisdiction. Quinnipiac was selected, a hut put up, and seven men were left to spend the winter.* The main body of the company sailed from Boston on the 30th of March, and arrived on the 14th of April, 1638. During the summer the town plot was laid out and house lots assigned to the settlers. On the 4th of June, 1639, the planters convened in Mr. Newman's barn and signed the Church Covenant. On this list the name of William Tuttle appears for the first time in the records of the Quinnipiac Colony. It stands on the record book between that of Benjamin Ling and Ezekiel Cheever, among the principal men, and towards the head of the list. It is probable that he removed to Quinnipiac between the date of his son David's baptism in April, and the signing of the Church covenant in June.

In 1641 he was owner of the home lot of Edward Hopkins, who had built a house on it, and soon after removed to Hartford; became Gov. of Conn. and founder of the Gramma School that bears his name. This lot was on the square bounded by Grove, State, Elm and Church streets (names given more than a century and a half after the original survey) and was one of eight allotments into which the square was divided. Gov. Eaton, his brother Samuel, and Richard Perry had lots on Elm st. Capt. Nathaniel Turner, on Church st. Ezekiel Cheever's, David Yale's and Mrs. Eaton's (mother of the Gov.) fronted on Grove and State sts. The Hopkins lot fronted on State st., from the corner of Grove to Wall st., and perhaps a little beyond, and in depth extended about two-thirds of the distance to Orange st. In other words it included about two-thirds of the present square, bounded by State, Wall, Orange and Grove sts. Henry Hooker's carriage factory and other buildings stand on a part of it. The bed of a creek which originally ran diagonally across a corner of it was made use of in building the Farmington Canal, and is now the bed of the New Haven and Northampton Company's Railroad. The last named work was located and constructed through the city about 1849, by the compiler of this record as assistant engineer, under the direction of Henry Tatnam, Esq.

In 1656 William Tuttle bought of Joshua Atwater his original allotment, mansion house and barn, with certain other lands, recorded in the Proprietor's Record, as follows: "Alienation: Mr. Joshua Atwater passing over to Mr. William Tuttle his house, home lot and barn, ten acres in the first division, in the Yorkshire Quarter, betwixt land of Thomas Johnson and land that was Mrs. Constable's, 28 acres in the Neck," etc. Mr. Atwater removed to Milford in 1656, thence, in 1659, to Boston. This became the Tuttle homestead, and so continued until his death, and, after that, his widow resided there until she died, in all a period of twenty-eight years.

As the most interesting associations are now connected with this spot of ground, we propose to give here its subsequent history as briefly as possible. In the inventory of titles were considered of a very high order. Previous to 1654 the highest military officer in the colony was Captain." — Historian's Hist. of Conn.

Felt, in Hist. of Ipswich, relates that a man was degraded from the title of Mr. for misdemeanor. Palfrey, in Hist. of New England, says: "There was great punctiliousness in the application of both official and conventional titles." Only a small number of persons of the best condition (always including ministers and their wives) had Mr. or Mrs. prefixed to their names. Goodman or Goodwife was addressed to persons above the condition of servitude and below that of gentility."

Wm. Bradford, though at the head of the Bridgewater, Mass., proprietors, a son of the Gov. and himself often Lieut.-Gov., was not entitled to "Mr."

We have enlarged on this point because a school of modern critics, who deny everything and insist upon proof, have expressed doubts as to the significances of the title Mr. at this period in New England.

*This incident has been questioned. It seems probable enough, however, and far more likely to be true, than the alternative of its being a sheer fabrication. Mr. Eaton, having selected the situation for his settlement, would have deemed it a matter of prudence to leave a safeguard against the intrusion of the Dutch.

It rests on the authority of Trumbull, reiterated by Lambert.

William Tuttle's estate in 1673 it is called his "homestead," and valued at £110. In 1685 it appears in the inventory of the widow as "the homestead," valued at £120. Moses Mansfield and John Alling, jr., appraisers. In about a year after her death it was sold by her administrators, Thomas, Joseph and Nathaniel Tuttell, to Mrs. Hester Coster, widow, for £110. It is described as "Mrs. Elizabeth Tutte[l]'s dwelling house and two acres, bounded west by the home lot of John Ball [p. 142], north by the home lot of Thomas Tuttell [p. 126], east by the Market Place, and south by the street." Hannah Jones (wif. of Dep. Gov. Wm. Jones and dau. of Gov. Eaton) and John Paine witnessed the deed. In this description of boundaries no mention is made of the street (now College st.), the "Market Place" (Upper Green) being named as the eastern boundary.

The subsequent history of the lot is taken from Prof. W. L. Kingsley's folio, Hist. of Yale College, article on its land titles by Henry White, Esq. Mr. White describes it as about 200 feet on Chapel st. by about 270 feet on College st. These dimensions embrace an area of about 14 acres, while the inventory and deeds call it 2 acres. Perhaps the street was included in the latter estimate. On General Wadsworth's map, drawn in 1748, the lot as measured by the scale is about 230 feet on Chapel by about 300 feet on College, and an area of about 1½ acres.

Mrs. Coster died April 6, 1691, a. 67 yrs. Her remains repose under the Center Church, and her name, date of death and age are inscribed on the tablet in the vestibule. In her will she devised this property to the "First Church of Christ in New Haven," to maintain a lecture in the spring and fall of the year. The church leased it for a few years, but finding as the house became old that it produced no income, sold it in 1717 to the trustees of the collegiate school, who immediately began the erection of the first college building, which was finished the next year. It was of wood, fronting on College st., 170 feet long by 22 feet wide, and three stories high. In 1718 it received the name of Yale College in gratitude to Gov. Elihu Yale, who, between 1714 and 1718, had contributed largely to the school. This building stood about 64 years. It was taken down in 1782. The South College, the old Chapel, now the Atheneum, built 1761, and the South Middle stand on this plot. The latter was begun in 1750 and is the oldest building on the College Square.

The Tuttle homestead was the only land owned by the college for nearly thirty years. It was the first of a long series of purchases extending through a period of more than a century, which finally brought the whole of the College Square into its possession. In these transfers, descendants of Wm. Tuttle, who at one time or another owned a considerable part of the square, appear as grantors, either directly to the college or to intermediate holders.

The corporation is now a great landed proprietor. Hence a peculiar interest attaches to this, its first acquisition of real estate. It is now 243 years since its purchase from the Indians, during which period it has been held by but five proprietors, viz.: Joshua Atwater, 16 yrs.; William Tuttle and heirs, 30 yrs.; Hester Coster, 5 yrs.; the First Church of New Haven, 26 yrs.; Yale College, 166 yrs.

On this very spot where William Tuttle lived and died, his great-grandson, Jonathan Edwards, studied, taught and achieved his "great and excellent tutorial renown." It is now and long has been the chosen gathering place of the students, where, at leisure hours, they meet for general purposes or for social intercourse.

It is here that the class histories are recited, the last fandangos of the seniors performed, and the fence given away.*

*The fence enclosing this part of the campus seems to possess peculiar attractions to the students. On almost any fine day during sessions may be seen a long row of youths seated close together on the top rail, and looking at a distance like some strange sort of fowl gone early to roost. The corporation no doubt would cheerfully furnish seats on the campus as a substitute, but that would not do. The fence fills all requirements, and is valued accordingly. The Chapel street side from the South College, about half way to College street, is sacred to the Seniors. There, to the College st. corner is the exclusive property of the Juniors. The Sophmores own the College st. rail. Beyond, there is plenty of room for the Freshmen, but they are not permitted to sit on the fence, and woe to the fledgeling who should dare to transgress this unwritten but inviolable law; though an exception is made in favor of any hero of the bat or car who has helped to win a college race or game of ball. To such the privilege of the fence on the College st. side, below the Sophs, but nowhere else, is granted as a reward. To all others it is strictly forbidden.

Every year, a few days before Commencement, the fence is given away by the Seniors to the Juniors. By the Juniors to the Sophs, and by the latter to the class below. The winter had the good fortune to witness the transfer of 1½. Fifteen is well as students were present in large numbers, filling the campus, the adjoining streets and sidewalks and the balconies and windows of the neighboring hotels and houses. Clay orators, mounted on express wagons, made witty presentation speeches, which were replied to in the same spirit, accompanied by uproarious laughter and clapping of hands by the audience. The whole proceeding was full of that rollicking spirit of fun which only students near the long vacation can fully realize.

'In the evening twilight the place is often vocal with college songs, which seem to burst forth spontaneously, and are caught up by young voices here and there until the full chorus fills the surrounding space and the "Cathedral Aisle" of the overarching elms; awakening in the minds of listeners poetical reminiscences of other lands, where, more than in this, such sounds are heard in songs and vesper hymns.'

Other and more intimate associations than those of successive occupancy and ownership of the same local habitation, connect this history of a family with that of Yale College. Of its ten thousand academical graduates, at least four hundred, or one in twenty-five, are known to be of this lineage or affinity, and so of its professional schools. Its officers, tutors, professors and fellows will be found in these pages in a still larger ratio; and of its eleven presidents, two not the least honored of the list, ruled over its destinies for more than one-fourth of the entire period of its existence to the present time.

The lands outside the town plot were divided to the proprietors or their representatives from time to time, according to a rule based on the amount of rates paid, and on the number of persons in the proprietor's family, counting husband, wife and children only. In the first division made in 1640, William Tuttle is rated at £400 of estate and seven persons, showing that the schedule was made before the birth of Joseph, who was bap. Nov. 22, of that year. Of the one hundred and two proprietors, there were thirty whose rates exceeded his, though none were above £1,000, excepting Gov. Eaton's, which was £3,000. In the second division Wm. Tuttle's proportion was 107 acres. There is no record of the "lay out" of the first and second divisions, but in August, 1640, fifty acres of meadow land were granted to Mr. Samuel Eaton, and at the same time Mr. Wm. Tuttle and Benj. Ling were allowed to have their meadow land "where Mr. Eaton hath his first fifty acres, namely, in the fresh meadows toward Totoket (Branford)." This is probably the locality referred to in the record of a court held at New Haven, Feb. 1, 1647, when Ezekiel Cheever passed over to John Cooper five and a half acres of out-land within the two miles, one half of it lying in Mr. Eaton's quarter, between land of Mrs. Turner and Wm. Tuthill, the other half lying by the mill highway at the end of Mr. Eaton's pasture, next to the land of Wm. Tuthill. The same year Mr. Perry conveyed land "one end butting on the mill road between land of Wm. Tuttle and Francis Newman."

In 1644 Mr. Tuthill was granted liberty to enlarge his rate to £450, and if he removes to sell only improvements and outlands in second division and Neck. Trumbull says: "The proprietors soon began to cultivate their lands on the East Haven side, and in 1644 Thomas Gregson built the first house. William Edward, (father of Richard, who m. Elizabeth Tuttle, Jasper Crane, Wm. Tuttle and others soon followed.) Mr. Tuttle may have lived in E. Haven awhile before buying the Atwater property, but I have found no evidence that he ever removed his family from New Haven."

Capt. Charles H. Townshend says that Wm. Tuttle and Mr. Gregson were the first owners of land in East Haven, and that Mr. Tuttle surveyed and laid out the road from the ferry at Red Rock to Stony River, that his land in E. Haven was bounded by a line running from the old Ferry (where the new bridge over the Quinnipiac is) eastward to a spring where issues the small stream called "Tuttle's Brook," thence south along Tuttle's Brook to Mr. Gregson's land at Solitary Cove, thence west to a point on the New Haven Harbor near the chemical works and Fort Hale, thence north along the harbor line to the point of beginning. The tract was large and much of it may have been obtained by purchase of the original grantees or of their successors. It included Tuttle's Hill. It was mostly divided up and sold by the heirs to the Hughes, Woodwards, and others. The Forbes and Luddingtons came into possession by marriage with female heirs. Isaac and Kneeland Townsend bought the interest of several of the heirs of Joseph Tuttle, which is now part of the fine estate in E. Haven called Raynham, the family seat of the Townsends.

In 1659 Mr. Tuttle appears as proprietor of land in North Haven that had belonged to the estate of Gov. Eaton (Ducis Hist. of Wallingford); the same perhaps that his son Jonathan Tuttle settled on in 1670. There were lands in Bethany and elsewhere acquired by purchase in his life, or set off to his heirs or representatives in the third and in latter divisions after his death.

In 1661 John Punderson alienated to Mr. Tuttle his dwelling house and home lot, and seven acres of land with two houses on it, which Mr. T. at once gave to his son John.

There was an interval of near forty years between the 2d and 3d divisions. In 1672 William Jones, Matthew Gilbert, Capt. John Nash, James Bishop, Mr. William

*"New Haven is a vast Cathedral with aisles for streets."—N. P. White, Rem. of N. H.

Tuttle, Roger Alling, Samuel Whitehead, David Atwater, Jonathan Osborn, Alling Ball, and James Eaton, were commissioned to locate such lands as may stand for town commons, and such as are fit for a third division.—Proprietor's Record. The third division was made in 1680. There were several divisions after the third, but the last original proprietor had passed away long before, and their heirs or representatives had in many instances disposed of their rights in advance and removed. It is evident that William Tuttle was sometime a very large land owner, and that he must have sold or divided up among his children the greater part of it before his death. Subsequently the records of conveyances by his sons of lands in possession, and of proprietary rights are numerous.

“SEATING THE MEETING HOUSE.”

One of the earliest matters to engage the attention of the colonists was the building of the meeting house, immediately followed by the solemn and weighty matter of “seating” it. This custom was general in primitive New England. A committee of grave men, appointed for the purpose, graded the seats and “dignified” them according to some rule, propinquity to the pulpit perhaps, by which they were esteemed more or less honorable. The people were then voted into them one by one, in accordance with certain prescribed rules. The rules at New Haven were doubtless similar to those on record at Wethersfield, where a committee of seven men appointed to “seat the meeting house” were instructed by a vote of the town to observe the following rules of precedence: 1st, Dignity of descent. 2d, Place of Public Trust. 3d, Pious Disposition. 4th, Estate. 5th, Peculiar serviceableness of any kind.

“This,” says Dr. Bacon in his New Haven Historical Discourses, “affords us a glimpse of the associations and relative social importance of the first settlers of New Haven.”

The first “seating” in New Haven was in 1646-7. “Mr. Tuttle, Mr. Pell* and brother Fowler† were voted into the first cross seat at the end.” This was near the pulpit and among the highest in dignity. The women sat by themselves and it is very likely were placed by similar considerations so far as they were applicable. In the 5th seat in the middle sat Mrs. Tuttle, the wife of Mr. Gibbs; Mrs. Newman, wife of Francis,‡ who was her next door neighbor; the wife of Jasper Crane§ and the wife of Joshua Atwater.

In 1655-6 another assignment of seats was made. In the first cross seat at the upper end, Mr. Tuttle, Mr. John Davenport (son of the minister), Mr. Fowler and Mr. Allerton,

*Mr. Peil. Thomas, son of Sir John Pell of London, was surgeon at the Saybrook Fort, under Lyon Gardiner in 1636, and in that capacity was sent with Capt. Underhill to the Pequot war in 1637. About 1647 he m. the widow of Francis Brewster. Before her m. to Mr. Pell a fine had been imposed by the Court which she refused to pay, and Mr. Pell, after marrying her, was held responsible, which he also refused. After a good deal of difficulty about the payment, and declining when called upon to take the oath of fidelity, he went awy, probably to Fairfield. His wife and dau. were witnesses in the case of Staples against Ludlow. —Saxin's Hist. Desc. In Ballou's Hist. of Westchester Co. may be found an extended account of Pell. He was of an old Northamptonshire family. He obtained by purchase or grant a large tract in Westchester Co., N. Y., probably by authority of the Conn. Leg., afterwards known as the Manor of Pelliam, of which the present Pelhamville is a part. This tract was ratified by Gov. Nichols to John Pelliam, gent., in 1666. In 1670 the patentee devised the whole tract to his nephew, John Pell (commonly called Lord Pell), who obtained a further confirmation of the grant from Gov. Dongan in 1675. Two yrs. afterwards John and Rachel (Pinckney) Pell conveyed to Jacob Leisler, merchant of N. Y., [who acted in behalf of the Huguenots] six thousand acres, now the township of New Rochelle, N. Y. The grantee and his heirs pay to said John Pell and his heirs, as Lords of said Manor, one fat calf on the 24th of June annually it demanded. Consideration £1675 sterling. When the fat calf was demanded each Huguenot paid its proportion. Pell also gave one hundred acres for the benefit of the French church. Rachel, his wife, made her mark, “R.” In 1681 Leisler was executed in New York for high treason, having undoubtedly assumed and exercised authority as Gov. and Commander-in-Chief of New York. Thomas Pell d. v. 1716, a. 61 yrs. His only brother, John Pell, D. D., of London, an eminent mathematician and author of several learned works, was Cromwell's envoy to the Swiss Canton in the time of the Protectorate. “The family is one of great antiquity.” (See Eccy. Brit. for biog. of John Pell, D. D.)

**Brother Fowler** [William] was a magistrate.

†Francis Newman was Gov. of the Colony.

§Jasper Crane and Wm. Tuttle were much associated in public affairs and were probably personal friends. They were associated as “fence viewers,” and in the East Haven settlement, and as leaders in the Delaware enterprise. He was many years a magistrate. He removed to Brantford 1652. He was one of the most prominent of the founders of Newark in 1666 where his name stands at the head of the list of proprietors preceding even that of the Rev. Abraham Pierson. The Milford people soon followed and the name of Robert Treat, afterwards Gov. of Conn., is 1st. In 1668 Treat and Crane were the first representatives of Newark in the N. J. Legislature. Mary Treat, dau. of Gov. Robert, m. Dea. Azariah Crane, son of Jasper.

Sen.* In the 4th long seat Mrs. Gibbard, Mrs. Tuttle, Goodwife Gibbs and Goodwife Davis. At this seating Jonathan Tuttle, James Eaton, John Clark and Isaac Turner (son of Capt. Nathaniel) were placed together.

In 1661-2 another assignment of seats was made. In the third long seat Mr. Goodenhausen, (Samuel Van Goodenhausen, who married the widow of Capt. Nathaniel Turner), Mr. Tuttle, William Judson (grandfather of James Judson, who married William Tuttle's granddaughter, Rebecca Wells), John Gibbs and Lient. Nash. On the women's side, in the third long seat, "Sisters Miles, Peck, Lindon, Tuttle and Gibbard."

THE DELAWARE EXPEDITION.

In 1640 Capt. Nathaniel Turner, as agent for parties in New Haven, bought of the Indians a large tract of land lying on both sides of the Delaware river, in what is now Salem Co., N. J., on the east, and in New Castle, Co., Del., on the west.

The object was to plant a colony under the jurisdiction of New Haven, for purposes of trade and commerce. The next year (1641) nearly fifty families were sent to the new purchase. They settled on Salem Creek and erected dwellings and trading houses. This was the first English settlement in New Jersey. It preceded that at Elizabeth-town (the first permanent English settlement in New Jersey) by twenty-four years.

In 1638 a company of Swedes, led by Peter Minuit (a disaffected ex-Dutch governor of New Amsterdam), had located themselves at "Christina," on the west side of the Delaware, nearly opposite the mouth of Salem Creek. These Swedes and Dutch, who would agree in nothing else, says the historian, united in persecuting the English, and succeeding in driving them off in 1642.

New Haven made a second attempt about 1641, which was frustrated by the Dutch at New Amsterdam. These, with other and subsequent grievances, always came up for consideration and protest in the meetings of the commissioners of the United Colonies, and formed the staple of the official correspondence between Gov. Eaton and "one troublesome neighbor" at New Amsterdam. Finally an agreement between the commissioners and the Dutch governor was signed at Hartford, Sept. 3, 1650. It established certain boundaries, redressed certain wrongs, and in regard to the Delaware matter left "both parties in status quo prius to plead and improve their just rights, but all proceedings to be carried on in love and peace, until the question could be decided here or by the parent governments of England and Holland." In pursuance of this apparent settlement, about fifty men of Totoket and New Haven, in the spring of 1651, hired a vessel, put their effects on board and set sail for the Delaware.<sup>4</sup>

They had a warrant from Governor Eaton, and he wrote a friendly letter to the Dutch governor, acquainting him with their intentions; giving him to understand that, according to the arbitration at Hartford, they would cultivate their own lands, and keep within their own limits. But no sooner was his letter received, than the Dutch claims were again set up; the people of New Haven, who meditated a further settlement at Delaware, and an additional improvement of their interests, under an apprehension of peace and safety, were threatened with martial opposition and bloodshed. They were perfidiously seized and made close prisoners at New York, nor could they obtain their liberty, until they gave it under their hands, that they would give over their enterprise and return to New Haven. They were threatened by the governor that if at any future period he should find them on the Delaware, he would not only lay hold on their property, but transmit them as prisoners to Holland. This company was nearly ruined, and the colony of New Haven was greatly injured by this repetition of hostility on the part of the Dutch.

In the same year a meeting of the commissioners was held at New Haven, September 14th. Of this meeting Governor Eaton was chosen President. The meeting was no sooner convened than the following communication was made to its members:

*Isaac Allerton came over in the Mayflower; he was by trade a tailor. On the death of John Carver the first Gov. of Plymouth Colony, he was made Assistant. Isaac Allerton, a sea Capt., removed from Boston to New Haven and built a grand house, with four porches, on the Creek; this, with Eaton's, Davenport's and Gregson's were the grandest houses in the town. Daveanport's house had thirteen fireplaces. [Noted by Dr. Stiles as traditions in History of the Judges.] Mr. Allerton removed to New Amsterdam where he had great storehouses, and carried on an extensive trade with the New England Colonies. An old map of Wambados or New Amsterdam, as it was in September, 1661, shows Isaac Allerton's buildings surrounded by a fence, close to the site of Fulton Market.

On a brick building now standing on the southwest corner of Union and Fair sts. in N. Hav. the Trowbridges have this year [1851] placed a tablet inscribed: "Isaac Allerton, a pilgrim of the Mayflower and the father of New England commerce, lived on this ground from 1639 until 1650."

The people of New Haven, not satisfied with the location, proposed to remove to a tract on the Delaware, and in 1651 urgently requested Capt. John Mason to remove with them and take the management of the company. He was on the point of accepting their liberal offers, when the Conn. authorities interfered with entreaties and refusal to consent.—Life of John Mason.

"The humble petition of Jasper Crane, William Tuttle and many others, inhabitants of New Haven and Totoket, humbly Showeth,—

"That, whereas, divers years since several merchants and others of New Haven, with much charge and loss, did purchase of the Indian sagamores and their companies, the true proprietors, several large tracts and parcels of lands on both sides of Delaware bay and river, and did presently begin to build and set up factories for trade, and purposed to set up plantations within their own limits; whereby the gospel also might have been carried and spread among the Indians in that most southerly part of New England, and the United Colonies might before this time have been enlarged with convenience both for themselves and posterity, had not the whole work by hostile and injurious opposition, made both by the Dutch and Swedes, been then injured. And whereas your petitioners, straightened in their respective plantations, and finding this part of the country full, or affording little encouragement to begin any considerable new plantations, for their own comfort and the convenience of posterity, did, upon a serious consideration of the premises, and upon encouragement of the treaty between the honored Commissioners and the Dutch governor, the last year at Connecticut, by agreement and consent of the said merchants and others, resolve upon a more difficult remove to Delaware; hoping that our aims and endeavors both to God and his people in these colonies, being assured our title to the place was just, and resolving (through the help of God) in all our carriages and proceedings to hold and maintain a neighborly correspondence of the Dutch and Swedes, as was assured them, both by the tenor of the commissions, and by letters from the honored governor of this jurisdiction.

"To these ends and with these purposes, preparations were made in the winter; a vessel was hired, and at least fifty of us set forward in the spring, and expecting the fruit of that wholesome advice, given at Hartford the last year in the case, by the arbitrators jointly. Those chosen by the Dutch governor concurring in it, we went to the Manhattoes, (which we might have avoided) and from our honored governor presented a letter to the Dutch governor; upon perusal whereof, without further provocation, he arrested the two messengers and committed them to a private house, close prisoners, under a guard. That done, he sent for the master of the vessel to come on shore, as to speak to him, and committed him also; after which, two or more of the company coming on shore, and desiring to speak with their neighbors under restraint, he committed them as the rest. Then desiring to see our commissions and copy them out, promising to return them the next day, (though the copies were taken and the commissions demanded) he refused to deliver them, and kept them and the men imprisoned till they were forced to engage under their hands, not then to proceed on their voyage towards Delaware, but with loss of time, and charge to return to New Haven; threatening, that if he should after find any of them in Delaware, he would seize their goods, and send their persons prisoners to Holland; and accordingly they returned, though their damage thereby, as they conceive, doth amount to about £300. All which, your petitioners refer to your wise and serious consideration; and, being well assured you will have due respect to the honor of the English nation, which now suffers by this injurious affront, taken notice of by all the neighboring Indians, they humbly desire that some course may be agreed and ordered for the due repair of their losses, satisfaction for their unjust imprisonment, with liberty and encouragement to improve their just rights at Delaware, for the future.

"For which purpose they humbly offer to consideration:—

"First.—That Delaware, in the judgment of those who have often and seriously viewed the land, and considered the climate, is a place fit for the enlargement of the English colonies at present, and hopeful for posterity; that we and they might enjoy the ordinances of Christ, both in spiritual and civil respects.

"Secondly.—They fear, that if the English right be not seasonably vindicated, and a way opened for the speedy planting of Delaware, the Dutch, who have laid already an injurious hand both upon our persons and rights (they having, as it is reported, lately begun a new fortification upon our duly purchased lands), will daily strengthen themselves, and, by large offers, draw many of the English to settle and plant under them, in so hopeful a place, which will be not only dishonorable to the English nation, but inconvenient to the colonies, and of mischievous consequences to the persons who shall so settle, in reference to that licentious liberty there suffered and practiced.

"Thirdly.—As the petitioners have not in their eye, any other considerable place within the limits of New England, either for the enlargement of the colonies at present, or for the comfort and convenience of posterity; so if the Dutch may thus oppose us in our persons and rights, if they may plant and fortify upon the land which themselves, the English, Swedes and Indians know to be ours, it may encourage them to encroach and make further hostile attempts upon some or other of the smaller English plantations, to bring them under their government, and may animate the Indians (with whom the Dutch ingratiate themselves by a large, constant, and mischievous trade in guns, powder and shot) to despise, and make insults upon us. Wherefore, they again humbly entreat your advice, with seasonable and suitable assistance, according to the weight and import of the case, that all your consultations and labor may tend and issue in the honor of Christ, and the welfare of the colonies."*

In consequence of this representation of the Dutch conduct, the commissioners remonstrated and protested in a letter written to Gov. Stuyvesant, noticing his sentiments contained in the letter which he had sent to Governor Eaton, relative to the Delaware settlement, his violation of the agreement in refusing to put Greenwich under New Haven jurisdiction, in imprisoning a number of the colonists, withholding their commissions, and rendering their voyage ineffectual; and also, in their attempting to establish fortifications upon the land which the New Haven proprietors had purchased of the native proprietors at Delaware. They declared that the United Colonies would, by all just and lawful means, vindicate their injured honor and interests. They also resolved in behalf of the petitioners, that if they should attempt in the course of the year to effect a settlement on their lands at Delaware, and at their own expense send 150, or at least 100 men, well armed, in a vessel or any number of vessels for such an expedition, with a suitable quantity of ammunition, and with a regular commission from New Haven government, that then, if the Dutch or Swedes should attempt to oppose them, the United Colonies would furnish them with an armed force sufficient for their defense. And they further resolved that every English plantation on Delaware bay and river, from New Haven, or any of the United Colonies, should be under the government of New Haven.—Elog. of Gov. Eaton.

This matter is referred to by the commissioners of the United Colonies (in answer to a letter from Edward Winslow, under date, New Haven, Sept. 11, 1651): "We understand that Mr. Eaton hath written to you about the just title to considerable parts of lands on both sides of Delaware bay and river; how they were formerly disturbed in their trade and planting by force and other unlawful practices, both of Dutch and Swedes, yourself may be member, and he hath acquainted you with a late unneighboorly and imperious carriage of the Dutch governor, when at least fifty of New Haven jurisdiction were on the way to plant there, but were seized, imprisoned and forced to return with great loss to those interested in that design, and hath derived your help in procuring a patent. These things by a petition from those concerned in the late loss and dis-appointment have been recommended to our consideration.

"We are justly sensible of the dishonor putt upon the English nation by this unjust affair and of our duty to preserve the title to so considerable a place as Delaware, and that a just repair and satisfaction be made to those wronged, both in their persons and estate." The letter concludes with inquiries about old patents and improvements on the Delaware, and how an engagment by the United Colonies against the Dutch would be regarded by the Parliament.

Gov. Eaton and the New Haven people were incensed against New Amsterdam, and had the other New England colonies made common cause with New Haven, a war with the Dutch might have ensued. "Every one expects a righteous indignation." In 1653 a wall was built on Manhattan Island as a defense against an expected invasion by the Puritan colonists of New England. The Historical Magazine for May, 1883, contains a picture of this wall. From it a famous street took its name (Wall street) and preserves the memory of its location.

It was certainly very unfortunate for Wm. Tuttle that he undertook this enterprise, for it involved him in considerable loss and disappointment at a time when the prospects of the New Haven settlement were very dark indeed; but it was a most happy thing for him, his family, posterity and country, that it utterly failed. In view of results as we see them to-day, the short sightedness of man and the benevolent overruling of Providence were never more clearly displayed. In 1652 the Swedish Governor, Printz, erected a fort at the mouth of Salem Creek as a defence against the Dutch, but it was no sooner occupied than it was "stormed by an enemy more active than the Dutch and more bloodthirsty than the Indians, and the garrison put to flight." The name of Muschetoesburg by which it was known thenceforth sufficiently indicates the character and success of the conquerors. In the two and a quarter centuries which have "circled away" since that event the United Colonies have expanded to "The United States," with a population more than five times greater than that of England and Holland combined in 1650. Great cities and prosperous communities have grown up around and beyond the disputed territory, to the utmost limit of the then unexplored continent; but the conquerors of the New Jersey Swedes still hold the fort, and the Delaware purchase remains in a condition but little if any improved from that in which Captain Turner found it. About fifteen years later some of these same men of Totoket, with others from Milford, headed by Jasper Crane and Rev. Abraham Pierson, father of the first President of Yale college, Robert Treat and Ovidiah Brue, founded on the banks of Passaic, a place at first called Milford (after the Connecticut town), now the city of Newark, N. J.

Failing in his commercial aspirations and enterprises, Mr. Tuttle betook himself, like his fellow colonists to the cultivation of the soil. In the care of his large family and property and in the performance of his public duties he doubtless found ample employment of mind and body. Besides the education and support of his children, numerous public duties devolved upon him—watchings, trainings, arbitrations between contending settlers, disputed boundaries of farms and towns, Juror, Constable, Road Commissioner, buying and selling of lands and we know not what besides. The Colonial records gives us an idea of the diversity of his activities and occupations.

In 1640 he was a commissioner to decide on an equivalent to those who had received inferior meadow lands in the first allotment.

In 1644 Mr. Wm. Tuttle and Jasper Crane were appointed fence viewers for Mr. Davenport's quarter. One of the duties pertaining to this office appears from the "petition of Robert Abbott and Wm. Paine to have their land on the east side laid out in a convenient form to fence. Jasper Crane and Wm. Tuttle were appointed to view it and consider how to lay it out." They located allotments and defined boundaries and in some other respects were the predecessors of the modern city or town surveyors in their official capacity.

He seems to have performed the duties of a Road Commissioner, for at a court held July 17, 1616 James Steward was complained of for contempt of Magistrate.<sup>5</sup> He was warned to work on roads but had no tools. Mr. Tuttle testified that he offered to lend him tools, provided he would make them good if he broke them; but Steward answered that he would not enter into their claws or paws. John Cooper testified that being one morning with Mr. Tuttle at the gate, James Steward came along with his cattle, and said: "What! Must I help you work?" Then John Cooper said: "You must help the town." James answered, he was unsuited and wanted tools. Mr. Tuttle offered him tools, but if he break them he shall make them good. He said "Noe, he would not come into their claws and paws; wherenpon Mr. Tuttle said he must make good the tools."

In 1646 Mr. Tuttle and Jeremy Watts were complained of for sleeping at the watch house. Mr. Tuttle said he was overcome, and Jeremy being sentinel, he sat down on the threshold and slept. They were both fined.

He was prominent in the settlement of boundary difficulties. At a town meeting, April 11, 1653, "It was ordered concerning the Indian lands spoken of at the last court that Thomas Jeffrey, John Brockell, William Tuttle and Robert Talmadge should be committee to view the groand which they say is theirs, and to advise them for the best about fencing, etc., that we may not have so much complaint from them about cattle and hogs spoiling their corn, which they say makes their squaws and children cry."—Bacon's Hist. Disc.

In the trouble about bounds between Branford and New Haven, James Bishop, Lieut. Thomas Munson, Wm. Andrews, John Moss and John Cooper, sr., were chosen as commissioners for New Haven; afterwards, Wm. Tuttle was substituted for John Cooper. Branford chose John Wilford, Thos. Blatchley, Michael Taintor, Thos. Harris and Samuel Ward. These commissioners met Oct. 5, 1669, and after full debate and consideration the bounds were set and the case forever ended.—Conn. Hist. Soc. Papers.

A boundary agreement between New Haven, Milford, Branford and Wallingford was subscribed to May 1, 1672, by John Nash, John Cooper, Wm. Tuttle, Jeremiah Osborn, John Miles and John Clark, for New Haven; and Benjamin Fenn, Wm. Fowler, Daniel Buckingham, Sylvanus Baldwin and others, for Milford.—Ibid.

In personal misunderstandings and disagreements among the colonists Mr. Tuttle was often called upon for advice or arbitration. "At a court in Jan., 1646, Mr. Pell, plaintiff, Mr. Caffinch, defendant, for £59, were entreated by the court to put it into arbitration. Mr. Pelch chose Anthony Thompson; Mr. Caijach chose Mr. Tuttle, to whom were added Mr., (afterwards Gov.) Francis Newlin and Mr. Crane."

"At a court held Sept. 8, 1648, Henry Bishop stated that he had a difficulty with Mr. Davenport and had asked arbitration, but could get none. Had asked Mr. Wake- man, Mr. Tuttle and Mr. Richard Miles. The court thought they were fit men."

Courts, consisting of the Governor or Deputy Governor, two or three Magistrates or "Assistants," as they were called, and six jurors, selected from among the best men, were held from time to time for the trial of various causes.

In the records of these courts, Wm. Tuttle often appears as a juror, his title of Mr. always punctiliously observed. The following record shows how sparingly it was bestowed: "At a court held Nov. 10, 1669, Mr. Wm. Leete, Dep. Gov. Mr. Benj. Fenn, Mr. Wm. Jones and James Bishop, assistants; Roger Alling, John Cooper, Abraham Doolittle, John Winston, John Osborn and Mr. Wm. Tuttle, jurors." James Bishop was a representative or member of the General Court, Secretary of State and afterwards Dep. Gov. Roger Alling was Treasurer of the Colony and dea. of the church. John Cooper was Agent of the Iron Works at East Haven. Abraham Doolittle was Sheriff of New Haven County, and in this very year of 1669 was chosen to superintend the affairs of the new settlement at Wallingford. John Winston and John Osborn do not appear prominently in public employment. The latter is the ancestor of the New Haven Osborns. A daughter (Elizabeth) of John Winston was wife of Samuel Alling, son of Roger. Another daughter (Mary) was wife of Thomas Trowbridge and ancestress of the present New Haven family. Mr. Tuttle was Juror again in July, Nov. 8 and Nov. 25, 1671, and he is last recorded in this capacity, June 12, 1672, about a year before his deceas".

In March, 1666-7, William Tuttle took the Constable's oath.

In 1664 Mr. Tuttle expounded to the court about taking the youngest child of Robert Hill, the widow being willing to part with it. In the afternoon the court considered the matter. June 7, 1664, Mr. Tuttle informed the court that his cousin, Widow Hill, had come to an agreement with him about Nathaniel. The court advised it put in writing and recorded.

In 1664 a young girl was charged with pilfering from her master and from others, among other things some liquors. She tried to implicate Mercy Tuttle in the crime by saying that Mercy met her at Goodman Thorpe's and drank some of the liquor. Mercy (aged 14) denied it and the charge as to her was shown to be utterly false. The girl's crime, therefore, was aggravated by lying and bearing false witness. Before sentence was pronounced, Mr. Wm. Tuttle, having liberty to speak, addressed the court, and "with great affection" said the young girl's sin was very great, yet he did much pity her, and he hoped the Court would deal leniently with her and put her in some pious family where she could enjoy the means of grace for her soul's good." The Court, in consideration of this appeal, and of the fact that others against whom she had offended had not made complaint, said that her punishment should be as light as comported with a proper sense of the heinousness of her sin, and "for her soul's good" she was sentenced "to be publicly and severely whipped, tomorrow after lecture." It is a gratification to find that our ancestor's ideas about the public whipping-post as a means of grace or as an instrumentality for the reformation of young girls were somewhat in advance of his time.

The exact date of his death does not appear. It was in the early days of June, 1672. The record of his inventory follows immediately after that of Benjamin Ling, which was taken June 6, 1673. At a court held June 19, 1673, a paper was shown by which Wm. Tuttoll and John Tuttoll conveyed to Wm. Bassett a lot of 60 acres of outland on west side of New Haven East River, (Quinnipiac) running from the Meadows westward towards Mill River, bounded in part by land of Wm. Potter and Thomas Beaumont. Wm. Tuttoll died before signing the deed.

Court, June 8, 1674, Mrs. Elizabeth Tuttoll said: "My late husband, Mr. Wm. Tuttoll of New Haven sold unto John Jones of New Haven 60 acres of outland near Stony River, being part of his 2d division, and Mrs. Elizabeth Tuttoll, wid. and relict and lawful administratrix of deceased, desired it might be recorded to Joane Jones, wid. of John.

Signed,

E. (Her mark).

Mr. Wm. Tuttoll, about a fortnight before his death, appeared before James Bishop, Assistant, and acknowledged sale and satisfaction and desired it might be recorded to Widow Jones.

No will or mention of will has been found, and it is probable that he made none, his wid. calling herself his lawful administratrix, and that he died suddenly.

His dust lies under the sod of the Old Green, exactly where, we know not. As social distinction was never lost sight of even in the place of graves, we may conclude that he was buried among the honored men of the colony.

The last remainder of his estate was distributed in 1709 to his children, or to their heirs. It was divided into eleven parts. Joseph Tuttle, a grandson, appealed from this division to the court at Hartford, and deposited bonds to the amount of £20 to make his plea good.

From the foregoing we may infer that Wm. Tuttle was the equal, socially, of any of the colonists; that he lived and brought up his children in a manner befitting his condition, and carefully provided for them the means of starting in life. That he was a man of courage, enterprise, intelligence, probity and piety; a just man, whose counsels and judgments were sought to calm the contentions and adjust the differences of jarring neighbors, and willing, of a ten leanness of heart unusual in men whose lives were passed in strife and conflict with despotism, barbarism, and the savage forces of nature. Through all these years, that may truly be said to have tried men's souls, and to the last, he possessed the respect and confidence of men whose souls were tried like his own.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tuttle died Dec. 30, 1684, aged 72 years. She had been living with her youngest son, Nathaniel, who, at a court held in New Haven, July 28, 1685, presented her will, but "the other children objected and the court would not allow it." The inventory (App. 603), taken Feb. 3, 1685, by Moses Mansfield and John Ailing, indicates a ladylike refinement in apparel and household appointments. That she was a faithful and true wife and mother we have good reason to believe. All her twelve children were reared to maturity amid privations, dangers and trials, of which the mothers of the present day can hardly form a conception, and which very few indeed would have the courage to face or the strength to endure. In her widowhood heavy afflictions were added to her weight of years, but the religious faith and hope which she publicly professed in her youth, no doubt supported her as nothing else could do through all the dark and troubled way, and unto the end. The name of Elizabeth was a favorite one among her children and later descendants, especially in the line of her namesake and daughter, while that of William (singularly) was not given to any of the eight sons, and to but one of the numerous grandsons.

Signature, 1677,

Her grave stone was removed with the others in 1821, from the Old Green to the Grove street cemetery, and it now stands in the row along the north wall of that enclosure. A part of the inscription is still plain; a part is obscure by the crumbling of the stone, and a part is entirely gone. Some "Old Mortality" has recently retouched the letters, and brought out a few that were before uncertain. It is still but a fragment, like a faint and broken whisper from the far distant and still receding past:

*John and James Clark in New Haven, etc. John three polls, rate 2s 6d. James four persons, rate 5s; removed to Stratford. In History of Southington, Conn., Samuel is called s. w. of James. John S. Clark, Esq., of Ansonia, N. Y., thinks Samuel was of Lieut. William Clark's family, who came from England to Purfleet in 1635 to Northamptonshire, and d. at 82. His son William removed to Lebanon, Conn., and by marriage to Thomas and Timothy, the latter resided in Lebanon. It can not be mistaken in the identity of Joseph Clark as the grantor in 1710 to Ebenezer Beecher of right in his land out to Grandfather John Clark, then it follows that John was father of Samuel. The latter was doubtless nearly related to at least two of the three Windham county Clark families. In Lebanon very early there were descendants of the earliest families of this name, viz.: Lieut. William, a member of the First Regt. Secretary of the colony, and John. In 1715 a Phinehas, John and Timothy Clark in Middletown, got homed to be annexed to Hampton, being within four miles from that meeting house.

<sup>8</sup>In 1741 John Clark and wife, Deborah, of New Haven, conveyed to Capt. Dickerman right in land laid out to Nathaniel Potter. Perhaps he removed to Windsor, a county.

He d. about three mos. after his wif., aged 82. They lived together 63 years, had six chil., of whom two d. yng. Ruth, from Burlington to New Hrrf., Conn. 1, Ruth, d. of cons., about 1829, aged about 22; unm. 2, Rufus, m. ——. 3, Nancy, b. about 1819; d. of cons. in her 18th year. 4, Chloe, b. about 1812.

Chloe Lankton.—While waiting for the cars at New Hartford the other day, I called on Chloe Lankton, who, as your readers know, has been confined to her bed for the last forty seven years. At the age of eighteen she lost the use of her limbs, and from that time has been unable to walk a step. Although in constant and severe bodily pain, she is sociable, pleasant, and looks younger than many women of forty. Her hair is a darkish brown, her eyes retain all their youthful lustre, her manner resigned, hopeful and patient. Her complexion is good, and in short she is a pleasant, good looking person.

Her present home is a story and a half house, painted white, and stands about forty rods west of the Connecticut Western depot on the north side of the road. The room she occupies fronts the street on one side. A low, broad window has been substituted for a narrow one, adding a great deal to the cheerfulness of the room. The place was a present to her. Mr. Russell Sturgis, a Boston millionaire, contributed a hundred dollars, Professor Morse, of telegraphic renown, another hundred; friends in New York and Philadelphia gave considerable, while friends at home, and Sunday schools at home and away from home have all helped to raise the cost of the place—$800 I think—and it is now hers, a fact for which Chloe Lankton is very thankful.

In 1859 the American Sunday School Union of Philadelphia published a sketch of her life, a copy of which I remember to have read some years ago. Her room is a perfect museum of curiosities, which she enjoys showing. She has perfect use of her hands, using them to make an endless variety of fancy articles, some of which find a slow sale. Physiologically, Chloe Lankton is an interesting study. That any mortal can live nearly half a century, suffering intense burning pain year after year, spending the long, weary hours in bed in a 10x12 room, with the dull certainty that as long as she lives her sufferings will increase rather than lessen, and still look as young and happy as she does, is certainly most extraordinary.—M. J. W. in Litchfield Inquirer, 1877.

The sketch above referred to is a 12 mo. of 236 pp., entitled, "Chloe Lankton, or Light Beyond the Clouds, a Story of Real Life." It contains her portrait and an engraving of her home. It is one of the most beautifully written, pathetic and absorbing of stories.—Craig.

When he was 100 yrs. old it was celebrated in Wolcott by a centenary meeting, at which a sermon was preached and a good time had. He was of great vigor of body and mind, a Calvinist of the strictest sort, prejudiced against college education, as, in his opinion, disqualifying for the more honest employments. Active in parish affairs, a very hard worker, and retaining his marvelous strength until past 80. At the age of 80 he challenged the young men of W. to a mowing match with him for a day; but none of them were bold enough to accept. He m. H. Isaac, b. July 19, 1761; d. April 28, 1845, aged 84; rem. to Wolcott 1794. When between 5 and 6 he began to learn his letters; before he was 8 years old he had read the Bible through in course and also every other book he could lay his hands on. His thirst for reading and knowledge was insatiable. His days were spent in fruitless wishes and his nights in dreams of books, and of college and of learning, for years together, until seeing no opportunity of obtaining a college education, he became greatly discouraged as to life, indifferent, and exceedingly bashful. His bashfulness was intensified by a strict and repressive home government—being well "kept under"; which, joined with his despondent state of mind, he says, nearly proved his ruin. This reserve, sensitiveness, and diffidence, gave to his usual manner and deportment an appearance of coldness and indifference to others, which was in fact the complete opposite of his real character, for "a warmer heart, probably, did not beat in Wolcott" than his. Hence in his addresses and prayers at funerals he was captivating and moving to a remarkable degree. All now living who have heard him say they "never heard his equal at funerals." His address on the death of Washington is spoken of as the most remarkable production of the kind ever heard in the town, and was talked of as such for years. The same is said of an address he gave at a conference of churches at Cheshire. It is not surprising therefore, that he is spoken of as "The great man of Wolcott." He was dea. of the chh. from 1805 to 1815, and from 1822 to 1827 performed the duties or supplied the place of pastor to the chh., distinguishing himself in conferences and public meetings; rep. in leg. 5 years in succession, 1811 to 1815; and in society, chh., and town one of the most active and highly esteemed men that ever lived in W.; sometimes holding 18 or 20 offices and never less than 12; justice of the peace 8 years; surveyor of land so long that he knew at once where to go to commence tracing any line in the town. A. Bronson Alcott says: "No man ever lived in W. with such natural gifts as he, and had he received a liberal education he would have equaled any of the great men this state has produced." "He impressed every one with his deep sincerity and neatness to God." Several specimens of his composition, both prose and verse, are given in Mr. Orient's Hist. of Wolcott. [See p. 287 to 297.] Near the close of his life he seemed determined to destroy his writings and unfortunately succeeded, excepting his journal and eight or ten other fragments, which his daughter, Mrs. Bartholomew, succeeded in putting out of the fire while they were burning in the dooryard where he had made a bonfire of them. The death of his eldest son Isaac, Oct. 13, 1892, at the age of 18, was a terrible blow to him, and in his journal of that date he gives a touching expression of his sorrow, and describes him as "my Isaac, the son in whom I greatly delighted," always faithful, dutiful and obedient; apt to learn; delighted with reading; a retentive memory; reflecting; penetrating in judgment; scrupulously truthful at all times; modest, sober and temperate in all things. Some verses written by the father on visiting the grave of his son, soon after the burial, and on the morning after a violent storm, are given in Hist. of Wolcott, p. 291-2, from which the following are copied:

"When solemn darkness veils the midnight skies,
And the huge tempest bellows o'er the plain,
Here in the dust, my once loved Isaac lies,
Nor beats the howling winds, nor drenching rain."

"O! my fond heart, resign parental joys,
Nor heed to see him 'till the final hour,
Siree as I go to move him out Jehovah's voice;
With the sure efforts of Almighty power."

In consequence, she became sick nigh unto death, but recovered and lived on a half century or more.

"The most unpromising officer that left Camp Dutton with the old Nineteenth was First Lieutenant Augustus H. Fenn. He was but eighteen years old, of freckled face and awkward gait, and was regarded with surly contempt by windy and consequential brother officers. Every private soldier too, had his sling at him. It was considered very impudent in him to be an officer, at all; but he had recruited his forty men and there he was with a commission in his pocket from Governor Buckingham. There was no getting away from him, and he was assigned to company K, which was a kind of regimental Botany Bay. (That company had been formed by transfer of what the captains of the other nine companies considered their refuse; but it was, nevertheless, one of the best, most faithful, truest companies that ever went into the service). But three years of fighting blew away a good deal of showy incompetency and revealed true merit wherever it existed. Lieutenant Fenn grew in the estimation of his fellow officers and of all who knew him, until there was no tongue that dared to wag against him. He proved himself one of the best drill masters and disciplinarians in the regiment, and one of the most competent officers in every position. Before going to the front he was made captain of company C. On the 22d of June he led his company into the skirmish at Petersburgh as far as it advanced, and was then and there detailed A. A. A. general on Upton's staff, vice Captain Sanborn of the Fifth Maine; and, mounting a horse which had been brought to him, commenced his duties at once. When the regiment left the Sixth Corps at Tennytown in July he was relieved. In September he was appointed judge advocate of the division court martial, which tried twenty-five cases. At Cedar Creek he lost his left arm. The surgeons at Annapolis proposed to muster him out and discharge him for disability, but he protested, and wrote to General Mackenzie, urging his interference; the consequence was that he was retained, and in less than seven weeks from the time he had an arm taken off at the shoulder he reported for full duty at the front, and was at once detailed as A. A. A. general of the brigade again, which detail was afterward changed to brigade inspector. He subsequently participated in several fights. He was detailed as judge advocate five different times; was brevetted major after Cedar Creek; promoted to major in January, 1865; brevetted lieutenant colonel for Little Sailor's Creek, and colonel for 'services during the war.' He is now practicing law at Waterbury, Connecticut. Truly, in his case, the last became one of the first"—Major T. F. Vail. He m. 13641. Isaiah Tuttle, b. May 25, 1753; built the first house in the n. e. cor. of Torringford, and in 1803 built a new house near the first, in one or other of which his descendants for several generations were born and lived. He kept tavern in both houses. After planting his orchard, he burned the field over, first turning down the trees and covering them with earth. This orchard is still standing. In his early days, that part of the country was a wilderness, and fires were necessary to keep away bears and wolves. "The old Major," as he was called, was considered a very remarkable man, and his sayings and doings are often quoted in that region. It is remembered that he used to back his grain four miles to mill. He was one of a trio who first voted the Democratic ticket in the town of Torr., and on one occasion at a public meeting they were asked by members of the opposing party to stand up that they might be seen. The character of the Major was little understood by his opponents if they thought he was ashamed of his opinions, or lacked courage to avow and defend them. Hon. John Boyd, in his Hist. of Winchester, says: "A hardy race were these South st. pioneers, from Still River bridge down to Isaiah Tuttle's, who sittid their corn meal for hasty pudding through a ladder. The Major remarked that by working bare footed in the stubble fields, that their heels became so hard that if they happened to tread on the feet of their cattle it would make them bellow. Apropos of the Major," continues Boyd, "the horse tamer who could ride anything but chain lightning. He had in a lot with other cattle, a ten year old bull which he ordered his s. and hired man to drive out and put elsewhere; they went in, and, after chasing the animal a long time around the field, they gave it up, and reported to the Major that they could not get him out. He said he was very sorry he had a s. and hired man who could not get a bull out of a lot; he would try what he could do with the 'critter.' He provided himself with a dish of salt, and, on his way to the lot, cut two stout clubs; letting down the bars he approached the cows with the salt; as the bull came up to get his share, the Major, watching for an opportunity, suddenly sprang on his back; away went the startled bull, scared and bellowing hideously, and as he sped over the ground, his rider, by blows of the clubs on one side or the other of his head, as he desired him to veer this way or that, guided him across the field and through the bars out into the highway under full sail. This," says Dr. Boyd, "somewhat indicates the spirit and energy of the Major and also of his descendants. They were prompt, energetic, spirited and courageous; and the end is not yet. With his boys he was felling timber on top of the same ridge of mountains. They felled a tall tree so that one-third of its length extended over a precipice some 20 or 30 feet. The Major ordered his eldest boy to go out on the trunk and cut away the top. Uriel went out, and, after striking a few blows, came back with a swimming head. Daniel was sent out to finish the job, but soon came back equally dizzy. After dazing away, in his characteristic manner, at his boys for their want of pluck, the Major took up his axe, and went out himself, and chopped away until the top of the tree unexpectedly yielded. His feet were one on each side of the chopping, and as the one on the top section of the tree yielded he lost his presence of mind, and, instead of grasping the main body, threw his arms around the falling section and went down with it. The boys hastening round the precipice came down to the landing place and found the Major bruised and wounded, but on his feet, wiping away with green leaves the blood that was flowing into his eyes and mouth from a wound in his forehead. 'Father,' said one of the boys, 'you've had a terrible fall.' 'Yes! Yes!' said the Major, 'a terrible fall. Adam's fall was nothing to it.' He m. March 22, 1774, Ruth, dau. of Capt. IV. Uriel, b. Oct. 13, 1779; rep. Tor. in Conn. Leg. May, 1815 and 1828; Gen'l of mil. Gen. Chas. J. Sedgwick, historian, of Sharon, Conn., who served as aid on the staff of Gen. Tuttle, in a letter to the Comp., says: "He was a man of remarkably fine personal appearance, a splendid rider and particularly fond of fine horses. His influence was large in the town and county, and considerably so throughout the northern part of the state." In the Torringford centennial, by Rev. Samuel J. Mills, Gen. Tuttle is spoken of as having played (1831) an organ in the chl., for which thanks were voted by the society (1835). He d. April 4, 1849. The following is from a communication from Dea. Thomas A. Miller to "Brother Burleigh," and printed in the "Republican" newspaper: "Died, on the 4th of this month, of an affection of the heart with which he had been troubled a number of years. He dropped dead in his barn in the morning. His virtues were numerous, his philanthropy enlarged, which only those who knew him best could appreciate. Eye quick to perceive, heart to feel, and hand to relieve the wants and woes of his fellow men; ready to enlist in any effort for the amelioration of suffering humanity. With an indomitable energy, he would surmount and overcome the most formidable obstacles. He was one of the first to enlist in the temperance cause, and threw himself into that reform when there was nothing to gain but obloquy and reproach. He ever remained firm and undaunted in this cause. Only a few hours before he was struck down he was engaged in devising plans for its advancement. His efforts and untiring zeal in the cause of emancipation are too well known to the public in this state to need a delineation. For many years and until his death he was President of the Litchfield Co. Anti-slavery Society, and, if I am not mistaken, was at the time of his death, President of the Connecticut State Anti Slavery Society. His house was a refuge for the fugitive, and his purse and team were often employed to help him forward to a place of safety. No man watched with more interest the advance of his cause in this and other lands. His funeral was attended on the 6th by an immense concourse, who came from neighboring towns to testify respect and cast the last look upon that countenance which had so often led and cheered them on in the various works of philanthropy. Your afflicted brother, T. A. Miller." He m. Feb. 25, 1801, Adah, dau. of Daniel and Mary (Coe) Hudson, of Tor., b. Feb. 8, 1778; d. 1866. 1, JOHN HUBBARD, b. June, 1835, Josiah Whipple Jenkins of Barre, Mass.; cous. of Timothy; set. in Vernon 1829; lawyer; eminent and successful; fond of rural pursuits, public spirited, adorned his farm and planted long rows of shade trees in the public streets of Vernon. These now lofty and full grown, living and beautiful memorials, better and more enduring monuments than the granite that marks his last resting place. He d. of typhoid fever Oct., 1852; a. 47 yrs. 1, DAVID TUTTLE, b. May 4, 1836; studious, considerate, mature in judgment, and so helpful to his mother, that he seemed to fill his t's. place in the fam. Grad. Polytechnic Inst. at Troy, N. Y.; stud. law and began practice. The war breaking out "he did not leave home," writes his mother, "until the second yr., as my second s. went at the first call, and David was so necessary to the fam. that I felt I could not spare him." But the following year when the armies became decimated, and the President called for 'three hundred thousand more,' and the military committee of the county decided to raise another regiment, David, by their recommendation was appointed Adjutant. In the work of organizing the regiment (446 N. Y. vols.) he was indefatigable, and received his commission as Major. Col. Gerrard, then recently in command at West Point, was its first Colonel. On the arrival of the regt. at Albany, David was commissioned Lieut.-Col. by the Gov. on the recommendation of Col. Gerrard. The regt. remained one month in camp at Arlington Heights; then ordered to the front and taking part in the battle of Fredericksburg, only three mos. from its organization. Subsequently engaged in all the battles of the 'Army of the Potomac,' it earned the title by which it was everywhere known, of 'the fighting regt.' At the battle of Gettysburg Col. Jenkins commanded the regt., Col. Gerrard commanding the brigade. Soon after that great battle David was commissioned Col. and a few months before he died he commanded the brigade, and his name had been forwarded for a com. as Brig.-Gen. He was in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Rappahannock Station, Bristol Station, Mine Run, Williamsport, Washington Heights, and lastly in the dreadful carnage of the Wilderness where he fell, bravely charging the enemies batteries." From the Washington National Intelligencer: "Killed in the battle of the Wilderness, May 5, 1864, Col. David T. Jenkins of Vernon, Oneida Co., N. Y. Alas! how much of the great history of disappointed hopes, worthy ambition, tender affection, deep sorrow and unspeakable grief, may be compressed in the record of a single sentence. In the loss of Col. Jenkins one more offering has been sacrificed on the costly altar of patriotism, a career of bright young promise closed, a spire of active usefulness terminated, a source of influence in the community where he had been known from childhood and had grown into a respected manhood cut off, and a home bereaved of one in whom all the domestic affections were strong, deep and fervent. He was a young man of more than ordinary worth, of more than average ability of culture, of solid qualities and of commanding influence; and it is due alike to the living and the dead, that such should be honored in a grateful remembrance." The Utica Herald, in speaking of our losses in that battle says: "In that conflict we lost Col. David T. Jenkins, than whom a braver or more meritorious officer never lived. He was accounted one of the best engineers in the Army of the Potomac, who were not West Point graduates. He was unacquainted with the science of arms when he entered upon his military career, but industrious study, added to a clear, ready and comprehensive mind, made him the superior of most of the volunteer officers of similar rank. He was rigid as a disciplinarian, but the testimony in the army is that he was a most excellent officer. He participated, always bravely, in the great battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, and now leaves behind him an undying record. He was one of the best surveyors in the county, and previous to joining the army, had entered on a promising practice as a lawyer." Extract from the Utica Observer: "His (Col. Jenkins) ability, integrity and unassuming worth, caused him to be held in the highest estimation wherever he was known, and he was considered one of the most promising young men in the county." I might copy long pages from obituary notices regarding him in our county papers, but the above will show the estimation in which he was held, and I will now finish the record of the test of the desc. of my f.—*Mrs. Flora J. 137528. Timothy John Dawson, b. Aug. 13, 1788; d. Cazenovia, N. Y., March 2, 1843; a most excellent man; enjoying the esteem and love of the community in which he lived in a very high degree; perfectly honest and truthful, with his father's peculiar tendency to humor, and an almost womanly gentleness and tenderness, traceable perhaps to his mother. He was somewhat above the medium stature and poss. a fair degree of physical vigor. He m. in W., Conn., Feb. 8, 1813, Ruhamah Roberts, b. Very fond of company and noted for hospitality and practical benevolence. After the war of 1812 the country was overrun by poor wayfangers, beggared by the evil fortunes of the times. Many of these found his door open. He nursed the sick, kept the footsore till they were healed, helped the destitute to clothing or shoes, and assisted them to find employment or self-help. He was supported in all this by his wise and frugal helpmeet, never weary in well doing. Fond of pets, he had the art of making every helpless and dependent creature love him. Flocks of birds came daily every summer to be fed by his hand. Charitable in judgment, he allowed no censoriousness or gossip among his children. "If you have nothing good to say don't say anything." He had a store of humor and amusing anecdote, and was usually very cheerful, yet suffered sometimes from extreme depression, but the shadows were short lived and the sun soon shone again. He had a strong affection for his kindred. A remote, common ancestry or identity of family name endeared persons to him as if life-long friends and he never forgot them. A true friend. A genial companion. His word was law in his family, yet so loving and indulgent, that no one wished it otherwise. "His life was gentle and the elements so mixed in him that nature might stand up and say to all the world, this was a man."

Retiring from the practice of law, banking was his principal business until 1868, when he became Pres. of the Scoville Manuf. Co., to which he has since devoted a large part of his time. He has taken an active part in the public improvements of the town, and his name has been brought forward in connection with some of the highest offices in the state, but he has no inclination for political life, and seeks relaxation from business in literary occupations and in local public affairs. II. Julius Jesse Bronson Kingsbury, b. Oct. 18, 1797; stud. with Rev. Dr. Bennett Tyler, then of So. Britain, Conn.; Rev. Mr. Hart of Plymouth, and Rev. Daniel Parker of Ellsworth, Conn. In 1819, through influence of Hon. David Daggett, then U. S. Sen., was app. Cadet at West Pt. Mil. Acad. whr. he grad. and was attached as 2d Lieut. to 2d Regt. Inf.; ordered with a detachment of troops to Sault de St. Marie, at the outlet of Lake Superior, to assist in building Fort Brady. Here he remained three or four years under Major (Col.) Cutler, during which time (while on leave of absence to the East) he m. Jane C. Stebbins, sis.-in-law of Capt. W. Becker, also of the 2d Regt. He was next ordered with a detachment by sea to New Orleans and Nacogdoches. Afterward stationed for a time at Mackenaw and Fort Gratiot. During the Black Hawk war in 1832 he was at Chicago, attached to the Commissary Depart. and saw much hard and dangerous service. While there he bought for seven hundred dollars about thirty-six acres of land on the north east branch of the Chicago River near its junction with the south branch; also about two acres on the south side of the main river; the latter tract in the heart of the present city, and the former but a little way distant. The land, after much litigation, is still in possession of the fam. and of great value. When the purchase was made in 1832 Chicago contained but five small stores and two hundred and fifty inhabitants. The present "Kingsbury Square" was named for him. He was afterward at Fort Niagara; later, during the disturbance on our north eastern frontier, he was stationed at Hancock Barracks, Houlton, Me., thence to Tampa Bay, Fla. (Seminole war) where he remained three yrs. (excepting a short interval), and his constitution was so broken by the climate, exposure and fatigue that he never recovered. On his return to the north he was stationed at Sackett's Harbor and afterward a second time at Fort Brady. Thence, early in 1847, to join Gen. Scott by Vera Cruz, assisting in the capture of that place, and more or less engaged in all the battles on the march to the city of Mexico. For good conduct in one of these engagements he was breveted. Throughout the campaign he acted as Lieut. Col. of his regt., though by rank only a Capt. While convalescing from a severe attack of brain fev., Gen. Scott sent him home on sick leave. In Dec., 1848, ordered with a part of his regt. to California, where he remained two yrs., while there was promoted, and transferred to 6th Regt. In 1850 he returned home, too much out of health for duty, and spent the next two yrs. at Washington and at the East on sick leave. Then, on his way to St. Louis, was detained at Detroit by sickness, where he spent the winter of 1852-3. While there, owing to some misunderstanding with the War Dept., not impeaching his integrity or honor, his name was stricken from the army roll. Considering himself unfairly treated he declined to make any explanation or hold any communication with the Dept. Before he died, however, he settled all his accounts with the Govt. and received a balance that was due him. He d. at Washington, when on the point of leaving for the East, of a malignant dysentery, July 23, 1856. *The mo. of Mrs. Goodrich was a dau. of Rev. Mr. Colton of W. Hartf. By her first m. to Mr. Allen she had Anne W. (Mrs. Goodrich) and John Allen, a distinguished lawyer of Litchfield and M. C., of whom tradition says that he silenced Albert Gallatin by superiority of argument and eloquence. Mrs. Allen m. (2) Dr. David Austin of New Haven, and Gen. Burgoyne, while a prisoner at-large, boarded with her several weeks, perhaps months. Mrs. G., then a small girl, used to read newspapers to him, and once sitting in his lap read a paragraph in which he was spoken of as "John Burgoyne," at which he manifested so much indignation as to frighten the little girl.

The session of Cong. was drawing to a close and it was not thought probable that the bill would be reached. Prof. Morse, who had despaired of its passage, was preparing to leave for New York. In the morning, Miss Annie Ellsworth, then a young school girl, called to congratulate him. Her father, then Com. of Patents, and an intimate friend of Prof. Morse, had watched the House till the last moment. She said: "Father sent me to tell you that your bill was passed." He remained until the session closed, and yours was the last bill but one acted upon, and it was passed just five minutes before the adjournment; and I am so glad to be the first one to tell you." Mother says, too, that you must come home with me to breakfast." The grateful Prof. thanked her again and again, and assured her that she should send over the wires the first message as her reward. The matter was talked over in the family and Mrs. Ellsworth suggested the message which Prof. Morse referred to her daughter, and this was the one subsequently sent when the line between Wash. and Bell. was completed. Albert V. oil, his ast. being at the Mount Clare Depot in Balt., and Prof. Morse in the Chamber of the Supreme Court in Wash., and the circuit being found perfect, Prof. M. sent to Annie for her message, and it came: "We're safe Go wrought"—the first message ever transmitted by a recording telegraph. The story has been often told with many exaggerations, and has roamed about Europe with much romantic material attached to it, but the above is the simple, true statement.

After m. and rem. to Ridgefield, a great change occurred in the fortunes of her f. and expectations from that source were cut off; but she zealously devoted herself to her duties and was a pattern of conjugal co-operation and fidelity. She was a great lover of the beautiful in nature and often might be seen at the close of day retired and alone in contemplation. The lines of Pollock appropriately describe the scenes she loved and the temper of her mind:

"The moon awoke, and from her maiden face
Shedding her cloudy locks, looked nicely forth
And with her virgin stars walked in the heavens;
Walked nightly, though conversing as she walked,
Of purity and holiness and God."

#It is written of the poet, Percival, that after his grad. at Y. C., then a young man about 20, he returned home to Kensington (Berlin), "but found few who could respond to his own poetical and cultivated mind; yet there was one, the dau. of the Berlin pastor and the sister of the late 'Peter Parley,' whose beauty of person, elegant manners and refined tastes made her an attractive companion." At the parsonage he was always a welcome visitor, and with this young lady he "botanized in the fields and poetized in the library." It was with her that he found his most congenial society, and it is her name which occurs most frequently in the poems he now wrote. The following is a specimen of the breathings of his passion —

"The morn is blinking o'er the hills,
With softened light and colors gay;
Through grove and valley sweetly thrills
The melody of early day."

"The dewy roses, blooming fair,
Glitter around her father's ha',
But still my Mary is not there—
The fairest rose is far awa'!"

This was perhaps the most charming acquaintance that Percival ever had with any lady. Both were young and free from care. In the dewy freshness of emotion there was a delicate and tremulous enjoyment, which inspired the poet's verses; and this lady, like the Highland beauty of Burns, will ever live in the ideal passion of Percival's verse. But this never became an altar of the heart. The young lady was already engaged to another, and gave to Percival only the affection and sympathy of a familiar friend." —J. H. Ward's Life and Letters of J. G. Percival, p. 42-43.

V. Charity, Dec. 19, 1760; living, in good health, in 1856, a. 95; m. Dec. 21, 1786, Elisha Hawley of Ridgefield, Conn., b. March 14, 1759; d. April, 1850, a. 91; (s. of Thomas, jr., and g. s. of Rev. Thomas Hawley, the 1st pastor of R.) At the age of 18 was drafted and sent to N. Y.; his reg. was stationed at Corlear's Hook, from which the retreat was so hasty that the soldiers threw away their blankets and knapsacks; Elisha, however, retained his, and his Col. was glad to share with him during the stormy night which followed. Soon after his m. he and his wf. joined the Presb. chh. in R., and was afterwards elected Dea., which office he held during life. He always had excellent health, and his vigor of body and mind continued to the last. During the last summer of his life, in his 91st yr., he would work nearly all day with his men in the field. At the age of 80 (1838) he made the 4th of July address at R., and closed with singing "Hail Columbia." He was for a time chorister. In all his business transactions his chief concern was lest he should charge his neighbor more than the article sold was really worth. He was by trade a cabinet maker. Abounding in good works, his name will long be fragrant among the people where his long life was spent. (An obituary was written by Rev. Mr. Clark.) "It is strange to see in this world a man who always, and under all circumstances, seems to have as his master motive the wish to do just right; yet such a man was Dea. Hawley. Of a peculiarly mild and amiable temper, his countenance wore a tranquil and smooth expression. His hair was fine and silky and lay as if oiled, close to his head. He had a soft voice and an ear for music. He was a cabinet maker by trade, a chorister by choice, a deacon by vote of the church, and a Christian by the grace of God. In each of these things he found his place as if designed for it by nature and providence."—S. G. Goodrich in Recollections of a Life Time, vol. I, p. 225. 1, ELISHA. 2, JUDSON, merch. in N. Y. "Oh! ye who mourn
 With heavy temples o'er the smitten son
 Slain in his Saviour's service, know that pain
 Shall never vex him more. Peril and change
 And winter's blast and summer's sultry heat,
 And sinful snare—What are they now to him
 But dim remembered sounds?"

VIII. Elihu Burritt, b. Dec. 8, 1810; his early advantages of education limited to the common school and a small library of the village. An anecdote of his school days shows the benevolence of his character. The habit of whispering to each other in school hours had grown up among the scholars. To check this the teacher adopted a plan of placing a ferule in the hands of the first delinquent, who was made to hold it until it was passed to the next offender and so on; the last holder being detained after dismissal of the rest and severely punished. One day about five minutes before dismissal, a large boy who held the ferule contrived to entrap Lucy W., the largest and best girl in the school, into an act of whispering and so she became the holder, and would have been punished had not Elihu, whose sympathies were aroused in view of the impending crisis, drew the punishment upon himself, and became the scape goat for all the sinners of that day. A severe correction was administered to him by the teacher, but he bore it joyfully as it saved another from ill-merited pain and disgrace. He was very modest and his diffidence so great, that rather than meet the company at the marriage of his sister, he ran away, and being missed, was found after much search hid behind a barrel in the cellar. This diffidence attended him through life and was only overcome when some duty or principle was involved, and then he became as bold as a lion.

His father dying when Elihu was 18 yrs. of a., he apprenticed himself to a blacksmith and learned the trade thoroughly. Having an immense thirst for learning he devoted his spare time to reading and study. At the age of 21 he entered his bro's school and gave especial attention to mathematics, with the object of becoming a surveyor. He made rapid progress, but after one term in the school he found it necessary to return to the anvil. Every spare moment of his working hours were given to study, and seeing that the languages could be acquired under such circumstances with greater facility than mathematics, he procured a small Greek grammar, which he carried in his hat, and recurred to at every opportunity. Mornings and evenings were given to Latin and French. After a short period of work, he was able to devote another term exclusively to study, and went to New Haven for the advantages of proximity to Yale Col., but being ashamed at his age to ask for help in the elementary studies, he determined to learn Greek and Hebrew without aid. He began with Homer's Iliad and a Greek Lexicon with Latin definitions, and his success was such that he learned not only these languages, but also the benefit of self-reliance and the power of will and application. During this winter in New Haven he made rapid progress in the languages ancient and modern. The next year he taught an academy in a neighboring town, but his health beginning to suffer from confinement, he became a traveling salesman for a manufacturing concern; then bought an interest in a country store, where the financial reversion of 1837 found him, and swept away all his savings.

A new departure being necessary he walked to Boston, about 125 miles, hoping to find work and opportunity to study, but failed and retraced his steps to Worcester, where he found both, and gained admittance to the large and rare library of the Antiquarian Society, where he spent his evenings and leisure hours. Here he found a Celto-Breton dictionary and grammar, and was soon able to address a letter in this language—dated Aug. 12, 1838, the first and only one ever written in this country—to the "Royal Antiquarian Society of France." In return he received a commendatory letter of acknowledgment, and a very large vol. bearing the seal of the society. Having become more or less familiar with all the languages of Europe and several of Asia, he desired to turn his knowledge to practical account, and with this view wrote a letter to Hon.

Edward Everett. Out of this grew an offer from Mr. Everett of a free course at Harvard Col., which he was compelled to decline for the reason that manual labor in connection with study was indispensable to his health.

About this time he began to be known as "The Learned Blacksmith," and in 1841 to lecture by invitation before Lyceums and Associations in different parts of the country. His first lecture entitled "Application and Genius," was delivered sixty times during the first winter. Among the first at New Haven (in a hall on Church street, then used as a Congregational church, and now known as the "American Theatre,") before the "Young Mens' Institute," of which the compiler was a member, and distinctly remembers the lecture and the lecturer. His argument was that there is no such thing as genius, and that success is the result of patient and persevering application; and the impression made at the time still remains that he embodied in himself and illustrated in his history a partial refutation of his own theory. Between the words Application and Genius, use the plus sign.

As mere scholarship, learning or the acquisition of knowledge can never satisfy the soul of an earnest man while so much suffering exists that can be alleviated by human effort, he soon turned his attention to philanthropic labors. One of the first objects to engage his attention was the Peace Cause. "Peace on Earth and good will among men." To this he added the advocacy of freedom, temperance, self culture, cheap postage and other reforms, and in furtherance of these objects, established or edited several public journals, lectured, wrote letters, tracts, and newspaper articles, and devoted himself as wholly to human progress as he had done before to learning.

In 1846 he went to England in the same ship that carried the news of the friendly settlement of the Oregon Question. Here he remained three years working for the Peace Cause, traveling, lecturing, writing, circulating "Olive Leaves," organizing "Peace Congresses" in London, Manchester, Brussels, Frankfort and Paris. In 1847, the year of the great famine, he visited Ireland and spent two weeks in going from hut to hovel, and was so greatly distressed by what he saw, that he made a strong and earnest appeal to his native State for aid, which did much to intensify the sympathies of the benevolent, and resulted in sending a ship load of provisions from Boston to Cork, which were received with joyful demonstrations.

While in Europe he had observed that the high rates of international postage were very burdensome to the poorer classes; and on his return to America in 1849 he went to work with his accustomed zeal and energy to bring about a reform; by lectures, letters, tracts, newspapers, petitions and visits to Congressmen and high officials. To him more than to any other are the people indebted for the present increased facilities for international correspondence.

On his return in 1855 from a second visit to Europe, he observed the increased bitterness between the North and the South, on the subject of slavery, and was extremely anxious to avoid a rupture. His plan was a compensated emancipation, the money to be raised by the sale of the public lands. He believed it feasible, and labored as usual to bring it about. But it was too late. When war became inevitable he retired to New Britain to the home of a beloved sister and two pieces.

In 1863 he returned to England to fulfill one of the purposes of his first visit, namely, a pedestrian tour to gain an insight into the condition of the working classes. In 1863 and 1864 he walked from London to John O'theat's, and from London to Land's End, and published the results of his observations in two separate vols.

In 1865 he was appointed Consular Agent for Birmingham, Eng., and, as such, visited various manufacturing establishments and collected information concerning the industries and productions of the territory included in his consulate. This was published in a large vol. of 414 pages, abounding in valuable information, and withal, a very readable and entertaining book. Copies were sent to the State Dept. at Washington, and in return, Mr. Seward sent a highly complimentary letter to the author. While at Birmingham he also wrote The Mission of Great Sufferings, 250 pp. He also continued his correspondence with the London Peace Society and wrote articles for various papers, designed to interest, instruct and benefit the young. "His whole soul seemed to be fired with a desire to do those things which would tend to mitigate suffering and bless mankind. No man ever lived whose efforts seemed more unselfish or philanthropic in their character and tendency than those of Elihu Burritt." On resuming his studies at Birmingham he found that six different alphabets, and many words and phrases of other languages had escaped his memory, but they were regained with but little effort. He returned to America for the last time in 1870 and resumed his residence at New Britain with his sister and two nieces, the latter having presided over his household during the four years of his residence in Birmingham. He had managed to save enough out of his consulate to pay the debt incurred in purchasing his farm. It was a poverty-stricken tract, all covered with stones when he bought it, but with much toil he improved it greatly. Here he wrote Thoughts at the Pine, and most of the "inside articles" in his paper, North and South, were written on a barrel head in his barn. "The prospect from my hill," he says, "is magnificent, and I enjoy it more and more."

In 1854 he made arrangements to go to England to work up a grand international "Peace Congress," but while on the way to Quebec to embark, a serious illness compelled him to abandon the undertaking and return home. Afterward his labors were limited to his native city and its neighborhood. He established three or four weekly meetings in as many different parts of the town, for the benefit of those who lived at an inconvenient distance from the established churches; and paid all the incidental expenses out of his own scanty resources. In one section of the town he erected a building to accommodate 300 persons, doing nearly all the work with his own hands. He was deeply interested in the public schools, and as a member of the local Board of Education, frequently visited them and addressed the pupils; always a most welcome visitor. So in every good work he continued active as long as his strength was sufficient for it.

In the Autumn of 1878 he fully realized that his release was near. Less than a week before he died he said to some fellow-members of a club who called to give him the parting hand, "I hardly know whether to say good evening or good-bye." He was a sincere Christian, and was ready for the summons to go up higher. He d. March 6, 1879, a. 69.

Prof. Longfellow says: "I always had a great admiration for the sweetness and simplicity of his character, and was in perfect sympathy with him in his work." \* \* \* \* Nothing ever came from his pen that was not wholesome and good." Mary Howitt writes of his "stupendous knowledge of the languages," his "prodigious learning" his "large and benevolent heart, every throb a sentiment of brotherhood to all mankind." Of the languages to which he gave special attention were Amharic, Arabic, Basque, Bohemian, Celtic-Breton, Chaldean, Cornish, Dutch, Ethiopic, Flemish, French, Gaelic, German, Greek, Hebrew, Hindostani, Hungarian, Icelandic, Irish, Latin, Manx, Persian, Polish, Portuguese, Russian, Samaritan, Sanscrit, Spanish, Swedish, Syriac, Turkish and Welsh. <sup>2</sup> Thomas Powell may be the same who in May, 1664, was of Long Island, admitted to be sworn free-man of Conn. by commissioners of Huntington. He was dissatisfied probably with the recency of that colony to the union with Conn. as by royal charter provided, and may have been at Springfield, 1663. At least he bought land there but did not continue long, but went back to New Haven, but not to be on the list there of '66. He d. in New Haven 1688. His dau. Priscilla m. Hannah Tuttle, Joshua, Martha, Abigail, Mary and Esther, and one acre to Caleb Tuttle.—N. H. Rec. on account of gout 1689; about 1690 conv. to s. Caleb the lot that was bro. David's in Yorkshire Quarter. In 1701 conv. to s. John "right in the Wigglesworth lot (north side of chapel between High and York sts.) for which I paid £15 to my son-in-law Joshua Hotchkiss." Jan. 7, 1700, conv. to s. Thomas, and inv. of lands exhibited. In June, 1689, with Capt. Moses Mansfield, took inv. and appraisal of est. of James Davids (Col. John Dixwell). £276, 12s, 6d. Prest. Stiles says: "Thomas Tuttle, I have been told, assisted in laying out Mr. Dixwell, and there is some reason to believe he was the very person that privately dug Whalley's grave and assisted at his interment here."—History of the Judges, see app. He lived and d. on what is now a part of the College Square. The lot was assigned to Mrs. Constable in 1639. It fronted on Market Place (upper Green) about 170 feet, and extended back about half the square, between College and York, or nearly to High st. It contained about 1 1/2 acres. In 1652 Mrs. Constable sold the lot to Thomas Wheeler who sold it in 1657 to Thomas Tuttle, the lot adjoined that of his father on the south. The two lots occupied half the front on College st., between Chapel and Elm, and comprised the larger proportion of the south half of the parallelogram, now called "College Square." On these Tuttle homesteads the most ancient of the college buildings were afterwards erected. The old "Observatory" stands on about the center of the Thomas Tuttle lot, whose northern boundary line produced across the upper Green, passes through the middle of the "Old State House," the Dixwell monument and the Center church. It is in fact coincident with the meridian line of the original nine squares of the town plot, and its intersection with a line parallel to and a little west of Temple st. is the exact central point of John Proctor's lay-out. That point is in the porch or vestibule of the Center chh. Thomas Tuttle by deed dated May 13, 1710—about 5 mos. before his dec.—conv. the homestead to youngest s. Joshua, who 40 yrs after, 1750, conv. to the College a narrow strip on the south side, 20 feet wide by 250 feet deep (to make room for the south middle college) excepting a strip one foot wide on which a part of the house stood. This determines the location of the dwelling very closely. Excepting this strip, the property was held by Thomas Tuttle and his descendants for a period of 133 yrs., previously held by Mrs. Constable 13 yrs. (1639-1652), Thomas Wheeler 5 yrs. (1652-1657), Thomas Tuttle and dese. 123 yrs. (1657-1780); John Scott 16 yrs. (1780-1796), whose executors sold it to the College; whose period of possession, 86 yrs. (1796-1882), falls short more than one-third century of that of the Tuttle family; but they will catch up in 1820, unless they sell out and remove to Hartford in the mean time. About 1750 in a conv. of right of wid. of Joshua Tuttle the lot is described as bounded on the north in part by land of Benjamin Franklin, Esq., of Philadelphia. Thos. Tuttle d. He said "he never went to school but one day in his life and then the school didn't keep, it being Saturday. A great stammerer, eccentric and quick at r partee, a large number of his sayings are treasured up among the people of the town. When quite young he tried his hand at impromptu poetry. Repairing or renewing the meeting house was the matter and as usual the public mind was greatly disturbed. Mr. Swift, the pastor, tried in vain to calm the troubled waters. At a meeting called for the purpose of discussion, Mr. Swift called on Mr. Hotchkiss for his opinion. It was several minutes before he could speak a word, but finally said: "We've got an old church without a steeple, a good pastor and a quarrelsome people. There is my views." This speech had a good effect. On a later occasion it was moved by the deacons that we settle Mr. —— pastor over this church, which provoked some discussion, when Mr. H. moved "an important amendment—that this—this minister be set—settled on—on horse—back." Coming from New Haven on a lumber wagon one dark night, he was stopped on the road by two highwaymen, one seizing the horse, the other saying: "Give us your money or I'll knock h—l out of you in two minutes." He replied, "All the money I had with me I left at the toll-gate, and if you think I have h—l in me you may knock it out." This cool though stammering reply disarmed the robbers who let him go on without further molestation. He was a cooper by trade and at one time conducted an extensive business. "He d. 341. Mary Tuttle, b. May 6, 1593; d. Sept. 23, 1771, a. 79; m. June 16, 1596, John Ball, jr., b. Sept. 30, 1655. W. L. Stone, in his Reminiscences of Ballston and Stratford, says that John Ball of New Haven, father of the Rev. Eliphalet, was a second cousin of Mary Ball, the mother of George Washington. This is also stated among the descendants, who possess, it is said, proofs of the fact. They lived on what is now the College Square. The lot fronts on Chapel st. and extends from the west line of the Wm. Tuttle lot, nearly to High st., and was of the same depth. It contained about an acre and a half, and with the Wm. Tuttle and Thomas Tuttle lots, it formed an exact square, comprising nearly one-half the present College Square, and exactly one-fourth of the square bounded by College, York, Chapel and Elm st., one of the original nine. The Ball lot was first assigned to John Cockerill, who never occupied it. Then Thomas Fugill, the recording officer of the town, took it, and built a poorly constructed house and barn to rent. He left in 1646, under censure for making a false record for his own advantage. Alling Ball then took it on condition that the house should be put in good order by the town, which was done, and it became the Ball homestead and remained in that family one hundred and seventy years. From Alling Ball it passed to his s., Serjt. John, in 1719, and in 1722, to a son of the latter, Ensign John, who m. Mary Tuttle as above. Their son, Dea. Stephen Ball, succeeded to the property in 1732, and held it 68 yrs., to 1800, when his children succeeded, and they or their heirs sold it to the college in 1818. With the exception of a small strip next to the Wm. Tuttle lot, sold to the college in 1745, it had been in the Tuttle-Ball family 93 yrs. The present Art Museum and the Pierson (the first President) statue stands on the Ball homestead. John Ball d. Jan. 22, 1730, in his 46th yr., and in March, sm. yr., his wf., Mary, exhib. will dated Jan. 19, 1730, in which he calls himself John Ball, jr., and names sons John, Eliphalet, Timothy and Stephen, and daus., Mary and Hannah, inv. £1206 18s. 6d. (His father, of the same name served as dea. of the first chh. 41 yrs.) His bro., Rev. Ebenezer Punderson, Y. C. 1726, was the celebrated Episc. clergyman at Stratford, Conn.) In 1739, Dea. John Punderson, in right of his wf., Mary Ball, set off est. of John Ball, jr., as follows: wid., one-third; John, two-thirds of a farm in Westfield, etc.; Eliphalet, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$  acres in Yorkshire Quarter, etc.; Timothy, 49 acres in the 5th division; Stephen, land in the Yorkshire Quarter, etc.; Mary Atwater had Salt Meadows, on island, near Neck Bridge; Hannah had personal property. Scott of Ballston, who furnished to the compiler much of this account of the Ball family of Ballston. A sister of Gen. Gordon was wf. of Wm. McCrea of Ballston, a bro. of the unfortunate Jane McCrea. Jane McCrea lived with her brother, Col. John McCrea, in Albany. At the time of her tragical death she was on a visit to Fort Edward.—Hon. Geo. Gordon Scott, in Stone's Reminiscences of Saratoga.

war and saw much active service. "In 1780, a detachment from Major Carlton's force was sent to sack Schenectady, but instead of doing that, burned several houses in Ballston and forced Gen. James Gordon, with several of his neighbors, through the wilderness to Montreal, thence, after a few months, to Quebec, and kept in close confinement two yrs.; then conveyed to the Isle of Orleans, whence, with other Ballston prisoners, he contrived to escape, and after much suffering, reached Passamaquoddy Bay, where they learned that peace had been declared. In the summer of 1783 Gen. Washington and DeWitt Clinton visited Saratoga and Ballston and dined with Gen. Gordon. He was the first Supervisor of Ballston; County Judge; State Senator from 1797 to 1804, and Rep. in the 2d and 3d Congresses; d. at B., Jan. 17, 1810." — William Hoy of Saratoga Springs, in *Hist. Roger Sherman, prov. 1793, his son Stephen Ball, and brother-in-law and kinsman Jeremiah Atwater, being the other two wit. He was a large land owner. His house (according to the map of 1748) stood on Chapel st., about where the Yale Col. Art building now stands. At the time of the British invasion of New Haven in 1779, he had in his charge the silver communion service of the First chh., some of the cups of which are very valuable from historical associations. How to save this silver? The wide, open chimneys of those days usually contained a shelf inside high enough to be beyond common reaching distance. Taking his little daughter Mary, then about 12 yrs. old, he lifted her into the chimney with the silver in her hands, which she deposited on the shelf. The soldiers rummaged everywhere for valuables, but failed to discover it; and so it was saved and is still in use. See vol. I N. H. Col. II. Soc. Collection, Art Inv. of N. H. 1779, by Prof. Goodrich, also Capt. Chas. H. Townsend's Cont. Hist. Dea. Ball was taken prisoner on this occasion and was being marched down Chapel st. when Mr. Jared Ingersol saw him and obtained his release. At Dea. C., and in time became the sole proprietor of a large hat, cap and fur store, the business of which he conducted so prudently that he was always able to pay 100 cts. on the dollar, and to withstand the financial pressure of 1837: there being but one house in the same trade in N. Y. besides his own that could do so. While in N. Y. he became interested with Mr. Chichester in the coal business in Williamsburg. The death of Mr. C. was the occasion of the relinquishment by Mr. T. of his N. Y. business and removal to Williamsburg, where he soon laid the foundation of the large fortune of which he died possessed. While in N. Y. he was a mem. of Forsyth st. Meth. Epis. chh., and on removal joined the So. Fifth st. M. E. chh. was an active mover and large contributor towards building "that pride of the Eastern District," St. John's M. E. chh., cor. of Bedford ave. and Wilson st. Among other objects of his pious labors he gave especial thought and care to the No. Third st. Mission School. In 1811 he made a tour of Europe in company with his wife and Dr. Albert Wright and wife. Dr. Wright published a series of articles in a Brooklyn newspaper, in which his traveling companions were pleasantly alluded to. During a sojourn at Rome Mr. T. was very near to death's door with fever, but rallied and returned home quite well. Every spring however he had symptoms of the same sickness. The last attack was unusually sudden and severe and resulted fatally, May 25, 1874.—Brooklyn Paper. 4. ZELOTES, b. June 25, 1825. 5. FRANCIS REBECCA, b. March 28, 1832; m. June 3, 1857, Ezra B. While on a visit to New Hay., a party of British and Indians burned his house and murdered his whole family excepting a daughter, whom they carried away into captivity. After a fruitless search for her he returned to live with his friends in N. H., ruined and heart broken. Eventually he became deranged or unsettled in mind, manifested sometimes in long, moody fits of silence. On the morning of July 5, 1779, his friends fled for safety to the old Hubbard house near West Reek, bat could not induce Elisha to go with them. The British soldiers found him, beat him cruelly, and at last pried open his mouth with the point of a bayonet and cut out his tongue, perhaps because he would not answer their questions. A newspaper of Norfolk, Va., contained the following notice: "We take pleasure in recording the annexed tribute of respect to the memory of that excellent man and valuable officer, Lieut. John P. Tuttle of the navy. 'His soul has gone aloft.' It was our pleasure to be acquainted with Lieut. T., and we are enabled from our own observation, as well as from the testimony of many of his friends and shipmates to say that among its choicest spirits our navy does not boast a better officer or a better man. But a short time before leaving port on his last voyage he had the misfortune to be separated by death from the amiable partner of his bosom, who left him one child, an interesting little girl of two years, of whom he was dotingly fond. At a time when his early return was fondly looked for by his friends, the messenger of death arrived and summoned him to his final account. May the recollection of his virtues temper the poignancy of their grief at this afflictive event. At a meeting of the brother officers of the late Lion, J. P. Tuttle, held on Monday evening in this borough, it was resolved, unanimously, that they deeply deplore the death of that officer, and that in testimony of his irreparable loss to his country and to themselves, they will wear a badge of mourning for 30 days." The Connecticut Herald, in a notice, says of him: "Since he received his warrant in 1811 he has been most constantly in active service. Versed in the principles of naval discipline, eminently acquainted with the human character, disdaining a base action, indefatigable in the performance of his duty, he commanded himself to his superior officers. While, then, the navy is deprived of one of its brightest ornaments, an aged mother is bereaved of an affectionate son whose speedy return she had joyfully anticipated, and numerous relatives and friends of one whose candor, whose generosity, whose ardent and inevitable attachments they will always be proud to emulate." Surrendering to that vessel he was boarded, for deserters and several of the crew taken off. A court-martial resulted in the suspension of Com. Barron for five yrs. The course of Com. 35. John Tuttle, b. Dec. 5, 1669; when 12 yrs. of age he became jointly with his sis. Hannah owner of the house and lot of his g. f., Thomas Powell, by devise. It included the Wigglesworth lot, and a small original allotment to Thomas Powell of abt.  $\frac{1}{4}$  of an acre adjoining it on the west. Edward Wigglesworth, the grantee and first owner, built a house on it and sold it in 1646 to Samuel Wilson, who sold it in 1647 to Thomas Powell. It adjoined the Ball lot on the east, the same in depth, and with the Powell lot, the Bell lot and the William Tuttle homestead, occupied the whole front of Chapel st. between College and York, excepting the large lot on the corner of Chapel and York sts., which belonged to Joshua Hotchkiss, who also owned the next lot to it on York st. Thomas Powell d. in 1681, and his will giving the homestead to his gr. chil., John and Hannah Tuttle, provides that John should have the whole if Hannah did not marry. Henry White, in his superb article on The Land Titles of Yale College, is partly mistaken in saying that "Hannah did not marry, and John became possessed of the whole." Hannah m. abt. 1685, Joshua Hotchkiss, and so made good her title. Her f., Thomas Tuttle, bought her right for the benefit of his s. John, as appears by a deed of conveyance to John in 1701 of "my rt. in the Wigglesworth lot, for which I paid £15 to my son in-law, Joshua Hotchkiss," and about the same time he conv. to John his rt. in the Powell allotment, and so John became the owner of the whole. II. Ruth, b. Oct. 24, 1704; bap. March, 1735. "Ruth Tuttle (1736), daug. of John Tuttle, lately dec., of N. Hay., conv. to Warham Mather the Pine Rock Field." Same yr. she conv. to John Bassett land laid out to Thomas Lowell. In 1737 she conv. to Moses Tuttle of N. Hay., "rt. in the house of my f., John Tuttle," and rt. in est. of sis. Moses; gives "to the Cong. chh. and soc. of N. Hay., which took benefit of the act of toleration, as a token of my love, all my rt. in a certain peice of meadow lying in the East Meadow, so called, which was set off to me by the freeholders in the div. of my f.'s est., in fee simple; to bro. Moses a red checkered coverlet, a pair of sheets, a suit of curtains, a great chair, four new pewter phares, and also all my land in the Pine Rock Field." Her X mark. The dower of the wid. of Japhet Mansfield, jr., was distributed in 1762 to Mary Sperry, wf. of Elihu, Rachel Tuttle, wf. of Stephen, Esther Beach, Martha Sperry, Sarah Tuttle, wf. of Amos, and Comfort Nichols, sis. of Japhet Mansfield; Ruth calls Hannah Todd "sister."

He resigned in 1853. A successor describes him as a faithful and orthodox minister. "His ministry at G. was blessed with prosperity and peace." Subsequently he preached at Windsor, Conn., (Wapping parish), three years, and afterwards at Southold, L. I., where he d. Nov. 21, 1785. The Powell homestead, of which Moses became owner of the largest share by inheritance and purchase of his sisters rights is now very valuable. The Yale Art Building stands partly on it, and partly on the Ball lot. High st. runs through it, and the brown stone houses and two or three frame buildings beyond are within its limits. The subjoined abstracts of deeds in relation to this property are interesting, and will become more so as time rolls on. April 9, 1739, Hannah Tuttle (wid of John), Lydia and Dorothy Tuttle convy. to Caleb Hotchkiss, jr., (Caleb 3d) July 14, 1762; Moses Tuttle "Clark," formerly of New Hay., now of Worcester Co., Md., Dorothy Peck and Lydia Mansfield convy. to Roger Sherman land lying westerly from Y. C., a half acre, for £31, bounded south by (Chapel) st., west by home lot of Caleb Hotchkiss, 3d, north by Punderson Austin's land, and east by our own land. The dimensions were 67 $\frac{1}{2}$  feet on Chapel st., by 83 $\frac{1}{2}$  feet in rear and 273 $\frac{1}{2}$  feet deep (reduce from rods and fractions in the record). Consid. £31. In 1763 same parties convy. to Nathan Beers land in Yorkshire Quarter, bounded south by st., west by James Dunbar's land, lately dec'd., north by our own land, east by Stephen Ball's, about three acres; consid. £10 1s. Nathan Beers was a very extensive land owner, his possessions reaching westerly from York st. a long distance, and this supposed a part of that tract. She was dau. of John Butler of Braintree, Conn. His dau., Thankful Todd, m. David Punderson, and received from her mo. one-sixth of Todd's estate mill. Caleb received deed of land from his f. Thomas T. 1792. In 1739 he conv. 20 acres in 5th div. to s. Thomas. In 1743 he bought of Daniel and Abigail Atwater 62 ac. in land laid out to John Newman; and eleven yrs. afterwards, 1754, Caleb's chil. sold it to Nath. Heaton. This conv. was made by James, Enos, Timothy, Abram, May w. of Timothy Ford, and Eliphalet of Litchfield. Caleb Tuttle was prominent in the first secession from the First Society, a movement which resulted in the face of a powerful opposition in the organization of the Second Ecclesiastical Soc. in N. H., now known as the "North church". The first meetings were held in the house of Timothy

Jones (s. of Dept. Gov. Wm.), whose wf., says Prest. Stiles, was sis. to Caleb Tuttle's 2d wf. This house stood on the northwest corner of State and Court sts. until about 1878 when it was torn down to make room for a fine block erected by Hon. J. E. English [4]. The house becoming too small for the growing congregation, and being refused a place on the public square, they built in 1744 on the cor. of Church and Elm sts. (now occupied by St. John's block), the lot having been previously bought by Caleb Tuttle and Joseph Burroughs, and conv. to the Soc. This house afterwards enlarged and painted blue was known as the "Blue Meeting House." Its bell when first hung, was heard it is said in more towns than any other bell in New Haven Co. It was eventually iron. to Cheshire, Conn., and hung in the tower of the Epis. chh. In 1748, when the society employed John Curtis to preach, Caleb Tuttle and wife and David Punderson and wife, Thankful, conv. a half acre and 17 rods, fronting 100 feet on Elm st., for a parsonage lot. Caleb and his wf. Hannah had become owners of two-thirds of it by deed from her sons Joseph and John Todd in 1726. This was the Blue Meeting house parsonage lot, and is now the site of St. Thomas' Epis. chh. Mrs. Hannah Tuttle d. Oct. 27, 1748, in her 65th yr. Caleb d. 1751, intest., and court appt. s. Enos admir.: inv. £193; mentions 4 acres in Yardside Quarter. Prest. Stiles in his Hist. of the Judges says of Caleb Tuttle: "He was a plain good man whom I well knew, a man of integrity, very intimate with Gov. Jones' son, they having married sisters. * * * He was a zealous religionist and warmly captivated with characters distinguished for holiness and piety, and according to my idea of the man, whom I well remember, he would, I should think, have listened to the anecdotes and history of these pious and heroic sufferers with avidity and anxious and feeling attention. I doubt not he knew more about the subject than all his posterity, and he is the source of the information concerning the Whalley Stone," [App.]

Sept. 24, 1750; d. 1824, a. 74 yrs.; s. of Ambrose, s. of Wm., magistrate at Milford. A great reader and an original thinker. His chil. all grew to age of maturity except one; and it was their custom to gather annually on Thanksgiving day if no other. All the family were noted singers, and when the dinner was over all would rise and sing the old fugue tune, "Ocean," a hymn of praise and thanksgiving, beginning, "With songs and honors sounding loud." The children were educated under earnest religious influences, and were taught to endorse the traditional calvinistic faith and doctrine, until Mrs. Rhoda Fowler fell a victim to it in a religio-calvinistic mania, which continued many years; this modified essentially the views of some of the family. Noah Fowler championed the rendering of church music by a regularly organized choir separated from the congregation. Twelve members of his family were members of that choir, and he was appointed leader. Dea. John Cook represented the old system and strenuously opposed the innovation, going so far as to interrupt the public religious service of the congregation and bring a civil suit in the courts. The world kept moving just the same and Dea. Cook was obliged to give way. Mr. Fowler lived to the age of 74, and his wif. to the age of 93. "The fragrance of their names has hallowed for a hundred years the home where they lived and died."—Hist. of Torrington.

It was bought by the college to make room for Conn. hall (old south middle). It was the third land purchase made by the college; the second being in 1745 of a strip of the Ball lot. In 1760, Phoebe Tuttle, wid. of Joshua conveyed her right in this property to Asa Todd and Mary his wife. It is described as a house in New Haven and about  $\frac{1}{2}$  acres of land, bounded by the highway or the market place; north on land of Benj. Franklin, Esq., of Phila. in part and heirs of Samuel Mix, dec.; west on heirs of David Austin; south on land of Stephen Ball and partly on college land, James A. 4. Jonathan Tuttle, bap. in Charleston, Mass., July 8, 1637, m. Rebecca, dau. of Lieut. Francis Bell<sup>2</sup> of Stamford; b. Aug. 1613; d. May 2, 1676. About 1670 he began a settlement near the Quinnipiac River in what is now the southern part of the town of North Haven, and soon after, Ebenezer Blakeslee, John Humiston, Daniel and Thomas Barnes, Moses Brockett and later the Clarks, Tolls and others settled near the center. All these families have intermarried with each other, generation after generation and in many instances relationships are unusually complicated. The settlement was very slow at first, and for many years some of the planters buried their dead and attended chsh. in New Haven. Jonathan built a bridge over the Quinnipiac in North Haven, which was long known as "Tuttle's bridge," and by a decree of the court he was allowed to demand of each traveler passing over it, horse and man, 2 pence in money or 3 pence in pay (barter); exception was made in favor of deputies going to court. He was also allowed to take moderate compensation for any refreshment or drink furnished to travelers, except strong drink. Feb. 20, 1704-5, he cony. to Joseph Tuttle one sixth part of the third day, that was laid out to Wm. Tuttle. He d. in 1705 and next yr. Simon Tuttle admr. his est.

IV. James Edward, b. March 13, 1812. When little more than ten yrs. of a. the independence, self-reliance and energy of his character was shown by his leaving home to shape his own course in life. He remained away between two and three yrs., working on a farm in Litchfield Co., meanwhile attending school in the fall and winter mott's. After returning home he attended a private school, and devoted himself to study for about three yrs., evincing a strong talent for mechanical and architectural drawing, in which he was given special instruction by his teacher. He was soon able to furnish building plans for the old master-builders of the city. About the age of 18 he resolved to learn the carpenter's trade, and served an apprenticeship till 21, when he began business for himself, and during the next two or three yrs. erected several handsome buildings from his own plans and materials. This field proving too limited, he started the lumber business in the face of great discouragements, and succeeded so well that in a few years he had diverted the entire trade from its seat on Long Wharf to his own locality in E. Water st. The financial panic of 1837, which ruined thousands of others, only enlarged the opportunities of Mr. English. He established himself at Albany, in the wholesale lumber trade, in addition to his New Haven business, and shipped large quantities of lumber to N. Y., Phila., N. Hav., and other points; became the owner of several vessels; established freight lines, and laid the foundation of his great wealth. His subsequent investments in banking, real estate and manufacturing enterprises were very successful, and he is now one of the richest men in Conn. Among numerous establishments with which he is or has been connected, may be mentioned the New Haven Clock Co., the largest concern of the kind in the world, of which he has been the principal business manager. And the Goodyear Metallic Rubber Shoe Co., a very large concern, of which he has been Pres.

His public life began on his return from Albany, when he was elected a member of the Board of Selectmen of N. Hav., and annually re-elected, serving for twelve years, most of the time as chairman. In 1848 elected mem. of the Common Council and to other positions, receiving votes of both parties. In 1855 elected to State Leg., and the three succeeding years served as State Senator, declined a renomination in 1859, business calling him to Europe. In 1860 chosen M. C., re-elected in 1862, serving four years. In 37th Congress was on the Naval Com., and his retention urged by Mr. Welles, Secy. of the Navy, for the 38th Congress; but in that Congress he served on committee of public lands, and on com. of public accounts for Dept. of State. During the war he was known as a war Democrat, voted for abolition of slavery in Dist. of Col., and for every Union measure, and gave liberally of his own means to prepare outfits for Conn. regiments. He opposed the legal tender bill, and the National Banking System, foreseeing their pernicious tendencies; and though largely interested in manufactures, he opposed "protection for the sake of protection." In 1865 declined nomination for third term in Congress. In 1867 elected governor of Conn., over Gen. Joseph R. Hawley, and in that term was the only democratic governor in all the states. In 1868 elected governor over Marshall Jewell by an increased majority, and the same year his name was prominent in the Dem. National Conv., as a candidate for the presidential nomination. Nominated for Gov. in 1869, but through over-confidence of his party and apathy, was defeated. Next year again elected Gov. by a triumphant majority. In 1871, the people of N. Hav., who were strongly excited on the pending question of making Hartford the sole capital of the state, elected Mr. English to the lower house. In Nov., 1878, appointed by Gov. Ingerson to be U. S. Senator in place of Hon. O. S. Ferry, dec., term ending March 1, 1879.

"I happened to be present," writes a journalist, "when Mr. English went to the pay-clerk's office to draw his first instalment of pay. Finding that compensation from the date of Senator Ferry's death was subject to his draft, he remarked: 'I have no moral right to money I have not earned, and will not appropriate one cent of pay which has not accrued since I arrived and was sworn in,' and he didn't."

He was the pioneer and champion of the movement by which the public schools of Conn. became entirely free. Previously, a quarterly payment was required from each scholar. This payment was burdensome to a large class, and debarred many from public instruction who most needed its advantages and benefits. A determined opposition to the abolition of this tax was met and overcome by Mr. English, and the state assumed the entire expense of the public schools. His services to the higher walks of education have been recognized in his appointment as one of the councillors of the Sheffield Scientific School. Among his large gifts to the educational, religious and charitable institutions of this city is a fund of $10,000, the income of which is to be devoted in perpetuity, to the purchase of books for the library of the Yale Law School. He is much interested in antiquarian, genealogical and historical matters relating to his native city and state, and his knowledge in these directions is extensive and exact.

It is very rare, indeed, that the same man succeeds in gaining the highest prizes at once of wealth and political preferment, and that, without making enemies, and without a suspicion of crooked ways. In the city of his residence, where he is universally known, and where his large material interests bring him into personal and business relations to a multitude of people, he is accounted one of the most useful, charitable, philanthropic, and public spirited of its citizens, and in point of popularity and general estimation, it would be difficult to name his superior. The degree of A. M. was conferred by Y. C. His full length portrait adorns the library of the Law School, in Jan. 25, 1837. Caroline, dau. of Timothy Fowler of N. Hav., who d. Polly Flint. 1, ARVID, b. 1814; a great lover of music from his earliest years; his mother having a marvelous memory for poetry, and love of song. He easily learned to perform on various instruments when quite young and was mainly instrumental in getting the first band organized in Wolcottville, Conn. He began to build pipe organs in 1840 but soon turned to reed instruments and is believed to be the first who built organs of this kind in America, and he is really the inventor of a large proportion of the improvements that have been made on them in this country. He also invented a new principle for tuning organs, known as the Tuner's Gamut, in extensive use. He never took out patents for his inventions but freely exhibited them for the purpose of selling the instruments. Others adopted them, forming companies with large capital to make organs with his improvements. Some of the most finished workmen in the largest manufactories in the country learned their trade of him. The most important improvement ever made in reed organs was a superior arrangement of the reed board the principle of which was the subject of a great law suit in 1876 between Riley Burdett of Erie, Pa., and Jacob Estey of Brattleboro, Vt. This improvement Mr. Dayton invented and had used some twenty years; which was clearly shown by the Hon. Wm. M. Evarts in his speech in that case before the U. S. circuit court, and also in the speech of the Hon. Edmund Burke, the celebrated patent lawyer. Mr. Burke said of Mr. Dayton that "he was one of the earliest, most original and ingenious inventors and improvers of the reed organ who has ever appeared in this country." One of his instruments made nineteen years before containing all the combinations of musical capabilities of the infringing organ was examined by counsel and others and still made good music, though it had never been repaired or even tuned. "It is believed," said Mr. Burke, "that few if any other reed organs have ever exhibited such a remarkable endurance." * * * A noble testimonial to the genius and fidelity of its inventor and maker. * * * A thorough test of the workmanship and material used in its construction. She partook of the holy communion with members of four generations of her desc. and pronounced her blessing on three of the 5th generation. She could remember when there was but one house of public worship and but one minister in N. Hay.; when there was not one painted house, nor one pane of sash glass, nor one riding chair in the town; when all the foreign trade employed but two small vessels, and when the first timber was laid for the "long wharf." "Funeral eulogies," says the Conn. Journal of June 3, 1817, from which the above facts are taken, "are too frequently extravagant, but the writer feels compelled to say that if the uniform practice of industry, prudence, fidelity and benevolence, springing from vital piety, deserves the esteem of fellow mortals, let the memory of the deceased be regarded. Intelligent people from a distance sought her society to enjoy her original, independent and shrewd remarks. She was familiar with the Bible, with writings of Flavel, Baxter, Edwards and Bellamy; had seen and conversed with Washington, and had heard Whitfield preach. She bore her long illness of nearly five years with patient resignation. In answer to an inquiry once put to her by the Rev. Dr. Mason, she replied: "Having through divine grace been able to resist the attacks of the adversary for nearly sixty years, I shall not be left to fall into his hands at last, but feel sure of victory through the crucified, risen, reigning and all conquering Redeemer." With his father he learned to gather and sell clams to help out a meagre support. From the a. of 13 he was compelled to care for himself. He went to sea awhile, but afterward learned the trade of cabinet making. When he desired to marry, he went to Judge Daggett, who set him up in business. He seems to have done undertaking to some extent, for he put Noah Webster into his collin; and John Trumbull, aid of Washington, into his.

He was always an urgent reformer, and ready with voice and pen to help on every good work. Ardent in the temperance movement; then, in 1851, he entered with his usual belligerent energy into the Kansas Anti-slavery War. In 1856 he concluded to form a company to colonize in Kansas, and in furtherance of that enterprise the celebrated meeting in the North chl. in N. Hay, was held, at which a quantity of "Sharpe's rifles" and a sum of money were subscribed to arm and equip the emigrants. He left New Haven the same year and settled with his colony at Wabaunsee, now a flourishing agricultural community; and Kansas, the dark and bloody ground where the battle of freedom was fought and won, is now a great state of a million of inhabitants, more or less. Culpepper Frisbie of Branford, Conn.) Leavenworth, b. in W., Feb. 4, 1766; M. D.; d. May 17, 1850. When quite young rem. with his parents to New Haven, where his father resided for some yrs. on the south side of Water st., near the Pavilion Hotel building. At about 17 years of age, left to his own resources, he shipped under Capt. Holmes of New Haven and made several voyages as mate and supercargo to southern ports, West India Islands and "the Spanish main." Located awhile in the Island of Trinidad, took the yellow fever and "returned home to die," but recovered instead. Stud. med. and practiced successfully awhile, but gave it up and went into the "Southern trade." Afterwards engaged in manufacturing in Waterbury, where he was postmaster upwards of 20 yrs. preceding his death. He was a man of extensive and varied knowledge, keen sarcastic wit and strong sense of humor; deliberate in forming opinions but decided and tenacious; independent, but of quick sympathies; his religious opinions different from those held by most of his friends, gave rise to a want of sympathy keenly felt by him; and resulted in his later years to a certain studied disregard of some conventionalities, amounting to eccentricity. * Col. Jesse Leavenworth, b. Nov. 21, 1741; Y. C. 1760; m. July 1, 1761, Catherine, dau. of John Conklin of Southampton, L. I. Tradition says a very handsome couple. He was Lieut. of the Gov.'s Foot Guards (Benedict Arnold, Capt.), and went with the Guards to Boston (1775) "with old Put Along." Fred followed them to the outskirts of the town. The Co. returned in about three weeks. Col. Jesse was engaged in commerce and once lost in Hurl Gate a sloop laden with flax-seed. He owned the ferry to East Haven, where Tomlinson's bridge and the steamboat wharf now are. When the British invaded N. Hav. in 1779 they robbed his house, ripped up too feather beds and emptied them into the water, and did much other damage, besides taking the silver, buckles from Mrs. Leavenworth's shoes, while she stood by and gave them, as she used to say, "a piece of her mind." She had a keen black eye and a sharp tongue, and in after years perhaps not without sufficient cause, she turned it on her husband with such efficacy that he sought shelter in the wilds of Vermont. About 1783 he became alienated from her, leaving the younger children, he left her forever. There may have been fault on both sides, but apparently mainly on his. He took a woman with him who had been an inmate of his family, and whom he afterwards married, some sort of divorce having been obtained. He d. at Sacket's Harbor, Dec. 12, 1824. He was son of Rev. Cong. chh. at Orange, Conn., one yr.; ordained pastor at Bristol, Conn., Dec. 16, 1829; dis. Sept., 1831; rem. to Charlotte, N. C., and was pastor Presby. chh. and principal young ladies' school. Here he labored with zeal to wake up the people to the importance of education by lectures, newspaper articles, pamphlets, almanacs, etc. In summer he traveled among the mountains, hunting with the pioneers, talking and preaching Sundays. In 1848 he rem. to Warrenton, Va., for benefit of health of his family, where he established a school. In 1859, having been called to the new High st. chh. in Petersburg, Va., he left the school temp., in charge of his wife. This chh. grew out of a difficulty in an older organization, and was without a building. Under his management they soon had a handsome edifice with organ and bell. He remained here about four years, and the new chh. was finally absorbed in the old one. Afterward, he preached to destitute chhs. in different parts of the state, and gave his energies to a school he had re-established in Petersburg, which soon rose to great importance, attracting scholars from long distances, and flourishing till the breaking out of the war. In the great struggle he sympathized with the South and promoted its cause with all his energies. At its conclusion he again turned his attention to educational matters, and at the time of his death was Cor. Secy. of the Ya. Educ. Asso., an organization created mostly through his efforts, and through which he hoped to develop some broad plans of educational interest. He was of medium height, rather slender, thin, light hair, bright blue eyes; carriage, very erect and dignified; of great energy, physical activity and personal courage. A bold and vigorous writer and a ready and eloquent speaker, and an accomplished scholar, both in literature and the sciences. Whatever he put his hands to was apt to prosper. As a teacher, his talent amounted to genius. A remarkable combination of exciting enthusiasm in his pupils, of communicating knowledge, and a dignity of manner by which he could maintain discipline with little apparent effort. On the occasion of his d., Feb. 12, 1869, commendatory resolutions of the highest character were passed by the various bodies to which he belonged. (See portrait in Leavenworth Genealogy). He m. Y., to work at it, but not liking the city returned to Susquehanna Co., where he married at the age of 23 the pretty daughter of a farmer living in the neighborhood. For four years the pair earned only a scanty subsistence, young Packer working a small farm and doing odd jobs at his trade. At the time of the opening of the Lehigh Canal in the spring of 1823, he became a canal boat driver. With his earnings he gradually was enabled to buy interests of his own in a number of boats, and, retaining these, he gave up driving, and opened a store and a boat yard. Afterward he contracted for the building of locks in the upper Lehigh, and soon his fame as a contractor became great throughout the region. In 1838 he built boats at Pottsville for the transportation of coal to New York direct. In 1840, leaving his boat building business to his brother, Mr. Packer removed to Mauch Chunk, and for many years engaged in the shipment of coal. In 1852 he alone began the building of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. In 1855, when it was completed, he was all but ruined, but, aided by Commodore Stockton, he survived his temporary embarrassments, and his road rewarded him to that extent that for many years he has been accounted the richest man in Pennsylvania. Mr. Packer was twice elected to Congress, and served under the administration of Mr. Pierce. He built for himself a beautiful residence at Mauch Chunk, which was his home.

*To the Editor of the New York Times.—In a recent review of a "Life of Hamilton" your reviewer goes out of his way to stigmatize Aaron Burr as a "wretched adventurer," evidently on the assumption that "he has no friends, therefore kick him." The animus of that review is apparent, and it is evident that old wounds still fester. But wherein was Aaron Burr an "adventurer?" As Colonel in the Revolutionary army, or Attorney-General of New York, or Senator from the same great state, or Vice-President of the nation, in all of which offices he won the plaudits of the people? Or was it when entertaining the chiefest men of two continents at Richmond Hill, or during the delivery of that matchless oration on taking leave of the Senate, which melted even grave Senators to tears? In point of pedigree, Hamilton was certainly the "adventurer," for Burr was descended by both parents, from two of the proudest and best families of New England, as certain printed works in the Astor or Mercantile Libraries will prove to the curious. In point of fact, the whole treatment of Aaron Burr is a disgrace to our boasted civilization, a rank instance of the iniquity of republics. The Federal party, the Presbyterian church, the Virginian faction, the Clinton-Schuyler-Hamilton-Livingston faction of New York, all pitted against one lone man, was a spectacle for gods and men; but the same united in an effort to blacken his name and memory, and continuing so years after death, ought to provoke the indignant protest of every lover of justice and fair play. The victim, too, is quiescent. Often and often Col. Burr was urged by his friends to reply to the calumnies circulated about him. "What can I do," he would say, "all my valuable papers were lost in the shipwreck that bereft me of my daughter; let them do with the old man as they will, the truth of history will yet appear," and so Burr's friends have been passive, and the ghosts of church and state have had it all their own way. I wish to say, in conclusion that I have studied Aaron Burr's character, career, ideas, habits, and hereditary tendencies thoroughly, and in the light of an intimate knowledge of his family, from the advent of his first ancestor at Boston, in 1695, and am well convinced that he is worthy to take rank with any of his peers in the affections of his countrymen, and am simply amazed at the nists of ignorance, calumny and misapprehension which have been collected about the name.

V. Lydia, m. Burton Tuttle; (2) Amos Fish of Albany, N. Y.; d. 1877. "Amos Fish, who died after a long residence in this city, left property amounting to $50,000. The will has not yet been presented for probate, but is said to contain some singular bequests, and is likely to be contested. The widow, who has been his wife for thirty-five years, is allowed $1 a day as long as she lives. He was an eccentric man. In explaining the way he lived to a friend once he said: 'I buy a shank of beef from the butcher, which costs me ten cents. My wife makes enough soup from this to do us one meal; then the meat cut from it afterward makes two more meals, or one day's food for ten cents. I split the bone and get the marrow for cooking purposes, and my wife finds sufficient fuel in the bone itself to do considerable cooking. Then, in an iron box I save the ashes, which I use for manuring a few plants that realize for me six cents each.' Yet when extra taxes were put upon his property he very rarely, if ever, demanded more rent from tenants than they had been paying. He considered anything more than plain and cheap dress for man, woman and child, extravagant. Mechanical labors he encouraged, and would prefer to let one of his stores to a business of this kind than for other purposes. He considered the jewelry and other fancy trades wholly unnecessary, and by no means would encourage them."—Albany Times.

4524. Lois Tuttle, m. abt. 1754, Thomas Davis,* b. 1729; d. Nov. 15, 1798. She became acquainted with Mr. D. while at the boarding school of Rev. Mr. Bird in New Haven. Her parents and relatives in North Haven being strong Congregationalists, were opposed to the match for the reason that Mr. D. was an Episcopalian. She was taken home and he was forbidden the house. She, however, left her father's house in North Haven one summer evening, walked to New Haven and was m. and had 16 chil., of whom 4 d. in infancy; 12 were living at close of rev. war. Their gr. s., C. S. A. Davis, has pub. some interesting family reminiscences of the British raid in 1779. Thomas Davis was in the skirmish at West Bridge, but seeing that the town would be taken hurried home, hid his gun and silver and awaited events. A squad of soldiers soon entered his house and rummaged it for plunder, but did no further damage than to crack a China punch bowl (which is now in possession of Mr. C. S. A. Davis), and drink some St. Croix rum. It was one of this squad that killed Mr. Hotchkiss and took his watch which he showed to Mr. Davis. Mrs. Davis had sent her son Solomon down to the garden, "on the shell road," as Wooster street was then called. This garden occupied the whole square bounded by Chapel, Wooster, Chestnut and Franklin streets. The soldiers found Solomon here and took him prisoner to their camp near Mill river, where he was employed to bring water. He soon escaped and ran to a lot near Whitenville where his father's cows were pastured and drove them up to his Grandfather Tuttle's in North Haven. Mrs. Davis sent her young daughter Mary for safety to the house of Abiathar Camp (a loyalist), which stood corner of Chapel and Union streets, site of the present Masonic Temple. It was the headquarters of Gen. Tryon, and a nice dinner was being spread for the officers when an alarm was given by a sentinel in the steeple of the church by ringing the bell, that the militia was approaching the town in great numbers, upon which Gen. Tryon gave orders to embark, and left hastily with his officers without eating his dinner.

(2) an Irish girl, Elizabeth Carroll, and had an only chil. Thomas. Dr. D. abt. 1737. Thomas was left in care of Mr. Forbes who put him to sail making in 1733. In 1735 he rem. to New Haven and began business as sail maker, the first in the town. He afterwards engaged in a general merchandising and shipping business with St. Croix and other W. I. Islands, and in 1753 took in Mr. Sandford, f. of the late Anthony P. Sandford of New Haven. This co-p. continued till 1755. Davis and Sandford with six others built the old Trinity church in Church street which was afterwards twice enlarged, and taken down in 1819. The workmen "boarded round" among the s until the church was finished. Thomas Davis built his residence on Fair street, and owned the whole square bounded by Fair, Olive, Cherry street and Pringle Alley, except a lot on corner of Cherry street and the Alley, which belonged to Simeon Joselyn. Mr. J. furnished Benedict Arnold with his rig and equipment, as Capt. of the 2d Co. Gov't Guards, but was unable to get his pay. Arnold's letter from Canada to Mr. D. declining to settle was in possession of Mrs. Candy, but could not be found and so her effects on the division of the est. in 1870 lost. In 1757 Mr. D. received a China punch bowl from St. Croix as a present. It was first used in 1767 at the birth of his dau. Mary. On her m. with Mr. Post, it was presented to her. It was cracked by the British July 1, 1779, while rummaging the house of Mr. Davis for valuables. Wm. Buel mended it with silver clasps. C. S. A. Davis inherited it from Wm. Candy.

45421. Caleb Tuttle, b. Dec. 7, 1760. His father, when drafted into the Rev. army, having a farm and a numerous family of young children, could not be spared, and Caleb said: "I will go in your stead." Accordingly he applied to the Col. Return Jonathan Meigs, and was accepted. At the expiration of his term he enlisted again, served through the war and was honorably discharged. He was one of the 40 "picked men" selected by Gen. Anthony Wayne (Mad Anthony) for the advance parties--forlorn hope—at the storming of Stony Point<sup>a</sup>. The story of his sufferings from cold, hunger and nakedness at Valley Forge and while fighting to achieve the independence of his country is that of hundreds of others, and in the later period of his life he endured much from lameness and otherwise in consequence of this early experience. He was over six feet high, well proportioned and of great strength and courage, but good-natured and of a jocular turn withal; when in the army he was challenged by a fellow soldier to fight a duel, but declined on the ground that as to fighting, their country needed their services, and it would be more proper to fight the enemy than each other; but to give the challenger the "satisfaction," he sought he proposed that his own profile should be drawn in chalk on a barn door and the challenger to fire at it to his heart's content. This raised a laugh, restored good humor and perhaps averted a catastrophe. But there was a limit to his forbearance. In Hartford once he was provoked by a swaggering bully of large proportions into whipping him, which he did easily and in short order. After the war he began the business of boating on the Conn. river between Hartford, Conn., and Windsor, Vt., carrying merchandise of every sort and establishing stores at Hartford and Windsor, Vt., the latter a wholesale store, which supplied all the towns about Windsor. At South Hadley and Bellows Falls freight was unshipped and carted around the Falls. He was the first man to carry out the daring project of running freight boats over the Falls at South Hadley, which he did alone and unaided. He also engaged in the West India trade. His affairs were for a time very prosperous and his wealth considerable, but his large business requiring more attention he took in as partner a young man of good (?) business education, but as it proved, of dishonest character. The loss of a West India vessel with a valuable cargo leading to an examination of the books of the concern, frauds were discovered, which, together with losses by undersigning, swept away the bulk of his property. He possessed a fine mind, an excellent memory and so kindly a spirit that all his sufferings, misfortunes and disappointments were not able to sour him, and which, when old, lame and helpless, endeared him to his children and friends. He received a pension from the U. S., and on the list of 1810 is called of West Springfield, aged 79. He d. thr. March 20, 1845, in 85th yr. of his age; m. in 1781, Mary Masters of Middletown, Conn., who d. in W. Springfield Aug., 1842.

<sup>a</sup>The advance or "forlorn hope" at the storming of Stony Point consisted of two parties of 20 men each, who led the attack at two different points. One of these, under command of Lieut. Gibbons, lost 17 men killed and wounded out of the 20. The other party under Lieut. Knox was not less exposed but more fortunate. All behaved with distinguished bravery. Wm. Reed (author) was in one of the parties and said to have been the first man to enter the works.

III. Eben Clark, b. April 27, 1806. His youth was spent at home, he helping his father, chopping timber, clearing land, burning and carting coal, and working at his father's forge. His time for schoolroom was very limited, and his lessons studied for the most part while blowing the bellows, or in the "coal-hut" on the mountains while tending the coal pits. At the age of 20 he went to Straitsville, Conn., to work at making forks. Three years later he returned to Prospect and began making the solid cast steel hoes of the "goose neck" pattern, of which he was the originator, and which eventually wholly supplanted the "eye hoe" made by blacksmiths throughout the country, and in universal use. At first his hoes were made entirely by hand in his shop on Prospect Hill, and to produce 25 hoes, required the labor of 8 men for one day; subsequently by the use of water power and of machinery, much of it his own invention, the same amount of labor sufficed to produce several hundred highly polished hoes.

The first machine used by Mr. Tuttle was a crude trip hammar, which was located five miles distant at Union Village, in Naugatuck, and which was available for his use only at night. For several years all the hoe-blanks were carried to this place, the hoes plotted during the night and carried back to Prospect the next morning. The demand for his hoes increasing fast, he rem. in 1846 to Union Village, erected a small shop and began to make use of the fine water power and additional machinery; and added the making of many kinds of agricultural tools, as forks, etc. The business soon grew to large proportions and more capital and managing agencies were required, which were obtained by the formation of a joint stock company, under the name of the Tuttle Manufacturing Co., with Mr. Tuttle at its head. This company is now rich and powerful and is still known by the name of its founder. In 1856 he withdrew as Pres't, and built a factory near the depot in Union City, where for about two years he did a large and constantly increasing business under the name of the E. C. Tuttle Manuf. Co., which bid fair soon to become as extensive as the original Tuttle Co., when in 1858 his works were destroyed by fire, inflicting on him very heavy losses. In 1860 he went to Oshawa, C. W., where he organized a company and built the large "Cedar Dale Works," which now rank among the most important manufacturing concerns of the "Dominion." The ground on which these works are located was covered with forest and swamp, and in the severe labors of clearing the site, building dams, factories and starting the trade, he overstrained his physical powers and laid the foundation of a fatal malady. His business relations here not being satisfactory, he returned in 1863 to "the States," and at Auburn, N. Y., organized a company and built the works of the "E. C. Tuttle Manuf. Co.," now called the "Auburn Manuf. Co." He here continued successfully about four years. In 1868, leaving a large interest in the Auburn concern, he returned to Canada and at St. Catharines started the manufactory known as "The Welland Vale Works," in which he unfortunately lost a large part of his hard earned estate. He continued his business and residence at St. Catharines until a short time before his decease. In the winter of 1873, while on a visit to his friends in Conn., he d. Dec. 5, 1873, at the house of his son, B. B. Tuttle of Union City, of paralysis. "His reputation as a manufacturer was almost world wide, and when the history of the manufacturing founders of the Naugatuck Valley shall be written his name will be among the foremost. He lived to see the business he commenced in a small way, grow to almost gigantic proportions; and the little hamlet of Union City, which, when he went there, contained scarce half a dozen houses, by his enterprise became one of the first manufacturing villages of the Naugatuck Valley."—Communicated. 45493. Melieu Tuttle, b. June 18, 1775; his father dying when M. was about nine yrs. of age, leaving the family in destitute circumstances, Melieu at once manfully confronted the difficulties of the situation and succeeded in overcoming them. About 1795, he went west, into the wilds of central New York, and located some wild land in what is now the town of Columbus, Chenango Co., cleared a patch, built a log cabin, returned to Mass. and m. 1795, Lovisa Bishop, and took her back to his cabin in the woods. The wolf and bear and other wild denizens of the forest their only visitors, and some Indians who had not yet made up their minds to leave the graves of their fathers and depart for the land of the setting sun, occupying a wigwam on a part of his premises. Here they lived and labored, the husband over 70 yrs., the wife over 50 yrs., and brought up their family of six children. Being very ingenious in mechanical contrivances, he became indispensable to the other new settlers who afterwards came in. He could build a log cabin, make an ox sled or cart, a built plow, a meat cask, a sap pail, etc. His powers of physical labor and endurance were remarkable. He would go two miles to the farm of his bro-in-law, do a large day's work logging and chopping, then back a bushel of grain a mile to the mill, have it ground, and then back it home three miles, in the dark, through woods and along a dim path marked only by blazed trees. Once it was necessary to go 16 miles to the mill at Burlington Flats with grain; having no vehicle, he hung a bag of two bushels between two oxen and started. Three miles short of the mill the oxen could bear the load no further. Melieu took it on his back, and on arriving found the mill "closed for repairs," and had to return without his grist. Subsequently he improvised a cart without wheels which answered as a vehicle for bringing home the grist. He once walked the entire distance to New York City (250 miles) to make payment on his land, crossing the Hudson by swimming with his clothes bundled and strapped to his back. He was kind, honest and faithful, and long lived to enjoy the fruits of his labors and the esteem of his fellow citizens. He d. July 31, 1872, in the 98th year of his a. His wf., b. June 9, 1778; d. Mrs. Thorpe was at the Tattle meeting in 1853 with 3 gr. chil., Eliza, Charlotte and Julia. "A very pleasant and rather remarkable event took place at the house of Mr. Joel Bassett in North Haven, Thursday. The event was a family gathering in honor of the eightieth birthday of Mrs. Amasa Thorpe, and was remarkable because four active old ladies, all sisters, were present, the aggregate of whose ages is 310 years. The sisters were Mrs. John Goodsell, aged eighty-three years, Mrs. Amasa Thorpe, aged eighty, Mrs. Ithamar Tattle, aged seventy-seven, and Mrs. James Smith, aged seventy. Of a family of nine children of Jesse and Patience Bassett these four are the only living members, four having died in infancy and another daughter departing this life some thirty or four years ago. The Bassett family was one of the first which settled in North Haven, and the old homestead is yet to be seen standing a short distance from the bridge. Jesse, the immediate ancestor of this branch, lived on the spot where his namesake Mr. Jesse Goodsell now resides, and here the four sisters were born and brought up in the ways of good old New England life, replenishing the family wardrobe by means of the knitting needle, the loom, and the spinning wheel, converting the products of the dairy into butter and cheese, and taking their share of fun at corn huskings, candy pullings, etc. The paternal Jesse lived to the advanced age of eighty-five years, and Mrs. Thorpe, or "Aunt Chloe," as she is familiarly called, has in her possession likenesses of both parents which are well worth seeing. It is said that the old gentleman had no need to wear a wig at an age when most men are compelled to do so or give up the luxury of hair, and as he invariably presented himself with each particular hair in its proper place he came to go by the expressive name of "Slick Head Bassett." He was the second man in town to own a one horse wagon. All of the sisters have been married and have reared families. For several years it has been their custom to unite in celebrating each other's natal day, but this time the pleasure was increased by the unexpected participation of children and grandchildren, including one great grandchild, nearly all of whom were present."—Newspaper, 1877, 1, Loyal, 3, AURELIA, b. 1809; m. * "I claim to unite in myself through the three families, Tuttle, Read and Teed, the ten tribes of Israel who were carried captive, or the eight tribes of the ten in which the ten were lost in the Assyrian captivity, 7225 years ago. The Tutte, Teed and Read family constituted one family, the name of which was Tut, pronounced in Hebrew with the long sound of "u" or Toot. The lost tribes located in Media and Cyrus, who conquered Babylon, was a descendant, through Media of the lost tribes of Israel. The Welsh people are the descendants of the lost tribe of Issachar. The promise of restoration through the male will was made to this tribe and the family name Toot was to be the nomenclatural name of the restoration of the second coming of Christ. The Hebrew word Toot means the collector of the people. Of course I have not time to give you the evidences, but I give you the above simple facts. You do not realize the bearing of your present work as a part of a chain of natural evidence of the natural line of the descent of the branch promised as the restorer of Judah and Israel."—Letter to the Comp. from Cyrus Romulus Teed.

F. E. SPINNELL, Treas. U. S.”

“When speaking of Treasurer Spinner some time ago, we incidentally mentioned Assistant Treasurer Le Roy Tuttle. He is worthy of more particular notice. Tuttle is a businessman. There is no more flesh on him than there is on a liberty pole or a zig-zag fence; but as much life and ‘get up and get along’ in him as in a cæne-leopard chased by lions. He is, in short, the embodiment of activity; and what he always means is business—the getting ready for business which requires one to move around lively. If any one was ever born a business man it is Le Roy Tuttle, now one of the Assistant Treasurers of these United States, and twelve years ago the cashier of a bank in a small city out West. A vast sum of money has been paid out of the United States Treasury since Tuttle has been here. He has had many men under his management. We believe but one ever deceived him and brought him to grief. Indeed, the Treasury here has been surpassingly free from defalcations and embezzlements. Such crimes have been too often committed but in nearly every instance they have occurred after the money had been lawfully taken from the Treasury. Mr. Tuttle is entitled to a large share of credit as well as Gen. Spinner, tho such is the fact. In person Mr. Tuttle is small in stature, but so wiry and active that I think he must get over more ground than any other man in the Treasury. He can talk to a dozen persons, and keep on writing at his desk just as though no one were present. Notwithstanding the vast amount of business to which he attends, he has always found time to read a great deal, and is a highly intelligent gentleman. He is always uncommonly well informed as to all passing events, being a constant, judicious reader of newspapers.”—Washington Correspondent.

He had a fine tenor voice, and sang with feeling and effect the simple music used in the New England country churches. He was a hard working, honest, faithful, affectionate and pious man, ambitious only to do right. Once, while visiting his cousin, A. A. Marks, then living in N. Y. City, he passed a ferry gate unobserved, not knowing that a fare was due. On mentioning the circumstance to his host, and being informed that he had "run the gate," he returned to the ferry, a considerable distance, and relieved his burdened conscience by paying the one or two cent fare.—Compiler. — He m.  ELIZABETH, d. y. 4, WILLIAM, b. Aug. 21, 1820; d. May 9, 1877; at a meeting of the N. Hay. Board of Councilmen the following resolutions was unanimously adopted: "That in the death of Hon. William Fitch, the late Mayor of this city and Paymaster-General of the state of Conn. during the late war, New Haven has lost one of its foremost citizens, and one whose place in the community it seems impossible to fill. Conspirations for his public spirit prompt and untiring in the discharge of every duty; freely spending his strength in the support and conduct of our local charities, in whose behalf he cheerfully assumed many a burden from which others shrank; always to be found at his post in whatever position he was called to fill; holding office with reluctance, but admittstering it to universal acceptance and with a single view to the public good, he was a man without reproach and without an enemy. "Resolved, that in token of our respect for his memory the Court of Common Council will attend his funeral in a body." Similar resolutions were adopted by the Board of Road Commissioners; by the New Haven Savings-Bank, of which he was President; by the Second National Bank, of which he was a Director; by the employees of W. & E. T. Fitch, among others: "That we have lost a true friend, one ever interested in our welfare and to whose benevolence, purity and nobleness of character we would add our testimony;" by the New Haven Orphan Asylum, of which he was Secretary and Treasurer and member of the Advisory Board and by the General Hospital Society of Conn., of which he was Vice-President, and of which "he was the main pillar;" and to whom, "more than to any other single person, is due the extension of the buildings and conveniences of the hospital, which have of late so greatly widened its field of usefulness. Ready and wise in counsel; prompt and efficient in action; giving of his time and his means with unsparing generosity, few charities have ever known so faithful and self-sacrificing a friend." He rendered important services to the city and state; but in this hour, the fittest eulogium seems to be the simple words with which such as he are welcomed to heaven, "I was sick and ye visited me; naked, and ye clothed me;" — With Their Memorial, which also contains funeral services, May 14, 1817, with address by Rev. Dr. Geo. L. Walker, and a memorial discourse preached in the First chd. in New Haven, Sunday morning, May 20, 1817, by Dr. F. A. Noble, from the text, "he was a good man and a just." He m. This tract lay between the Pond and the Bell Swamp bridge. The buyers were Wm. Luddington, John Russell, John Moulthrop, Joseph Tuttle, Daniel Collins and Jacob Robinson. About Feb. 15, 1710, Sergt. John Potter and Joseph Tutte were directed "to attend a town meeting in New Haven, to obtain their consent that this village (E. Hay.) be settled a distinct town"; granted by the assembly the following spring, and Joseph Tutte was elected Rep. to state Leg., May and Oct. sessions, 1710, though the assembly denied the right of E. Hay. to send deputies. At a court held at N. Hay., 2d Monday of Nov., 1693, judgment for £109 and costs was rendered against Joseph T., cordwainer, in favor of Joseph Blydenburgh of New York; Joseph T. appealed to court of assistants held at Hartford May 14, 1697. In 1712 he sued Ephraim Morgan, an Indian, for debt. He was related in some way to the Coopers. (The will of his bro. Stephen Tuttle, dated 1709, calls John Cooper cousin and appoints him one of the execs. As such John Cooper took receipts of the heirs of Stephen Tuttle in 1725.) He was assignee of Sarah Cooper of Long Island. She was sis. to James and Ellis Mew. In 1706 Mr. Blin, machiner of Boston, and Jos. pl. Tuttle claimed the estate of Ellis Mew, the worker of London, from whom Blin showed power of attorney. James and Samuel Cooper were also akin to the Mews. James Mew lived in South Wood street, London.

*Nathan Bradley, b. 1655; came from England, a boy; landed at Saybrook; thence journeyed across the wilderness then unbroken by settlements to New Haven. He set in Guilford. He was quite a hunter, and discovered the sources of the Housatonic river in a pond which is still called "Nathan's Pond." For a bear story in which he played a subordinate part, the principal being borne by the bear, see Fisher's Hist. Coll. v. 2, Ch. 2, p. 225. He m. (1) May 10, 1671, Rachel Holton, dau. of Deo. Vn. of Northampton, Mass., and wif. of Thomas Strong; Nathan Noah Bradley, exec. of the will of Nathan Bradley of Guilford, paid legacies in 1711, Dec. 11 and 31, to Mary Tuttle, Pudentia Eaton, Esther Marshall; wit. to Mary Tuttle, Isaac Griswold and Wm. Rogers; wit. to Patience Eaton, Jonathan Murray and Joshua Tuttle.

<sup>1</sup>John Cooper, agent of the iron works at Stoney River, came to New Haven between 1692 and 1695, (name was spelled Cooper). Rep. 1694-5 may have settled first at Lynn, Mass.; interested in the iron works there. If so he embarked in the H. pewell of London, April 1, 1695; b. at Olney, Bucks Co., birth place of the poet Cowper, sometimes spelled Cooper 1695. He may have gone from Lynn to Southampton, L. <sup>2</sup>177. Timothy Tuttle of N. Hay, quitclaims to bro. Joseph of Oxford, lands in E. Hay, 1775. Timothy or N. Hay, cony. to Joseph of N. Hay, land improved for the Indians. I having bought the Indian title of Samuel Adam. The wif. of Timothy Tuttle of E. Hay, had will prov. Sept. 1745.

This is the highest elevation on the east side of New Haven Harbor. It is or has been known by so many names that its general designation is not easy to determine. On its north end was the great burying ground of the Indians. In 1852, Rev. Mr. Todd opened three of the graves, and others were opened 50 or 70 years earlier, and Indian implements, it is said, were found in them. It was called Grave Hill. The Indians also had a fort on it, hence called Fort Hill. It was also called Indian Hill. Its commanding position and comparative height made it suitable for a point of observation and for beacon, and one was erected there in 1776 by the town of New Haven, and "named" at 6 p. m. on the 2d of Nov. of that year, the neighboring towns having been previously advised to take its bearing, so that they might know what to do in case of alarm. For the same reason that made it Beacon Hill, it was Prospect Hill, and it really deserves a less hackneyed name. As early as 1776 and probably much sooner, it was called "Tuttle's Hill," and is frequently so named in old records. It was included in Wm. Tuttle's grant, and remained in possession of his male descendants for several generations. In 1814 a rustic fort or earth work was erected on its summit by New Haven people, as used by the neighboring towns. In October, 1814, from a nestle, under Andrew Rich, worked two days and retarded the fire of the city in wagons, with music playing, and saluted by citizens and discharges of cannon. The next day 100 men from North Haven, under their pvtor, Rev. Dr. Trumbull, worked on the fort, and the next day 100 men from Hamden, under Capt. Whiting, carried on the work. Meriden (ads) volunteered. In the center of this old fort, upon new stones, a flag staff for the U. S. Const. Surveyor for Connecticut's garrison. Northward from Tuttle's Hill a little way, there is a low elevation, on which the East Haven reservoir has just been built, which is called Tuttle's Hill, but hereafter will probably be known as Reservoir Hill.

In a letter from West Point Sept. 3, 1814, to his father (remarkably well written in all respects) Joseph says: "Mr. Mansfield (Col. Jared [3]) is gaining slowly. I go up to Newburg every other day for provisions, but do not row the boat. Disappointed in not being able to go west; waited to travel. Does not like so much distinction at West Point; no middle rank; all officers or waiters, which accords with Mrs. Mansfield's feelings bat not with Mr. Mansfield's. Joseph cannot foresee my advantage in staying at W. P. and will leave next spring. Has been offered $25 a month for 6 months to teach school in the 9th district of Orange Co., N. Y. Scholars from 15 to 20 years of age; to teach the three R's, the last (arithmetic) principally, the parents being all Dutch; board $3 a week exclusive of washing. I offered to go for $30 a month, which I do not think they will give. The Dutchman said further: 'If you will learn dem well, sir, ich will insure you the best girl among dem all.' I thanked him for the offer but did not think best to choose on these conditions, and presume you will not censure me; wants to hear from all the family, and from Morey's and what Capt. Morris has had to say, for I believe he was determined I should train. I shall not train here and do not fear the enemy, bat fear an unguarded powder magazine 100 or 200 yards off, with 2,500 barrels of powder in it and no sentinel on guard. The late news take our Democratic heroes curse their luck. Mr. Mansfield has put his boy, Edward D., into the military school; an excellent chance, and if I were under 21 yrs. of age should prefer it to any other." P. IV. Smith Tuttle, b. March 12, 1795; d. March 5, 1855. He entered the firm of John and Elijah Howe taking the place of Elijah on his retirement. This was then and for many years the principal store in Fair Haven. His business gradually extended and he became largely engaged in the New Haven and West India trade, for which he built and owned several vessels. He also traded to several South American ports and San Francisco. Firm of Gillette, Hotchkiss & Tuttle. He owned a great deal of land at the West, and sold $50,000 worth at Nauvoo, Ill., to Joseph Smith, for a Mormon settlement. He imported the first cargo of oysters from Va., and his office was the headquarters of the men who entered early and built up this great business, many of whom Smith Tuttle helped with his money. He may therefore be called with propriety the founder of the oyster trade of Fair Haven. He was a large hearted and public spirited man, quiet and unostentatious. He was one of four citizens who, in 1830, caused "The Old Brick Church" to be built, Mr. Tuttle leading the subscription. Once when in N. Y. city an emigrant packet arrived loaded with passengers half famished with a long course of short rations. Mr. Tuttle quietly bought a dray load of bread for them which they eagerly devoured, but never knew the name of their benefactor. He was rigidly honest and carefully shunned extravagance in manner or dress. One of the last acts of his life was to give $12,000 to the New Haven Orphan Asylum. The bulk of his large estate was divided one-third to the widow, one-third to his dau. Mrs. Emma Bradley, and one-third to his son S. G. Tuttle. Pending litigation in regard to the division between 1855 and 1881, the income of the estate amounted to $70,000.—New Haven Paper, J. D. Gillette* and Geo. H. Scranton, execs. He m. 6112372. Eliza Ann Multford, b. Nov. 26, 1768, d. at Raynham, E. H., Jan. 3, 1881, a. 82, greatly admired, honored and beloved by all who knew her. New Haven papers published extended obituary notices in which her character is described as "singularly eminent" from a rare union of accomplishments, of endearing qualities and of Christian virtues. Among her ancestors, traced back by her son, Capt. Charles H. Townsend, to fifty or more of the first settlers of New England, are John Howland and John Tilley of the Mayflower, and perhaps Gov. Caverly, whose dau. Elizabeth may have been wife of John Tilley; m. Dec. 3, 1820, Hon. Wm. Knobell, s. of Isaac and Rhoda (Atwater) Townsend, b. June 3, 1796 (bro. of the late Prof. Isaac Henry Townsend of the Yale

Law Schools; * Merch.; director of the New Haven Bank; Pres. of several corporations and associations; Lieut. 2d Co. Gov.'s Horse Guards; just. of the peace; Rep. for E. Haven, in Conn. Leg. He retired about 1830 to his estate in E. Haven, called Raynham after the family seat of the English Townsends, ancestors of the E. Haven family, and d. there Sept. 23, 1849. This fine property is beautifully located on the east side of New Haven harbor, and is part of the original grant of the New Haven colony to William Tuttle.

I. Wm. Isaac Townsend, b. Nov. 28, 1822; m. April 22, 1850, Elizabeth B., dau. of Col. Mason A. and Elizabeth Bradley Durand, b. April 7, 1828 (2d cons.) I. Fitz-James DURAND, b. Feb. 11, 1851; d. May 27, 1857.

II. James Mulford Townsend, b. Jan. 20, 1825; Capt. of the "Grays" 1848; has filled various offices; Senator in Conn. Leg. 1854; was offered and declined the Repub. nom. for Lieut. Gov., and also for State Treasurer of Conn. During the war he raised and equipped the "Townsend Reg'ts," one of the companies of the 7th Conn. Vols.

Mr. Townsend organized at N. Haven, the 1st Oil Co. in the U. S. It was called the Seneca Oil Co., and at one time owned most of the lands about Titusville, Pa. Mr. E. L. Drake, a conductor on the N. Y. & N. H. R. R., was employed by Mr. Townsend as superintendent at a salary of $100 a month. After spending about two yrs. and a good deal of money in experimenting, Mr. Drake was instructed to procure at Syracuse, N. Y., a man of experience in boring wells for salt, to bore at Titusville, Pa., for oil. Up to this time the oil was got in scanty supply by crude and inefficient methods, as ditching, trenching, skimming the water, dipping and wringing of blankets, etc. After boring about 60 feet all the men of means in the company (excepting one) becoming disengaged, refused to supply more money, and Mr. Townsend had to bear the whole brunt of the enterprise. In time he too became disheartened, and sent Drake $500 to pay bills and come home. The day that Drake received this money and order, the auger dropped four inches, into a crevice probably and the oil came up. The depth was 64 feet. This was the first well and the first petroleum raised in the U. S. The result was due to the energy and perseverance of Mr. Townsend. (See McCarthy's History of Petroleum.) Mr. Townsend sent a specimen of the product to Paris for analysis. It was carried by his bro., Capt. Charles H. Townsend, who also brought back the report of the chemist. It was highly favorable as to its lubricating and illuminating qualities, and predicted great results if the supply proved sufficient.

This was the beginning of that vast production and export which has brought great wealth into the U. S., and especially into the State of Pa., which has been an important factor in turning the balance of trade in our favor, and in relieving the country in some measure from the gravest of the financial embarrassments brought about by the war; enabling the resumption of specie payments and a settled financial policy. A few weeks after the discovery of the oil, the entire works of the company were destroyed. The engineer, ignorant of the gas which comes up with the oil and which is now carried off through a tube in the well, entered the oil house at midnight with a light to see that all was right. The gas took fire from the lamp and several thousand gallons of oil went up with the works in smoke and flame. The oil was then selling at one dollar a gallon. The works were rebuilt, but by that time the production from other wells was so large that the price had fallen to one dollar a barrel. At that price there was no profit to the producer and Mr. T. sold out. It is said that Humboldt left a sum of money to be given to the discoverer of petroleum or rock oil, and Mr. Townsend has been requested by eminent oil men in Pa. to put in his claim, but so far has not done so, and the medal is not awarded. There is also a proposition to erect a bronze statue at Titusville to Mr. Townsend as the discoverer of the product which has brought so much wealth to the State of Pa.

Mr. Townsend established the "Townsend Fund," with an yearly income of $100, to be given each year to that student of the Yale Law School who on graduation delivers the best written and best spoken English oration. Townsend Ave., East Haven, was so named in his honor; m. Sept. 1, 1847, Maria Theresa, dau. of Ephaphias and Sarah (Hall) Clark of Middletown, Conn.; b. Oct. 10, 1828. VI. Charles Henry Townshend, b. Nov. 26, 1833; has been commander of packet ships and ocean steamers for several years; commanded the U. S. mail steamer Fulton of the Havre line; as commander of the steamship Ontario, 5,000 tons; he took her into Havre, France, laden with firearms, ammunition and equipments, to the value of two and a half million of dollars, of which the French government was sorely in need, during the Franco-Prussian war. The timely arrival of the Ontario—the Prussian advance guard being within 18 miles of the city—saved Havre from capture or assault and an anticipated loss of at least fifty millions of dollars. This achievement created great enthusiasm and delight in Paris and Havre, and Capt. Townshend was everywhere the object of unlimited courtesies and attentions; he was also promised a decoration of the Legion of Honor, but it has not been received. In all the years of his going to and fro across the stormiest of seas, he has never lost a dollar's worth of property nor a passenger entrusted to his care. Plutarch tells us that in ancient Rome it was desired most of all to be considered fortunate, for good fortune was evidence of the favor of the gods. But to whatever his extraordinary success was due, the numerous testimonials of his grateful passengers, published in the newspapers from time to time, prove him to have been a prudent, efficient and very popular officer. In promoting the prosperity of his native city he is active and influential. The idea of the breakwater (suggested by his observations of similar works in European harbors) now in course of construction by the U. S. government for the improvement of the harbor of New Haven, was originated by Capt. Townshend, and to his intelligent, well-directed and persevering efforts, the public is indebted for an appropriation of $250,000 for the harbor improvement and for a re-survey of Long Island Sound, now (1882) in progress. The importance of the re-survey arises from the growth of N. Y. C. northwardly, and an anticipated change in the route of sea-going vessels. Capt. T. believes that N. Y. C. will in the near future reach across lower Westchester Co. and face L. I. Sound, which will become the great commercial highway between the U. S. and Europe. With all his business activity Capt. T. has found time to indulge his tastes for literature, and especially for antiquarian and genealogical research; tracing his ancestry in all its lines back to the first settlement of New England, some of them to the Mayflower exiles and some of them far beyond into the "dim obscure" of forgotten generations. He has compiled at great expense a Genealogy of the Townshend Family; author of several able articles in the N. E. Gen. Register. In 1879 he published by request of several prominent citizens of New Haven, a Centennial History of the British Invasion of New Haven, and is a frequent contributor to the public journals of highly-prized articles relating to the commerce of New Haven. He is the possessor, he supposes, of the only copy in this country of Price's celebrated Illustrated History of the Spanish Armada, which he has had reproduced by the heliotype process on a somewhat reduced scale, and has presented copies to the Y. C. library and to other public institutions. He is a director of the New Haven Col. Hist. Society and of several other corporations; m. April 26, 1871, Mary Ann, dau. of Henry and Elizabeth Daggett (Prescott) Hotchkiss, b. Dec. 5, 1839. [Henry Hotchkiss was for many years Pres. of the New Haven Bank; the L. Candee Rubber Co.; was largely interested in numerous manufacturing establishments and was one of the builders of the Union Pacific R. R.] 1. HENRY HOTCHKISS, b. Sept. 30, 1874. 2. RAYNHAM, b. July

VII. Timothy Beers Townsend, b. Nov. 21, 1835; Y. Med. S., 1858; Phys. and Surg.; app'ty by the State of Conn. with Dr. Rockwood to visit the Conn. troops after the battle of Fredericksburg. During the war he rendered efficient service as surgeon at Knight's Hospital. In 1867 he was selected by a council of physicians in New Hay, to perform the cesarean operation, one of the first in this country and probably the first in New England. There had been at that time only a few successful operations in the whole of Europe; he had witnessed it in Paris and had stud. in Europe. The operation in New Hay, was completely successful; he was a surgeon of great skill, rapid and careful; he was offered the professorship of surgery in Yale but declined. For several years his health has been poor, owing to a partial sunstroke and to overwork.

The first meeting of the Epis. Society of E. Hay, was held at his house March 31, 1788, and he with James Pardee were the first ch. wardens. He rec'd. by w. of his f. the "Fort Hill" lot, the lot on which stood the new barn, the Indian hill and Tuttle's hill, besides other property. With other E. Hay, men he opposed the British raid on N. Hay, July 1779, but seeing the day was lost, endeavored to save some of his goods which he had loaded on a cart and was trying to conceal, when he was captured, taken to New York and kept a prisoner abt. six months when he escaped or was released. When the E. Hay, defenders retreated past his house Mrs. Tuttle ran out with her four children, one of them in her arms, and in her fright tried to follow her retreating neighbors, but finding that she was between the combatants, and the enemy about to fire, she called to the children to lie flat on the grass and say their prayers for they had but a moment to live. As they lay on the grass a volley from the British passed over their heads, and wounded, it was supposed mortally, Charles Pardee, who, however, eventually recovered. Mr. T.'s house was ransacked and afterwards set on fire. Among the things carried off was an old family Bible printed in London, 1662. Ten yrs. afterward it was found in Wallingford. It was restored to the owner, and was lately in possession of Samuel Miles Tuttle of N. Hay.—Capt. Chas. H. Townsend. Dodd says Samuel Tuttle d. in E. Hay, May 20, 1817, a. 78. Mary, dau. of Daniel (Y. C.) 1739) and Abigail (Benson) Granger of Sunfield, Conn. Her s. Rev. Timothy Tuttle, described her as a woman of great energy, decision of character and fervent piety. He lived on a part of the paternal est., now known as the Townsend farm, or Raynham; his house and barn was burned by the British, July 5, 1779. That morning he had sent his wif. and children and a part of his household effects up country for safety, but remained with his closest s., and witnessed the burning of his property.* He also saw the killing of Jacob Thorp the same day on his own land. After the war, he built a little south of the old site, a fine location, commanding a beautiful view of the city, harbor and sound, a large double house. At the S. E. corner of this house the Tuttes erected a plain stone, inscribed, "Here fell Jacob Thorp, July 5, 1779." This stone has disappeared, "but," says Capt. Townsend, "it will be found some day no doubt among the stones of the fence." This property was bought by Isaac and Kneeland Townsend, who removed the house to its present location, on the corner of the Fort Hale road. In 1863, Rev. Timothy Tuttle then in his 82d yr. and abt. a yr. before he d. visited the spot with Capt. Townsend and pointed out the place of the old wells, of the Thorp memorial stone, and of a honeysuckle that was growing in his early days, of which nothing but the stump remained. "But after his death it started again and became a thrifty vine."

Feb. 14, 1856, of whom her husband says: "I never could have lived upon my small salary but for the industry and economy of my wife." When his brethren have expressed their surprise that with his resources he had not only lived comfortably, but had laid up something for his children, and had never sent the poor empty away from his door, he has replied, in his laconic manner, "That woman did it." The following is from a biog. mem. written by his gr. s. Wm. Tuttle Cook, and read at a meeting of the trustees of the Bill Library, of Norwich, Conn., by whose order it was published; dedicated by the writer to Hon. Henry Bill of N.Y., "who at all times was a true and faithful friend to the subject of this sketch!"

"I was the youngest of eight children, six sons and two daughters. My childhood and youth were spent in my native place until I had entered my eighteenth year, in the spring of that year (1799), my parents removed from East Haven to Durham. That removal was the occasion of changing my course of life. I went there with no other expectation than that of being a farmer. Strange it is, that I have since found myself invested with the ministerial office. O, how unworthy for such a place. In my childhood, I know not that there was anything distinguishable beyond what was common. My childhood was allotted to me rather in the lower walks of life. My parents were not absolutely poor, but they had suffered severely in property in the revolutionary war, by British violence. Consequently, we were far from having all those comforts of life which people now have. I was a feeble child, but it was necessary that I should be doing something, and by doing something in the field, or by using the oar, at the latter of which I became an expert, I have no doubt I prepared myself for endurance. I came up, however, like a plant of late growth. My means of education were scanty, though not more so in my case than in that of others similarly situated. The only branches taught in the common schools of that day were reading, writing and arithmetic; though in the last of my schooling at East Haven I got hold of a small system of geography." His mother was a woman of great energy and decision, joined to fervent piety, and he thus alludes to her religious influence, aided by the Assembly's Catechism:

"Toward the close of the Sabbath, my mother would take me and my brother next older, into a room by ourselves and teach us the Catechism, and now I must confess, it was that mother's restraining influence and counsel that kept me from many a wrong act. Without her watchful care over me I should never have been what I am." That mother lived, not only to see her son a preacher of the Gospel, but to visit him at his home among the people of his charge. He says: "After we removed to Durham, some of my friends fancied I was qualified to teach a school, and I suppose I was willing myself to think so, and accordingly I commenced in the town of Branford. But after teaching, or pretending to teach, four weeks, the committee of visitors chose to let me off, and gave me leave to withdraw. They ought to have examined me at the first. That was the sorest trial I had then ever met, but it was good in the end; the best thing that could then have been done, for it gave me a spring, and a determination that I would know something. I went home sad, but soon a man of education came into Durham and commenced a school, and many of my age, some older and some younger, and I among the rest, went to his school to study English Grammar. I was deformed that I would not be outdone by anyone, and I believe I was not. The opportunity gave me celebrity in Durham and brought me more directly to the knowledge of our minister, Mr. Smith, the teacher having been his classmate. I then for the first time, came in contact with Murray's Grammar, and during the following summer I devoted every leisure moment to the study of it from the beginning to the end, examining every sentence till I understood it.

"In the spring of 1803, while teaching in the village of Durham, a revival of religion commenced, the first I ever knew anything about. I believe it was the first in that place, for it seemed to be a new thing to the old people there; the place had been noted for balls, and the business of the ball-room was conducted systematically; none were admitted to the higher grade but by vote, and the managers assigned to each his partner. Some young persons had already become hopefully converted and had forsaken the ball-room, but there was considerable strife in some to keep up the balls in opposition to the revival. I did not act in opposition to it as some did, for I dared not in conscience say it was false. Religious persons frequently accosted me on the subject. 'I felt there was a reality in religion, but was for deferring it.' At this time, a female friend, Mary Norton, who afterwards became his wife, took advantage of a growing mutual attachment to press upon him immediate attention to religion, exhorting him to seek the Savior in all the ardor of her own new born hope. He says, 'It was as unexpected as if a voice from the other world had spoken to me. I was surprised and confounded. Then I came to the resolution that I would delay the business of religion no longer.' After passing through many struggles with his own heart, he came at length to trust in Christ, was filled with joy and peace in believing, and united with the church in Durham on the first Sabbath in November, 1803. No sooner had he made profession of religion than his pastor began to urge him to fit for college, 'but,' he says, 'how could I engage in such an undertaking? I had not the means. I was born in sight of Yale College, and though an education there was highly desirable in my mind, and always had been, still I could see no way in which it could be accomplished.' He, however, commenced the Latin Grammar about the 20th of November of that year, and in ten months was examined and entered Yale College. He says, 'When I commenced fitting for college I had seventy-five dollars ($55) on hand, which I had earned by teaching, and I made that go as far as it would. But how inefficient was that to defray the expenses of four years in college! I had to work my way as I could, but O, the trial, the labor, the anxiety of mind! I know how to pity the young men who have thus to work their passage. Some of the time during the four years I knew what it was to feel the gnawings of hunger for weeks in succession, and to wet my pillow with my tears.' At one time as he was passing a baker's shop he saw some rolls of bread in the window, and having a few pennies on hand he stopped and inquired the price of a roll. The baker said, 'That is bread.' 'I know it,' was the reply, 'but I want it.' Finding that it was within his means, he bought and carried it to his room and there feasted upon it. He said had he not been so far from home his mother would have supplied him with food. 'But,' he continues, 'now, on looking back, I feel glad that I had those trials to pass through, for they taught me how to live. In college, notwithstanding the shortness of time in which I had to fit, I obtained a respectable standing, being about midway among the first third of my class.'

After leaving college he taught school a short time and then commenced studying theology with his pastor, Mr. Smith, teaching Mr. Smith's boys to pay his board with him.

The next May (1806) he was licensed to preach "much sooner," he says, "than I ought to have been. But Mr. Smith thought I should do well enough. Then came the solar realities of life. I had got to make my way in the world by some means, but by what I could not foresee. My object in obtaining an education was, that I might be fitted to preach the Gospel to my fellow beings, not that I expected freedom from toil and anxiety, and perhaps much opposition from ungodly men, but that I might be of some use in the world." Mr. Tuttle came to the parishes of Groton and North Groton in April, 1810, being recommended to do so by a college acquaintance, the Rev. Hezekiah G. Ufford, who preached here a few Sabbaths previous to this time.

The church in Groton had been destitute of a pastor fifteen years. North Groton (now Ledyard) had had no settled minister for thirty-nine years. The church had become extinct, and there was nothing to remind one that there ever had been a church of Christ gathered here, except a church edifice in a state of decay, a few names of church members found on the society records, and an ancient communion service.

Mr. Tuttle says when sermon preached at the dedication of the present house of worship December 6, 1843: "The former house of worship was the first that was ever erected in this society. It was commenced in 1727, and though it underwent some partial repairs at different periods of its existence, it was never finished even till the day it was taken down. Every storm and every winter's blast had searched its environs and found some way of access to its interior. It was erected doubtless by people of one denomination and for their own use, for it is not probable that there was then any religious dissent in the place. But during the long period of almost forty years, in which there was no settled pastor, the pulpit was occupied occasionally by preachers of almost all of the different denominations existing in this part of our country, and sometimes it stood probably for months unoccupied. I am informed that it once stood so for years, a place of the moaning—not of penitent souls, but of the wind's and uttering the melancholy tale that 'truth,' or rather the love of truth, 'had fallen in the streets.' What its glory was during the successive periods of my predecessors, or what success attended their labors, I have no means of knowing. There was a church in existence, organized it is supposed, about the year 1729. But no record of that church have I seen, nor was I ever acquainted with a single member of it. How long it had been extinct when I came to this place I know not. My settlement here was effected by men who remembered that in their younger days they had a pastor; principally must I attribute it to the influence of one man (Capt. Robert Allyn), and himself not a professor of religion. The present church was formed Dec. 12, 1810. Five persons, one male and four females, on that day met at the house of Stephen Morgan and signed the church articles, 'In the presence of Walter King, pastor of the 2d Congregational church in Norwich, and Timothy Tuttle, candidate for the gospel ministry.'

The names of those persons were Robt. Allyn, Esq., father of the Capt. Allyn above mentioned. He was then in his 83d year and had never before professed religion; Prudence Morgan, Priscilla Lee, Anna Gallup, Freeloze Morgan. All the females except one were far advanced in life.

Mr. Tuttle was ordained at Groton as Pastor of the First and Second Congregational churches in Groton, Aug. 14, 1811. He was expected to preach in each church on alternate Sabbaths and was to receive a salary of $450 per annum, each society paying him $225.

One reason why he was so deeply interested in the people of his charge, was the uniform kindness with which he was received. In the spring before he was ordained, he had a severe attack of illness at the house of Capt. James Mitchell, one of his parishioners, and the kindness of Capt. M. and his wife, together with the services of his physician, Dr. John O. Miner, gratuitously given, was ever remembered by him with gratitude.

Another thing which attached him to the people, was the large number of youth in the North Society, a fact which may be readily understood, when it is stated that seventy singers residing in that society, met at the old meeting house, and rode in procession led by their chorister James Gorr, to the church in Groton to assist in the ordination exercises. They rode in primitive style on horseback with saddle and pillion. Several of that choir are still living.

There was much work to be performed in this new field. The churches in which Mr. Tuttle preached were seven miles distant from each other, and the parish extended several miles each way, beyond the churches. He sought by every means he could use to benefit his people both spiritually and temporally. The standard of education was low. English grammar was not taught in any school in the town. He visited the public schools, encouraged the introduction of well educated teachers, and during his residence among his people received hundreds of youth into his house, to be fitted for college or to become teachers in the public schools. He visited much among his parishioners, held weekly meetings at the school houses, and in dwelling houses, in the different parts of his extensive parish, and this practice was continued even to the last year of his life.

In 1822 the society in Groton requested Mr. Tuttle to relinquish fifty dollars of his salary, thus reducing their proportion to one hundred and seventy-five dollars. He did so, and continued to preach to them until April, 1831, when after having assisted them in erecting a new church edifice, he was dismissed, the most friendly feeling existing between them, which continued to the time of his death. He said in reference to his dismissal, "I am tired of being half a minister." In the early stages of his ministry in North Groton (now Ledyard), Mr. Tuttle met with much opposition from the enemies of the truth. At nearly every meeting of the Ecclesiastical society, there was a conflict between its friends and its enemies. It was not on account of any personal dislike to him, but to the truth which he preached, and to the denomination to which he belonged. One of his most violent opposers on being asked, "How do you like Mr. Tuttle?" replied, "He wears well."

In March, 1834, the "Church and friends" in North Groton gave Mr. Tuttle a "call," requesting him to give them the other half of his pastoral services, which call he accepted on a salary of three hundred dollars per annum.

His ministry was blessed with several seasons of special revival, particularly in 1814, 1831, 1842, 1850 and 1858.

Still the days of darkness and discouragement were many. One communion service was held when there was no male member belonging to the church. Mr. Tuttle said in referring to it, "I borrowed a Deacon" from the Groton church. From the time of the organization of the church to the close of the year 1829, forty-six persons had been received to its membership, thirty-eight females and eight males, but the number of male members was soon diminished by deaths and removals, so that for several years previous to 1833, Warren Williams v.<sup>a</sup>, the only male member in the church. He was deacon, chorister, and delegate to all meetings of consecration, ordinations and dismissions. He was, as a neighboring minister remarked, "Captain, mate and all hands."

But as time passed on and another generation came upon the stage, warm friends for whom the aged pastor felt strong attachments, were raised up and towards the close of his life, it seemed a relief to him, to feel that there were those upon whom he could depend to watch over this particular branch of the church when his work here was done, and in one instance, he made a special request to one of his friends, from whom he had received many tokens of kindness, that he should care for his people when he was gone, and it was a consoling thought that such a promise had been made him. Before the formation of the Sabbath school, the young people met their pastor once in two weeks to recite the assembly's catechism. A Sabbath school was organized about the year 1818. The manner in which it was conducted was entirely different from that of modern Sabbath schools. The children were required to learn verses from the Bible and hymns; the pastor heard the recitations, and a young man who was studying with him kept an account of the number learned. At the close of the school in autumn scholars were paid in books, at the rate of the value of a penny for ten verses from the Bible, and the same for twenty verses of hymns. Three little girls, Sally Sterry, Anna Billings and Tabitha Lamb recited each one thousand verses from the Bible, and each received a Bible as a reward.

After several years a proposition was made to establish a Sabbath school library; some of the young ladies started a subscription paper and obtained the sum of seven dollars, with which to commence a library.

At the close of the Sabbath school for the winter, a Bible class for young people took its place, the pastor prepared questions, and copies of them were distributed among the members of the class, who were expected to prepare answers in writing, and read them at the class meeting. From these small beginnings, the Sabbath school has increased till it has embraced nearly all the members of the congregation, and has obtained the name of "The Banner Sabbath School of the State."

An extract from Mr. Tuttle's half-century sermon will show how deeply he loved this institution: "Let me exhort you also ever to cherish a deep interest in the prosperity of the Sabbath school. You know there are many of the adult population around you who do not attend public worship any where, and the probability is that but very few, if any of them, will ever alter their course. What then you have to do is to labor to save their children from becoming home-made heathen, and since many of your own children are going to other parts, if you would have the congregation increase in numbers and strengthened, if you would, in a moral sense, lay a good foundation for those that shall come after you; if you would be instrumental in raising up a community who shall appreciate the institutions of the gospel, and be determined to maintain them, then let the Sabbath school be the object of your earnest solicitude, and untiring effort. I should be sorry to find a member of this church who feels no interest in the Sabbath school. I should fear that such an one had no interest in good things."

One of Mr. Tuttle's pupils says in speaking of him, "He was a man of few words, but those words were often proverbs in meaning. Discriminating and sparing in his praise, the parishioner or pupil was fortunate who drew from him even moderate approbation." The following are among the anecdotes related of him:

On one occasion after having performed a marriage service, the aunt of the groom met him and asked, "What fee did you get?" he replied, "Can you keep a secret?" She says, "O yes," he answered "So can I."

At another time he called on one of his parishioners after the family had taken tea. The lady of the house, who prided herself in the quality of her tea, prepared, as she supposed, a cup for him; after waiting a suitable time for his praise, and not hearing from him she says, "Mr. Tuttle, how do you like your tea?" He replied,

"There's no bad taste to it." When the lady emptied the teapot she found she had been giving her pastor warm water, the tea she had forgotten.

Several years after having left Groton, he exchanged with the minister then there, and the remark was made to him by one of his hearers, "You preached that sermon here before." He replied, "When you live up to that I'll preach another."

Again after having married a couple he turned to the bride, who was seated by his side at the table, and calling her by name, said, "Do you want to know how to have a good husband?" "Yes sir," she said. "Well! Be a good wife," was the rejoinder. Other anecdotes might be related, but these will show the peculiar vein of humor he possessed. During several winters in succession he delivered lectures on scientific subjects to the younger members of his parish. He lectured on Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, Anatomy and Physiology; the last named subject was one in which he was very deeply interested. Mr. Tuttle's health was never firm, and for many years he had suffered from a disease (water on the heart), which must eventually destroy his life. In January, 1864, he went out on a severely cold day to visit some of his parishioners, and to hold an evening meeting. The effort was too great, and exposure to cold aggravated the disease. He remained at home one Sabbath. Afterward, though suffering greatly, he attended to his pastoral duties. In April he attended the minister's meeting at New London, and preached before his brethren in the ministry for the last time. His decline was so gradual as to be almost imperceptible to himself or those about him. He rode out, visited his people, and preached once on each Sabbath till within three weeks of his death. His days were passed in quiet, but his nights were attended for the most part with intense suffering. There was no severe pain, but an irregular beating of the heart, and difficulty of breathing deprived him of rest. Though he had not expressed the thought that he should not recover, yet it seemed to be in his mind. He appeared to be taking his leave of earthly things. He frequently went to the windows and looked out upon the trees and flowers which his own hand had planted, saying, "I never saw the earth look so beautiful before." A pocket edition of the Greek Testament given him by one who in the early part of his ministry studied with him, had been in his hands almost daily for years. Two weeks before his death it was laid aside. On being asked how many times he had read it through, he said he did not know, but mentioned the chapter at which he left off. After his decease the little well-worn volume was, according to his request, returned to the giver.

His sufferings now began to increase, so that they were as severe during the day as in the night, still there was no delirium, no forgetfulness. His domestic affairs were cared for to the last days of his life. He had expressed a desire to recover, and occupy his pulpit again, but, after being told that he seemed approaching his end, he gave up the thought, saying, "I wish I could preach one more sermon."

He spoke frequently of his own unworthiness, and of his trust in Christ, saying, "O, that I could have the lowest place at his feet, it would be enough." Once he mentioned dear friends who had gone before to heaven, saying to a member of his family, "I shall see your mother there, and I shall see McEwen." He then spoke of a beloved member of his congregation, who died a few months before, and said, "One day when I went to see Col. Wood, I found him in great distress, and said to him, 'There's no suffering in heaven,' he answered, 'I know it, I wish I was there,' and then he added, 'I hope I shall meet him there.' He had words of counsel, warning or encouragement, and expressions of gratitude for kindness shown him, for those who called to see him. Three of his four grandchildren were from home, a grandson and two grand-daughters. The grandson he did not expect to see, but said, "I want to see the girls." A message was sent to them. One returned the week before his death, and it was her privilege, evening after evening, to sing to her beloved grandfather those hymns so precious to him—"My faith looks up to thee," "Guide me O thou Great Jehovah," "There is a land of pure delight"—the last mentioned to his favorite tune of "Jordan." The other grand-daughter did not get the first message, and arrived only in time to receive his dying blessing. He had prayed that he might witness another revival of religion among his people. He seemed to have the assurance that there would be one; he said to his friends, "There will be a revival of religion, I shall not live to see it, but there will be one." At another time he said, "I fear that I love this church because it is my church, and not because it belongs to my Savior."

On the last Sabbath of his life he sent a message to an aged member of the parish. Early the following morning the old gentleman came to visit his dying pastor. His voice had then failed so that it was difficult for him to be understood. He said to a member of his family, "Tell him I want him to be a true follower of Christ." The old gentleman replied, with a trembling voice, "I am sure I want to be."

His strength returned so that he was able to converse during the day. He took leave of his family toward evening, remembering the absent one, and about 11 o'clock P. M. passed away, Monday, June 6, 1864.

In stature Mr. Tuttle was rather above the medium height, inclining in late years to stoop a little; in manner he was quiet and reserved; his style of oratory was not the most pleasing to the ear perhaps, but one on listening to him could not but feel assured that he was earnest in what he said, and his sermons lacked not for depth of thought. His style was clear and comprehensive, and he was careful to use no more words than was necessary to express his exact meaning.

For fifty-four years he was familiar with the affairs of this church and people, and often would he speak of the great changes which had taken place, not only in this immediate vicinity, but in the affairs of this great nation for whose prosperity he always felt an intense interest, and for whose success he expressed the warmest solicitude during our civil war, but whose triumph he did not live to witness. It seemed to him on looking over his past life, that but little had been accomplished, compared with the largeness of his desires, yet could we review the past, could we see this society as it was sixty four years ago, could we watch the improvements that have been made through his instrumentality, we should realize more fully than we now do, that this devoted minister did not waste in idleness, or bury his talents in the earth.

Extract from funeral sermon by the Rev. T. L. Shippman: "Mr. Tuttle's preaching has been instructive rather than exciting. He has fed his people with knowledge and understanding. He has shown himself to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. His Greek Testament has lain on his study table, often consulted to catch the shades of meaning which no translation can convey. His style is a model of simplicity and perspicuity. While lacking the grace of eloquence necessary to a popular speaker, he has nevertheless been a persuasive one, for his preaching has been enforced by the eloquence of a holy life. As a pastor, you know after what manner he has been with you at all seasons, with what fidelity he has testified repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ, not only in the sanctuary, but from house to house and by the wayside, what a deep interest he has shown in all that concerns your welfare, what solicitude he has felt that after his death it may go well with you, and your children after you, with what sleepless vigilance he has watched over the lambs of the flock, and how he has prayed without ceasing for the young, that they might be kept from temptation, and their feet guided in the way of peace."

"The cause of education has always found in him a warm friend and he has done not a little by personal teaching and courses of lectures, as well as by his visits to the public schools, to raise the standard of education here."

"The success which has crowned his efforts is well known not only at home but abroad, for Ledyard and Groton have sent forth not a few who have honored their early training and who cherish for their pastor the affection of children for a father."

"You feel to day that it will be difficult to supply his place, and this feeling is the best tribute you could pay to his excellence. His brethren in the ministry share in your estimate of him. I have known him long and known him well, and the better I have known him the more I loved him. The service devolved upon me to day is truly a labor of love."

"We shall miss him in our monthly meeting, we shall miss his presence, we shall miss his prayers, we shall miss the influence of his excellent spirit. His dissertations and expositions of scripture have been among the most valuable contributions to the meeting. Simple in language but rich in thought his articles have always commanded attention, and have elicited from those who have listened to them no small commendation. We all know what Dr. McEwen thought of his neighbor Tuttle. In the punctuality of his attendance, not only upon the ministers meeting but upon other ecclesiastical gatherings, and the anniversaries of important benevolent societies when the infirmities of age might have seemed to excuse him, he has left an example worthy of imitation. On occasions when difficult matters have come before the association or consociation, though his words have been few, his counsels have been wise and his judgment has had great weight with the body."

From personal reminiscences of Mr. Tuttle by Rev. James A. Gallup, a native of Ledyard: "We shall not cease to remember the marked simplicity of his character. Without pride or ostentation, opposed to all pretence and mere show in character and manners, never seeking great things for himself or his friends and content with small and honest gains, he lived among us unto the end. This simplicity pervaded all his habits of life and his intercourse with others. It characterized his conversation and his style of public address. True merit he was quick to see and admire, pretence he despised. Ideas he appreciated, but mere words however elegant and polished, were his abhorrence. He was himself a man of few words, but these words were often proverbs in meaning.

"He still lives in his patient example of industry. In his study or in his field he was pre-eminently an industrious man. At home or abroad, in his parish, he was never idle. He knew not how to be still when able to move. Few men have used more constantly or faithfully their full measure of strength.

"Nor shall we soon forget his public spirit. He entertained the most liberal ideas of culture and improvement. He believed in progress, material, intellectual and spiritual. He stimulated the young to think intelligently and liberally on all questions. He preached up benevolence as good economy as well as a christian virtue. The poor always found in him a friend. He took a deep interest in education, opened his house as a school for teachers, visited the public schools, gave lectures to the young people of his parish on the natural sciences and in every way aimed to awaken in all a liberal and cultivated spirit. He kept pace with the times and made himself familiar with the march of events and with the great principles involved in them. Though in no sense a politician, he dared to be a patriot, and to express with characteristic candor and plainness his love for liberty and the Union.

"He will live long in his great singleness of purpose. The spiritual welfare of his people was the one great absorbing thought of his life. The prosperity of Zion was his constant prayer and labor. He rejoiced in those seasons of revival that repleashed her waste places and brought honor to her God. He longed for their return.

"His sermons and exhortations at all times bore witness of the earnestness of his desire for the salvation of souls. Though not especially gifted in persuasive private conversation with the impenitent, yet many will remember the somewhat quaint but often telling words addressed to them on some chance opportunity and if not always the most smooth and winning, yet no one doubted their sincerity or their force. He longed to see the church on a substantial foundation and to feel sure that it would never be less vigorous and hopeful than at present. Often, my friends, has he spoken to us of the prosperity of Zion when he should be gone. We shall also remember his strong attachment to the places and scenes of his early life. With what zest he revisited the old places, and re-called the early associates of his youth. What fresh and increasing interest he manifested towards Yale College both in its earlier and later history. Every year almost without exception found him at her annual commencement exercises. Before the era of railroads he failed not to pay his annual visit to his Alma Mater, traveling in his own private carriage and visiting at convenient intervals at the house of some friend on the route. His own struggles for an education made him the earnest friend of all who encountered similar trials.

"A self-made man himself, he had the highest esteem for all who by their own exertions rose to honor and usefulness, and the largest faith in the ability of all youth to make something of themselves, and I doubt not many have gone forth from this center of his influence inspired directly or indirectly with loftier faith and a nobler ambition than they would otherwise have had."

In 1807, under the preaching of Dr. Gridlin, he became converted, and united with the 1st. Presb. chdh. of Newark. In 1816, then comparatively a young man for the office, he was elected an elder of the church, which then numbered over five hundred communicants. For a number of years he was also a teacher and superintendent of the Sabbath school, and in the latter part of his life was made an almoner of the church, and devoted nearly all his time and all his income, excepting necessary support of his family, to visiting, comforting, caring for and relieving the afflicted and the needy. His death occurred suddenly from apoplexy, March 22, 1847. He had been attending to some business, and was standing on the corner of Broad and Market streets, in Newark, looking for his horse which he had left there, but which some boys had taken for a ride, when he fell and expired. Of his life and character the Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen thus speaks: "I honor his memory. His life shone as that of a humble, consistent, heavenly minded Christian. There was a tenderness of spirit about him, an affectionate sympathy with his neighbors, and an honest heartedness that drew to him the love and esteem of his townsmen. He was an Israelite in whom there was no guile. He followed the Savior with humble and willing footsteps. He loved his closet and there recruited his strength for the conflict. His best, unmistakable memorial is the preciousness of his memory in Newark where he lived and died." The story of his life written by Pres. Tuttle of Wabash College is beautiful and impressive. It was first published by Robert Carter & Brothers of N. Y. Subsequently an edition somewhat abridged and containing a steel portrait was published by the American Tract Society; m. 631144. Jacob Tuttle, b. Aug. 24, 1786; New Vernon, Morris Co., N. J., apprenticed to a carpenter in Mendham, N. J., and the writer of this sketch met a lady in Pa. who said that Jacob, when an apprentice, had frequently walked four miles after his day's work was done to cut up wood for a poor widow in the village without pay. He was very assiduous in study during his leisure hours, and Dr. Amzi Armstrong, then minister at Mendham, encouraged him to begin the study of the languages, which he did, reciting to Dr. A. In 1808 he united with the Pres. chh. at M., and soon after entered the Bloomfield Acad., then almost as famous as Princeton. In 1812 he was examined and admitted to the junior class at Princeton, but for want of means was not able to continue and was obliged to return to Bloomfield. His acquaintance with classical studies was so thorough that when he was 70 years old he read and construed many of the text books readily. Indeed, his memory was so accurate that when he was nearly 80 years old he learned the entire epistle to the Hebrews, with his Bible class repeating chapter after chapter with great fluency. The shorter catechism, he could repeat questions and answers to the very last of his life, with a multitude of scripture passages and Watts' psalms and hymns. When on his death-bed, a beautiful octogenarian, he was wont to repeat the scriptures from memory and sing the hymns with perfect cheerfulness as if his chamber was the vestibule of heaven. In 1814 he began study of theology under Dr. Armstrong, and in 1817 removed to Newton, Sussex Co., N. J., and taught in the Academy there until 1820, when on the 20th of April he was licensed to preach by the Presb. of Jersey. The same year he was called to the West Miford church, Passaic Co., and ordained and installed Aug. 14, 1821. He labored here until Oct. 1832; the first four years with little apparent success. Intemperance was blasting all that was fair in that beautiful valley and he was about to give up when a remarkable seriousness was seen in his congregation, which was followed by an extensive revival. In the spring of 1832 another revival occurred, during which he and his devoted wife, a lady of rare excellence and intelligence, visited every house and cabin for miles in every direction, and their names are still held in great veneration in this region of their labors. In 1832 he removed to Ohio and engaged in home missionary work, planting several churches and everywhere honored as a true man of God. His piety was of a cheerful kind, which made him a welcome visitor in the homes of his hearers and especially in the sick room.

Wm Tutte

A few years before his death he received an injury which caused him great pain. Up to that time he had been a hale, active man, whose quick step and bright looks excited general attention. He returned to Jersey, Ohio, and spent the last years of his life in occasional preaching and other christian labors. His last year was one of rich spiritual enjoyment, and only a day or two before he died he was heard singing as cheerfully as a child the psalm:

" My spirit looks to God alone,
My rock and refuge is his throne
In all my fears and all my straits
My soul on His salvation waits."

He d. Jan. 6, 1866. In Wilson's Presb. Almanac, vol. 9, from which the above sketch is taken, there is appended a beautiful eulogy of Rev. Jacob Tuttle by Rev. Dr. Cox. He m. Aug. 22, 1814, Elizabeth Ward of Bloomfield, N. J., b. Aug. 26, 1787; d. Aug. 29, 1871. She was the 8th of 12 children of Samuel Lawrence and Margaret (Farrand) Ward, who was of the 4th generation in descent from Geo. Ward of Branford, Conn.; Margaret Farrand was of the 4th generation in descent from Nathaniel Farrand of Milford, Conn.

I. Samuel Lawrence, b. Aug. 25, 1815; about the age of nine years he was sent to the Bloomfield Acad. During the revival there in 1835 he was converted, and began preparation for the ministry. In the fall of 1837 his uncle Wm. Tuttle of Newark took him into his own family and sent him to one of the best schools in the city. When his father removed to Ohio he remained in Newark, his uncle Wm. assuming all the expenses of his education. In the spring of 1837 he entered with his cousin Wm. P. Tuttle, the Soph. class at Princeton; "halfadvanced." Here his mind rapidly developed, and his class standing was high, especially as a speaker, and he was repeatedly elected to represent his class and society at public exhibitions. At his grad. in 1836 he was appointed one of the speakers. In 1837 he entered the Theo. Sem. at Auburn and took a high rank as a writer, speaker and scholar, and after the usual course of three years was licensed to preach Oct. 8, 1840, by the Newark Presbytery. He was soon afterwards called to, ordained and installed over the church at Caldwell, N. J. His ministry was successful and members were added to the church. He had the remarkable faculty of being able to call every person in his parish by their christian name. Finding his salary insufficient he was dismissed at his own request in April, 1849. He was employed for several years by the Am. Bible Soc., both in the Secretary's office and as general agent for Conn. In Jun., 1851, he was installed pastor of the chd. at Madison, N. J., and continued until April, 1862, when he resigned, much against the wishes of nearly all of his parishioners. He was then appointed agent of the Am. Bible Society for western N. Y., but in 1863 was invited to the Bible House as assistant to the Secretaries, which position he occupied until his death. In this position he displayed great talent, tact and industry, and was often sent to distant and important cities to represent the parent society. In April, 1866, he was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism, and d. on the 16th of that month. His funeral at Madison was an extraordinary one from the solemnity and deep interest manifested, and the great number who attended from Caldwell and other places near Madison. The Newark Presbytery, then in session, adjourned to attend the services. In person he was nobly formed and evidently very strong. His countenance bright and kindled quickly in conversation or public speaking. His voice uncommonly rich and powerful, delightful to hear, yet leaving the impression that its power was not fully exerted. Some of his sermons were fine specimens of effective eloquence and it was not unfrequent to see numbers of his hearers moved to tears. In prayer he had unusual gifts. The prayer he offered at the bedside of his dying father, the last visit he and his brother, the Prest. of Wabash Col., made to him, will not be forgotten. Those present say it was a marvelous prayer in its tenderness, earnestness and exalted faith, as if both father and son were then seeing God face to face. Those who wept under the power of that prayer did not doubt that the father would soon be in his Father's house, but they little thought that the son also was so near.—*Wilson's Presb. ‡There are traces scattered through the histories of the Wyoming Valley of several families of Tuttle's whose records I have not been able to obtain. Charles Miner speaks of Thomas Bennett, "at a family renowned in that region for patriotism and courage," whose daughter, Mrs. Myers (16 yrs. old at the time of the battle), was visited by Prof. Sullivan, sr., to whom she related many interesting incidents relating to t. at event. Her mother was one of the only five women in Wyoming when Mrs. Young arrived in 1770. Her father, Thomas Bennett, escaped the massacre, and returned to W. in the spring and was soon captured by a party of six Indians together with his son, a lad, and Mr. Hammond, a neighbor. The Indians marched them towards the north, and the second or third night Mr. Bennett concluded they were going to murder him. Watching his chance he killed the Indian on watch with his own spear, and loosing the bonds of Mr. Hammond and his son they attacked the other five, of whom they killed four and wounded the fifth, and then escaped taking the scalps of the slain. Mrs. Myers spoke of her sister Mrs. Tuttle, and of her son, Thos. Myers, who was a Sheriff of Luzerne Co. A daughter of Mrs. Myers married the Rev. Dr. Pick, editor of the Methodist Review of New York. Col. Pickering's narrative of his abduction, 1778, says: "At Tunkhannock I found a bundle of clothing sent by your mother, and also an inhabitant of Pittstown going down the river as far as Lackawanna Creek. And Tuttle, one of the 'boys' said he would go down with us and take his chance. The next morning we three set off in a canoe. Landing the man destined for L. the other went on with me to Wilkesbarre. On the way he told me, he had joined the 'boys' only two or three days before in order to discover who I was, and to get me out of their hands. To this Mr. Miner adds the following note: "nor was Tuttle recreant to his faith. Deceive your enemy is a maxim of war!" It was important to their safety, that Pickering should be conciliated and won over. The Earls and Tuttles, shrewd men, were best able to throw him off his guard, and draw out his opinions and fath. on his purposes. There was not one of "that gang of ruffians" we firmly believe who would not sooner have sacrificed his life than betray his fellows." In Kingston (formerly Wyoming), Luzerne Co., Pa., "Tuttle Creek" indicates a family locality.

63313. Stephen Tuttle, b. Aug. 4, 1772; rem. from Wilkesbarre to Elmira abt. 1811 of which he was the first president. He owned a large farm adjoining the village, which he cultivated and engaged besides in merchandising and milling. He was much respected in the community of Elmira and d. there 1851; m. Mary Ann, dau. of Capt. Wm. McKerachan,# b. Kent, Litchfield Co., Conn., 1773; d. Elmira, N. Y., Jan. 3, 1860, a. 87. She and her sister (Mrs. Alexander) then three weeks old, were rescued from the massacre at Wyoming, by their mother and escaped. They went first to New Milford, Conn., where Mrs. Kerachan m. Mathias Hollenback, and after a considerable time rem. thence to Tioga Point, N. Y.; thence to Elmira, N. Y., about 1811. As long ago as 1795, Miss Kerachan was accustomed to ride on horseback in company with her step-father, Mr. H., from Wilkesbarre to Elmira. Mr. H., traded with the Indians and supplied with rations the council under Col. Pickering, 1791. After m. to Stephen Tuttle she lived at Tioga Point; thence in 1811 to Elmira and next year moved into the house where she lived 50 yrs. and where she d. Rev. David Murdock preached her funeral sermon in which he quotes some of her short and dry sayings. The Am. Year Book for 1861, contains a biog. sketch in which she is described as "a woman of genuine piety, remarkable shrewdness and honesty, and a little blunt withal. She had little faith in windy religionists." An only child, Harriet.

63313. Harriet Tuttle, b. Wilkesbarre, Penn., 1804; educated at Bethlehem, Pa.; d. Dec., 1877; m. 1823, Hon John Arnot of Elmira, who d. 1873.

I. Mary Ann Tuttle Arnot, m. 1823, William Butler Ogden; b. Delaware Co., N. Y., June 15, 1805; d. 1877, at High Bridge, N. Y. City; buried in Woodlawn cemetery. At the age of 16 the death of his father devolved business upon him which caused him to travel much about the country and to visit the large cities. At the age of 18 he became Brigade inspector in the state militia. In 1834 elected to the N. Y. Leg., especially to advocate construction of the N. Y. & E. R. R. In 1835, went to Chicago, Ill., and estab. a land and trust agency, which has developed into one of the institutions of the West. His operations in real estate soon became immense, and the city authorities being too tardy, he laid out and constructed more than 100 miles of streets at his own cost. He built the first swing bridge in Chicago, then never having seen one. He was among the first to introduce the reaping and mowing machines into general use, and at his suggestion the first reaper was sent to the London Exhibition of 1851. The resuscitation and completion of the Ill. and Mich. canal enlisted his untiring efforts. He was the first mayor of Chicago and often elected to the city council. He declined the nom. of his party (dem.) for Congress in 1852. He was the first Pres. of the Rush Med. Col.; Pres. Chicago & Galena U. R. R. Co.; Pres. North Western R. R. Co.; Pres. of the National R. R. Convention at Phila., 1850 to inaugurate measures for the building of the Union Pacific R. R.; Pres. Ill. & Wis. R. R.; Pres. of the Buffalo & Miss. R. R. Co., in Ind. till merged in the Mich. Central; Pres. of the Chicago Branch in Ill.; Pres. of the Board of Com. of Sewerage in Chicago; Pres. of the Chicago, St. Paul and Fond du Lac R. R., which he built largely from his own means. An active director of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago R. R. Co., of which at a period of great difficulty and after repeated declining, the receivership was forced upon him with a salary of $25,000. The high salary, however, he declined. When the Union Pacific R. R. Co. was organized under the act of Congress, he was chosen its first Pres. He was the owner of probably the largest lumbering establishment in the world, at Peshtigo, Wis. Nearly every institution in the Northwest, including the Rush Med. Col.; the Theo. Semi. of the N. W.; the Hist. Soc.; the Academy of Sciences; the Astronomical Soc.; the University of Chicago and the Chicago Woman's Home received from him timely and substantial aid. He has done more than any other one man on this continent for the development of the N. West; and on the ground that he had been foremost and immeasurably ahead of all other *Wm. McKerachan came from Ireland to America in 1772, and taught school in Penn. and New Jersey. In 1772 he was attracted to Wyoming by the romance of the contest. He settled in Hanover township, where he taught school, opened a store and bought lands. He was versed in mathematics, navigation and surveying, and among his papers were found stanzas of poetry supposed to be original with him. He was a magistrate and one of the judges of the County Court of Westmoreland, appointed by Gov. Trumbull of Conn., and Capt. of the Hanover militia company who took part in the battle of Wyoming. On the morning of that dreadful day, he said to his Lieut. Lazarus Stewart: "My pursuits have been those of peace; you have been reared to war, and accustomed to command. Our parade I can manage my men, but in the field no unnecessary hazard should be run; a mistake might prove fatal. Take y<sup>t</sup>he lead, and I will fight under you with my men as an aid or as a private in the ranks. Your presence at the head of the Hanover boys will inspire confidence." So it was arraigned, and they fell together. He was tall, had a fine person, an alert step, a cheerful disposition, and an expressive and pleasant countenance. "Farewell, to the brave, the generous, the true-hearted Irishman; gentle sleep and a happy resurrection to his manly spirit, who in the midst of gathering honors and accumulating property, laid down his life for Wyoming." —Chas. Miner's Hist. of Wyoming.

men in protecting the public credit and advancing public improvements his name was urged for the democratic nomination for President in 1860. In 1871, time of the great Chicago fire he was in N. Y. city. He hurried back to find his house with the gathered treasures of a life time in ruins. His losses were over a million of dollars. Immediately following this the news came of the destruction of his great mills at Peshtigo, including the village. His loss here was over a million and a half of dollars. A fearful loss of life, the burning to death of nearly 600 people accompanied this disaster. The restoration of the business he at once commenced and has completed. In 1866 he purchased a villa and 110 acres of land near High Bridge in the city of N. Y., to which he removed soon after the great fire. The land has a frontage of half a mile on the East River, and is tastefully laid out, and replete with every luxury and convenience. His estate at his decease was valued at abt. five millions. At his funeral, "Bishop Clarkson of Nebraska advancing to the head of the chancel steps, with his hands folded before him, gazed sadly for a moment on the face of the dead." "You will allow me," the Bishop then said, his voice being at first low and tremulous, "to speak a few simple words of him who lies here, one of the noblest and in some senses, the most brilliant man of our land. The great enterprises which he projected, who saw far in advance of his generation, the capabilities of the continent and who might be said to have been the master builder of a city that is the lasting marvel of these days, will be much written of and read; therefore we may pass them with simple mention." But, as we are about the coffin of him we revered, we may speak of these superior graces of character that made him so attractive to all, and truly loved by those near him; that charming courtesy that was inborn in him; that loving consideration for others that was prominent in his life; that sterling cheerfulness; that outstretched hand and ready help for every one that was unfortunate or distressed; that overflowing love for whatever was noblest in man, and that wise and patient council for hundreds that went to him in their perplexity. All this made him as practical a benefactor as the city, the railroad or the other material developments that he helped to assured existence. It is not often that a man has been in this life three score and ten years, and has left so many people that he has helped, lifted up and inspired as Mr. Ogden has. The announcement of his death will fill with sorrow hundreds that we know not of, and I am sure that in the many months that death has been watchful and tireless about the citadel of his life 'God bless you' ascended many hundred times. The same grateful affection that has brought me half way across the continent to lay my simple tribute upon his coffin, is felt by others and is a noble crown of his life. I knew him when he was foremost in the most active enterprises; when science and learning considered him their most genious patron. When the state recognized him as her wisest son; when the church regarded him as her constant helper, when he was everybody's constant friend and adviser, and when though burdened with great cares, he was ever genial, honest, high-toned, true-hearted, and light-souled. God be praised, that, now and then, here and there, such a man lives among us to help us by his example. Although Mr. Ogden was always a theoretical believer in christianity and a generous supporter of its institutions, yet it was not until late in life that he openly acknowledged his allegiance to the God who made him and the Savior who redeemed him. It would have been better, perhaps, if the whole of such a life had been spent as a child of Christ. What unlimited personal and national benefits might have resulted from his vast personal influence and amazing power, guided by the spirit of practical christianity. But it is well that he came in childlike faith and patience to the foot of the cross."

#The name on the original record is obscure. My opinion from the first has been that it was Tuttle, but might easily be mistaken for Tolle. It is written Tuttle, with but one small t, and that with so faint an indication of a cross that it might be taken for an l; and the u is so imperfectly formed that it might be taken for an o, making the word Tolle. Hon. L. M. Bottwood examined it, and at first thought it was Tolle, but afterwards changed his mind and believed it to be Tuttle. Rev. Dr. John F. Todd also examined the original record and thought it was Tolle, but at a later date he writes: "Since your letter I have re-examined the town record, and am pretty well satisfied that you are right in reading the name Tuttle, and not Tolle, with reference to Susanna, the wf. of Samuel Todd." Still I should not have felt satisfied to occupy the pages of this work with a record of Deacon Samuel Todd's descendants on so uncertain a foundation. Other circumstances, however, whose significance would be better understood by the genealogist than by the general reader, indicate very decidedly the verity of my conclusion, such as propinquity of place, the numerous Todd-Tuttle inter-marriages. His bro. Jonah Todd in Hannah Clark [1]; his bro. Daniel m. Desire Tuttle [1]; his s. Christopher m. Hannah Tuttle [4]; his dau. Susanna m. Caleb Huniston [1]. The will of Noah Pangborn devises land to Rev. Samuel Todd, who would be his 1st cous. on this theory, and makes Rev. Benjamin Doolittle (whose wf. Lydia would be his 1st cous.) an exec. of his will, etc.

*This compilation of descendants of Sarah (Tuttle) Slauson, is made up to a considerable extent from Rev. E. B. Huntington's Hist. of Stamford and Registration; a very careful and accurate writer. The first and second generations are doubtless entirely correct, and the third probably so. Beyond the third there are elements of uncertainty, and it is very likely some errors, which would not have existed had I been able to devote more time to the examination of land, probate and church records of Fairfield Co. This caution, however, does not apply to the record of descendants of Hannah Slauson [724] which was kindly corrected and extended by Charles W. Holly, Esq., of Stamford for the compiler.

When unearthed it was found in good condition excepting the heavy metal clasps were rusted off. The Bible remained with her dau., Mrs. Abigail H. II. Alfred Bishop, b. Dec. 21, 1798. At an early age commenced his "self-reliant career" as a teacher of a public school in Stamford. In a short time went to New Jersey with the purpose of farming. While thus employed he made experiments with pick ax, shovel and wheelbarrow to determine accurately the cost of removing earth to different distances, by which he prepared himself as a contractor. He was engaged on the Morris Canal, N. J., the great bridge over the Raritan river a New Brunswick, the Hoosatonic, Berkshire, Washington and Saratoga, Naugatuck and the New York & New Haven railroads.

He removed, 1834, from N. J. to Bridgeport, Conn., where he spent the rest of his life. "It is not claiming too much for him to say that the flourishing city owes much to his enterprise and public spirit. He readily inspired confidence in his plans for public improvements, and at his call the largest sums were cheerfully supplied."

But in the very midst of his extensive operations, and while forming plans for still greater works, he was suddenly arrested by his last sickness. From the first he felt that it would prove fatal; and now still more than while in health, he displayed his remarkable talent in arranging and planning all the details of a complicated operation. In the midst of great physical suffering he detailed with minuteness the necessary steps for closing up all his business arrangements, laying out the work for his executors as he would plan the details of an ordinary contract for a railroad. He then, in the same business-like manner, distributed his large estate. One-quarter of it he disposed of in gratuities outside of his own family, partly to his more distant relatives, partly to his personal friends who had been unfortunate, and partly to strictly benevolent uses. His pastor was remembered with an hundred dollars annuity; the American Bible Society received $10,000, and the Female Benevolent Society of Bridgeport, $5,000. After thus distributing one-fourth of his estate, the balance went to his wife and children.

He m. Mary, dau. of Ethan Ferris of Greenwich, and had 3 sons, all b. in Bloomfield, N. J. 1. ETHAN FERRIS, Y. C., and took master's degree at Trinity; took orders in the Epis. chh., and has had charge of a parish in Bridgeport, Conn., where he established St. Luke's College for the education of orphans and destitute boys. 2. WILLIAM DARIUS, b. Sept. 14, 1827; he had a strong natural liking for mechanics and science; Y. C. 1849; stud. law, but on death of his f., of whose est. he was one of the execs., his entire attention was given to railroad interests. He was for many yrs. Pres. of the N. Y. & N. H. Ry. R. R. In 1857 he was chosen Rep. of his Con. dist., receiving more than 3,000 votes above that of the Pres. candidate of the same party; while in Con. appt. chairman of Com. on Manufactures, and was prominent and popular as a speaker and debater. On the resignation of the Hon. Joseph Holt (afterw. Postmaster Gen.) as U. S. Commissioner of Patents, Mr. Bishop was appointed to that office. As a mem. of the Conn. Leg., to which he has been several times elected, his influence has been felt in the railroad legislation of the state. Of late years ill health has compelled him to relinquish public employments. 3. +Enos Weed, s. of Enos and supposed brother of Stephen, was one of the most erratic characters that Stamford has produced. He was literally an original. Thinking independently of book, and with regard to customary opinions or usages. In medicine he became noted as an adviser and practitioner in his own way. He constructed a spelling book with many novelties both in alphabet and in the orthography. He became a preacher when the orthodox could not wholly endorse, i.e., ver eadown. With all his eccentricity he was counted worthy in view of being appointed teacher of the first Methodist class established in Stamford, and he was authorized local preacher of that denomination. Mr. Huntington gives a specimen of his genius (p. 420) found in an old newspaper to which he sometimes contributed:

"My name is Enos Weed, and junior too,
 Which is something more,
 It shows that Weeds have grown before."

82. Timothy Edwards, b. May 14, 1669. Some remarkable providences are related of his early years. When a little child he fell into a tub of water and was taken out almost dead by a person passing. When a school boy he came near killing John Hunter by pointing a loaded gun at him; the gun flashed in the pan. Once he fell from a cherry tree and came near breaking his neck. Once he came near going under the ice while skating. At another time he swallowed a peach stone, which would have killed him had it not been forced up by natural causes. It was evidently his destiny to survive.

He fitted for college under Rev. Pelatiah Glover, minister at Springfield, Mass., an accomplished scholar, and entered Harvard, 1687, where he pursued the usual course of four years study receiving, July 4, 1691, two degrees, A. B. in the forenoon and A. M. in the afternoon; an uncommon mark of respect. Having pursued the usual course of study he was licensed to preach in May, 1694; and after preaching awhile as a candidate, was ordained 1698 pastor of the newly consecrated church at East Windsor, Conn. In the autumn of the same year, Nov. 6, 1694, he m. Esther, 2d child of Rev. Solomon Stoddard of Northampton, Mass. [App.]

In the spring of 1709 Mr. Edwards and Rev. Mr. Buckingham of Milford were appointed by the Colonial Leg. of Conn. Chaplains of the Conn. troops for the expedition against Canada. He left Windsor for New Haven in July and reached Albany, Aug. 15th, with three companies under Col. Luyingston. The march to Albany was attended with considerable exposure. The country was uncleared and he camped out two nights in the woods. On the 20th of Aug. he left Albany and marched for Wood Creek. At Saratoga, in consequence of fatigue and exposure, he was taken seriously ill. On the 14 of Sept., being unable to proceed, he was conveyed in a boat to Stillwater and thence carried back through the woods in a wagon and on a bed. Owing to the lateness of the season and other causes, the expedition was soon after relinquished, and Mr. Edwards in a few weeks returned home to Albany.

In the summer of 1752, finding the infirmities of age increasing upon him, he proposed the settlement of a colleague, and Rev. Joseph Perry was accordingly settled June 11, 1755. The salary of Mr. Edwards was continued until his death, which took place Jan. 27, 1758, in the 89th year of his age and 60th of his ministry. Mrs. Edwards survived him 12 years, and her husband's salary and the affections of his flock were continued to her until her death. She d. Jan. 19, 1770, in the 99th year of her age, retaining her mental powers to the last. They lived together in the married state upwards of 62 years. Mr. Edwards was universally esteemed and beloved as an upright, pious and exemplary man, and a faithful and very efficient minister of the Gospel.

Dr. Sereno E. Dwight in his biog. sketch says: "Rev. Timothy Edwards was five feet ten inches high, fair complexion, strong, robust frame, full but not corpulent, of polished manners, particularly attentive to dress and propriety of exterior; never appearing in public but in the full dress of a clergyman. On a visit to E. Windsor in the summer of 1823, I found a considerable number of persons advanced in years who had been well acquainted with Mrs. Edwards, and two, upwards of ninety, who had been pupils of her husband. Mr. E. was well acquainted with Hebrew literature, and was regarded as a man of more than usual learning; but was particularly distinguished for his accurate knowledge of the Greek and Roman Classics. He annually prepared a number of youths for college, there being at that time no public schools or academies endowed for the purpose. One of my aged informants who pursued his preparatory studies under him told me that on his admission into college, when the officers learned with whom he had studied, they remarked to him that there was no need of examining Mr. Edwards' scholars. He was, for that period, remarkably liberal and enlightened with regard to the education of his children, preparing not only his son, but each of his daughters also for college. On the Canada Expedition, he writes, in a letter dated Aug. 3, 1711, that Jonathan and the girls may continue their study of Latin; another letter, dated Aug. 5, that Jonathan may continue to recite his Latin to his elder sisters. When his daughters were of proper age he sent them to Boston to finish their education. All of his children became hopefully pions in their youth."

He always preached extemporaneously, and, until he was upwards of seventy, without noting down the heads of his discourses. After that time he commonly wrote the divisions on small slips of paper, which, as they appeared beyond the leaves of the Bible that he held in his hand, his parishioners called "Mr. Edwards' thinking papers." Apologizing for this one day to one of his parishioners, he remarked that he found his memory beginning to fail, but he thought his judgment as sound as ever; and so thought his people till near the close of his life. He was not known, it was said, to have written out but one sermon, that which he preached at the general election in 1732, and published; but Dr. Dwight saw a number of Mr. Edwards' sermons. They were written in a small, clear and beautiful hand. Within a few years a large number of his papers have been found, stowed away in some long forgotten repository. The election sermon is a solemn and faithful application of the doctrine of a general judgment to his hearers, particularly as legislators and magistrates. His son often visited his father and preached in his desk. It was commonly remarked that though Mr. Edwards was perhaps the most learned man, yet Mr. Jonathan was the deeper preacher. His influence over his congregation was commanding, and ever steadily exercised on the side of truth and righteousness. When he knew of any division among his people he went immediately to see that the parties were reconciled; and when he heard of any improper conduct, his custom was to go immediately and reprove them. Under his preaching the gospel was efficacious and revivals frequent. His son observed in 1737, that he had known of no parish in the west of New England, except Northampton, which so often had revivals of religion as his father's.

The general high character of the people of his parish and of their descendants, became noted, and genealogists and local historians have not failed to observe and to acknowledge the workings of some powerful influence as its primary cause. That influence may undoubtedly be traced to its faithful first pastor. At the time of his settlement at E. W. his father built for him a house on a farm of moderate extent which he had bought. It was then considered a handsome residence. "I saw it," says Dr. Dwight, "in 1803, a substantial house of moderate dimensions; had one chimney in the middle, and was entered like all the houses of that period, by stepping over the sill. In this house they lived and died and all their children were born. A step-stone that belonged to it is inserted in the foundation of the Theological Institute of Conn., at E. Windsor.

8212. Samuel Hopkins, bap. Oct. 31, 1729; Y. C. 1749; tutor 1751-5; pastor clbh. in Hadley, Mass. (1755-1809), 54 yrs. Struck with paralysis, Feb. 1809, which impaired his mental faculties, and d. March 8, 1811. He was economical and a good manager. Though very facetious among his friends, his manner abroad was so dignified as to inspire the children with awe. His pulpit delivery was slow and languid, requiring a laborious attention on the part of his hearers, but the matter of his discourse was usually sound, wise and practical. In his day the whole town formed but one congregation; and it was no small part of the minister's duty to keep out the sects or so called "interlopers." In this matter he had rare sagacity. His social qualities were of the highest order, and he was an attractive companion in all companies. One of the stories he used to tell was this: Visiting an invalid he said, "It is a long time since you have been able to attend meeting, would you not like to have the neighbors called in and have me preach a lecture at your house?" The sick man replied: "I should like it much, for I have not been able to get any sleep for a long time, and I know from much experience that your preaching will give me essential aid in this respect." He published two discourses on the "Church Membership of Infants," 1799, and a half century sermon, 1805.—Judd's Hist. of Hadley, p. 334. D. D., Y. C. 1802; m. 1756, Sarah (wid. of Rev. University of Vt., 1815-21; pastor at Newport, R. I., 1822-26. Bodily infirmity and depression of spirit, intensified by the death of his adopted son, John W. Hubbard (s. of Roswell), the separation of the family, the cares and burdens of unaccustomed business (as administrator of an estate), at length broke down his mental energies. Occasional aberrations of mind ended in deep religious melancholy, gloom and despair. He d. in a fit of apoplexy, at the home of his nephew, Rev. S. H. Riddell, in Glastonbury, Conn., Dec. 4, 1830, a. 71. A published fast day sermon, preached in 1812, bears this imprint on the title-page: "Published for the press by desire of some who heard it and liked it; by some who heard it and did not like it, and by the desire of others who did not hear it, but imagine they should not have liked it if they had." He was of commanding stature. Though of an austere and severe countenance, his feelings were ardent, and his susceptibility to external influences acute. His pulpit delivery was animated and vehement, rising at times to strains of lofty and powerful eloquence. He was an industrious and voluminous author, and published a large number of sermons, addresses, orations and A Dissertation on Christian Theology. In 1808 he collected and published the first complete and accurate edition of the works of Jonathan Edwards. He was one of the founders of the Mass. Miss. Soc. Active in originating the General Assembly of Mass. Member of the A. B. C. F. M. He was admitted to the bar in Dec., 1808, and began practice but was induced soon after to study theology. This great change he attributed in after years mainly to a striking sermon of the Rev. John M. Mason from the text "To the poor the gospel is preached." He studied a year at Andover and was licensed to preach in the fall of 1809, and in Aug., 1810, was called to the Brick Presb. chh. in N. York city, where he remained during his life, unmoved by invitations to the presidency of Hamilton Col. and to that of Dartmouth. He maintained for half a century his reputation as one of the first preachers of the metropolis. John and Martha (Gould) Davenport of Stamford, Conn., and g. s. of Rev. John D., the first minister at New Haven, b. 1715; Y. C. 1732; d. 1789; Col. of Mil.; one of the Council of State; Judge of the Fairfield Co. Court; Dea. Cong. chh. 1759 to 1789. Of his presence of mind Pres. Dwight relates a remarkable instance: "The 19th of May, 1780, was a very dark day; candles were lighted in many houses; the birds were silent and disappeared and the fowls went to roost. The Legislature of Conn. was then in session at Hartford. A very general opinion prevailed that the day of judgment was at hand. The House of Representatives being unable to transact their business adjourned. A proposal to adjourn the council was under consideration. When the opinion of Col. Davenport was asked he answered: "I am against an adjournment. The day of judgment is either approaching or it is not; if it is not, there is no cause for adjournment; if it is I choose to be found doing my duty. I wish, therefore, that candles may be brought." The following lines in relation to this event, from John G. Whittier's Tent on the Beach, we trust we shall be pardoned for inserting here:

ABRAHAM DAVENPORT.

In the old days a custom laid aside
With breeches and cocked hats the people sent
Their wisest men to make the public laws,
And so, from a brown homestead, where the Sound
Drinks the small tribute of the Mimasas,
Waved over by the woods of Rye-pawams,
And hallowed by pure lives and tranquil deaths,
Stamford sent up to the councils of the State
Wisdom and grace in Abraham Davenport.

'Twas on a May day of the far old year
 Seventeen hundred eighty, that there fell
 Over the bloom and sweet life of the spring,
 Over the fresh earth and the heaven of noon,
 A horror of great darkness, like the night
 In day of which the Norland sagas tell—
 The twilight of the Gods. The low hung sky
 Was black with ominous clouds, save where its rim
 Was fringed with a dull glow, like that which climbs
 The crater's sides from the red hell below.
 Birds ceased to sing, and all the barnyard fowls
 Roosted; the cattle at the pasture bars
 Lowed, and looked homeward; bats on leathern wings
 Flitted abroad; the sounds of labor died;
 Men prayed and women wept; all ears grew sharp
 To hear the doom-blast of the trumpet shatter
 The black sky, that the dreadful face of Christ
 Might look from the rent clouds, not as he looked
 A loving guest of Bethany, but stern
 As Justice and inexorable Law.

Meanwhile, in the old State House, dim as ghosts,
 Sat the law-givers of Connecticut,
 Trembling beneath their legislative robes.
 "It is the Lord's Great Day! Let us adjourn,"
 Some said; and then, as if with one accord,
 All eyes were turned to Abraham Davenport.
 He rose, slowly cleaving with his steady voice
 The intolerable hush. "This well may be
 The Day of Judgment which the world awaits;
 But be it so or not, I only know
 My present duty and my Lord's command,
 To occupy till he come. So at the post

Where He hath set me in His Providence,
 I choose, for one, to meet Him face to face —
 No faithless servant frightened from my task,
 But ready when the Lord of the harvest calls;
 And, therefore, with all reverence, I would say,
 Let God do his work, we will see to ours.
 Bring in the candles." And they brought them in.

Then by the flaring lights the Speaker read,
 Albeit with husky voice and shaking hands,
 An act to amend an act to regulate
 The shad and alewife fisheries. Whereupon,
 Wisely and well spake Abraham Davenport,
 Straight to the question, with no figures of speech
 Save the nine Arab signs, yet not without
 The shrewd dry humor natural to the man;
 His awe-struck colleagues listening all the while,
 Between the pauses of his argument,
 To hear the thunder of the wrath of God
 Break from the hollow trumpet of the cloud.

And there he stands in memory to this day,
 Erect, self-poised, a rugged face, half seen
 Against the background of unnatural dark,
 A witness to the ages as they pass,
 That simple duty hath no place for fear.

Another instance took place at Danbury at the Court of Common Pleas, of which he was Chief Justice. "This venerable man, after he was struck with death, heard a considerable part of a trial; gave the charge to the jury and took notice of an article in the testimony which had escaped the attention of the counsel on both sides. He then retired from the bench and was soon after found dead in his bed." —For portrait see Hist. of Stamford, Conn. He m. (2) Aug. 8, 1776, Martha Coggeshall, wid. of Perez Fitch and mother of Wm. S22143. Elizabeth Cogswell Davenport, b. Jan. 27, 1782; d. in New Haven, Oct. 10, 1857, in her 95th yr., "After a long life of faithful serving of God and her generation." (grave-stone in Grove st. cemetery in N. Hav.). Of whom, says Horace Bushnell, "whose simple dignity and beauty all her own." m. Charles W. Apthorpe, Esq., of Boston.

I. Mary Mehitable Apthorpe, m. in N. Hav., Sept. 13, 1833, Rev. Horace Bushnell. In dedication of his book on women suffrage Dr. Bushnell pays the following tribute to his wife: "The good and wise mother, the notable housewife and care taker, the discreet adviser and patient manager of wayward boyhood."—Biog. And again he says: "For once I will dare to break open one of the customary seals of silence by inscribing this little book (Woman Suffrage) to the woman I know best and most thoroughly; having been overlapped, as it were, and curtained in the same consciousness for the last thirty-six years. If she is offended that I do it without her consent, I hope she may get over the offense shortly as she has a great many other things that are worse. She has been with me in many weaknesses and some storms, giving strength alike in both; sharp enough to see my faults, faithful enough to expose them, and considerate enough to do it wisely, shrinking never from loss or blame or shame to be encountered in anything right to be done, adding great and high instigations,—instigations always to good, and never to evil mistaken for good,—foresighting always things bravest and best to be done, and supplying inspirations enough to have made a hero if they had not lacked the timber. If I have done anything well, she has been the more really in it, that she did not know it; and the more willingly, also, that having her part known has not occurred to her; compelling me thus to honor, not less, but more, the covert glory of the womanly nature, even as I obtain a distinete and more wondering admiration of the divine meaning and moistenings, and countless unbought ministries it contributes to this otherwise very dry world."—Biog., p. 503. Horace Bushnell was b. at Bantam, near

Litchfield, Conn., April 14, 1802; son of Ensign and Dotha (Bishop) Bushnell; rem. with his parents to New Preston, Conn., 1805; Y. C. 1827; taught acad. in Norwich, Conn., two yrs.; tutor, Y. C. 1829; pastor No. Cong. chh. (Park chh.) at Hartford, 1833 to 1859, when ill health compelled him to resign. In 1837 delivered the Phi Beta Kappa oration, Y. C., on the Principles of National Greatness; Christian Nature, 1841; God in Christ, with Preliminary Dissertation on Language as related to Thought, 1849. For this publication he was called to answer a charge of heresy before the Clerical Association, of which he was a member; charge not sustained; Christ in Theology, 1851; Sermon for the New Life, 1858; Nature and the Supernatural, 1858; Work and Play, 1864; The Variations Sacrifice, 1865; Moral Uses of Dark Things, 1868; Woman's Suffrage, the Reforms against Nature, 1869. He also published many addresses, and a frequent contributor to religious periodicals. He was active in securing the beautiful ground in Hartford, named for him—Bushnell Park—on which the new State Capitol is erected; S. T. D., Wesleyan Col. 1842; Hary, 1852; LL.D. 1871; invited to the Presidency of Middlebury Col. 1840. Held in Hartford, Feb. 17, 1876. On Sunday, Nov. 24, 1878, a mural tablet memorial in the Park chh., was unveiled after an appropriate sermon by his successor, Rev. Dr. Burton. His life, written by his daughter, Mary, pub. by Harper's, 1880, contains two portraits, one in early, the other in later years. "His mental poise was finely adjusted, but for that very reason, perhaps, the more easily disturbed. In later years even the slight fever that accompanies a cold would sometimes set his mind wandering."—Biog., p. 46. 1, ELIZABETH, d. y. 2, HON. ACE, b. Sept., 1838; d. Oct. 9, 1842, of brain disease. "The child had been remarkably good and lovely, with a spiritual nature, doubtless prematurely developed under the approach of disease, but not the less of an angelic sweetness."—Biog., p. 105. 3, MARY, wrote life of her father; m. In Nov., 1842, Mrs. Clarke took passage on a steamer from Detroit to Buffalo, the last boat of the season, with her two daughters. Mary, a dark-eyed, curly-haired girl of 6 yrs., and Charlotte, a gentle, womanly girl of 12. They were returning to New England. The weather was calm and pleasant. Abt. midnight the boat stopped at a pier built far out into the lake, to take on some freight; among the rest a barrel of turpentine. In rolling this barrel on board it burst; the turpentine ran over the deck, down among the machinery, reached the furnace and set the boat on fire. The lighthouse on the pier caught; the boat was cast loose, and drifted away, and most of the crew and passengers perished. Some were chilled to death; some were burned with the vessel; many were drowned. A few were saved by life preservers and floating fragments of furniture. Several years afterwards Grace Greenwood, who had learned the facts by correspondence with her cousin, wrote the story for a child's paper, The Little Pilgrim, under the title of "Heroism and Faith." It is a beautiful and touching recital of maternal love and womanly courage and filial faith. Only an abstract can be given here:

While Mrs. Clarke was sleeping soundly in her birth, on the night of the disaster, a little white-robed figure came to her, and said quite gently: "Mamma, the boat is on fire. Do get up!"

It was little Mary. The mother was tired and failed perhaps to comprehend. Then anxiously grasping her mother's hand she spoke again: "Mamma, Mamma, we are burning up! What shall we do?"

Then Mrs. Clarke sprang up, and saw her children by her side, pale with terror, but each careful little soul holding in her arms the clothes she had taken off on going to bed. All the passengers had fled from the cabin. On opening the door, it was seen to be filled with smoke. Another door opened from her room into a passage that led to the stern of the boat. She led her children along this passage. They were all in their night clothes. It was a cold November night. For a little while they stood in a narrow space, the flames behind, the chilly water before them; death on either hand. Then the soul of the mother fully awoke. The water were lit up with a ghastly day. Looking about for means of escape, she saw under the stern of the vessel the rudder chain and ropes. It seemed to afford a chance. She seized it and formed her plans.

"Children," said she calmly, "do not cling to me; be quiet and obedient, or I cannot help you." The brave little girls promised to be very good. Then the mother stood with her arms about her darlings and prayed, a low, brief prayer, but strong as love, passionate as life, solemn as death. Then lifting up little Mary, she said: "My child do you see those ropes and chains below there?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Well, darling, I must drop you over into the water. You will go down, down; but you will soon come up very near those chains and ropes I think. Then grasp the chains—not the ropes. Hold on to the chains. Don't let go for a moment. Do you understand?"

"Yes, mamma; I am to hold on to those chains. But won't I be drowned?"

"I hope not dear; only keep your mouth tightly closed while under water; be calm, and remember what mamma has told you. Now, dear, you must go."

Over the railing the mother gently lifted her child. It was fifteen feet to the water. One fearful instant she held her suspended and then let go. The child struck the water almost as silently and softly as a snow flake. The white dress gleamed for a minute, then sunk out of sight.

How long it seemed waiting for her. "Oh, mother," said Charlotte, "Mary is gone!" But she had hardly spoken before a little white speck appeared in the water. It was Mary rising where she had sank. She grasped the chain. She replied to their call. She was safe.

"Now, Charlotte," said the mother, "it is your turn. I cannot lift you over the railing; you must jump. Be as brave as little Mary; do as she did and you may be saved."

"Yes, mother, I will try. But will you surely come?"

"Yes, my daughter, I will die or be saved with my children. Keep a good heart—trust in God—good bye."

A hurried embrace, a loving kiss, then a slender young figure clambered over the railing, stood poised an instant outside, then plunged into the cold, deep water. Another fearful suspense; then this dear form arose also from the relenting deep, grasped the rudder chain, and called to her mother that she was safe.

It was time for the mother to go. The flames had reached the spot where she stood. She climbed over the railing and leaped. She seemed to go down a great distance into profound calm and silence, shutting out, as it seemed forever, the scene of anguish, terror and tumult above. But at last she also began to rise, as if borne by angels, and came up close to her children. Oh! what a welcome they gave her. She grasped the chain, but the iron was almost too hot to hold. The flames above blinded and scorched them, the hot iron became intolerable. Once little Mary let go and went under, but was rescued by the mother, encouraged and entreated to hold on. "Oh, yes," sobbed the child, "what will poor father do if we are drowned?"

So love, the great divine helper, lent her patience and courage.

At length, after an hour of untold suffering, half burned, half chilled to death, they were picked up by a small boat, the very last to be rescued.

His skill shown rather in preserving than amputating. Many instances are related of his success without the knife, in opposition to medical councils. In the winter of 1813-14, out of 300 cases of spotted fever only 3 died. One reason of his success was his untiring devotion to his patients. In one instance he was taken on a bed to the Jerome fam., of whom 3 were down with the fever. It was a stormy, winter night on Pompey Hill, and the distance was five miles. They all recovered. His mind failed in later yrs., and after he had ceased to know his own family he cured a difficult case of disease—the faith of the patient in him, aided. He d. at Pompey March 4, 1826; m. His res. in Ky. had enabled him to see from personal observation the evils of slavery, and he became a radical in opposition to that system. He was a candidate of the Liberty party for Co. She graduated from the Syracuse High School and fitted herself for a teacher of music, drawing and painting. For a year she was a teacher in the public schools of Syracuse, but failing health frustrated her cherished plans, and she was compelled to abandon her life's work for the more listless occupations of an invalid. He was frequently solicited to furnish copies of his writings both in prose and poetry for publication, but absolutely refused. He adopted a humane policy, prohibited the sale of whisky to the Indians as far as possible, and destroyed it wherever found within his agency. In this the Indians concurred. In 1854, in connection with another agent, he concluded a treaty at La Point with the Chippewas of L. S. and U. M., by which a large tract was ceded to the U. S. After the close of his agency he resumed professional and other business.

On the 15th day of Sept., 1862, the 19th Regt., Mich. Vols. was mustered into the service of the U. S. at Dowagiac, Mich., under the command of Col. Henry Clarke Gilbert. The Regt. left ten days after for the rendezvous on the Ohio river, 10 miles below Cincinnati; thence ordered from place to place. At Nicholasville, Tenn., a battery of 6 mounted howitzers and 40 horses was attached to the Regt. At Thompson's Station, Tenn., the Union force of 1700 men, including Col. Gilbert's Regt., was captured by a force of 1600 men under Gen. Forrest. The 19th Mich., who went into battle with 488 men, lost 20 killed and 83 wounded, of whom 54 died; 100 more were disabled by exposure and cruel treatment while prisoners. Col. Gilbert says that the men were literally slaughtered while on the march to Richmond as prisoners. The officers were confined in Libby prison from March 29 to May 5, 1863; and then exchanged. The Regt. was reorganized at Camp Chase, and in Oct. Col. Gilbert was sent to McMinnville in command of the Post, and while there built several redoubts. In April, 1864, he was ordered to the front and was at the storming of Resaca on the 15th of May, where his command captured a battery on the third attempt, the two first being unsuccessful. At this time he was shot through the body, within 15 feet of the enemy's guns, by a ball from a rifle in the hands of a sharpshooter. He dismounted without assistance, tied his horse to a grub and sat down. He was taken in an ambulance to Chattanooga and d. there, May 24, 1864, nine days after the battle. X. Sara Jane, b. Pompey, N. Y., Sept. 28, 1823. From the age of 12 to 19 she attended school at Rochester, N. Y., and when about 15 began to write for the Rochester papers, articles which they were glad to get. For the next few years she wrote under the nom de plume of "Grace Greenwood," for Whittier, Willis, Morris, Neal's Gazette or Globe, and was considered the most brilliant and copious lady correspondent of that day. In 1850 many of her sketches and letters of this period were collected and published by Ticknor & Fields, under the title of "Greenwood Leaves." The Poems were published about the same time. About 1853 she spent a year in Europe, and wrote letters home, which immediately on her return were collected and published with the title Haps and Mishaps in Europe. Since her m. she has edited The Little Pilgrim, a juvenile weekly, from which and from her other writings for the young, selections have been published by Ticknor & Fields to the extent of about a dozen vols. She was an early contributor to the Independent and during the war a lecturer to soldiers and at sanitary fairs, and also a general lecturer. In a letter to her cousin, Miss F. Amelia Clarke, G. G. says: "It is not my nature to dabble in anything. I must be in all over if at all." [See App.] A correspondent of the Washington Press in 1874 describes her as follows: "At the last Saturday evening 'reunion,' Grace Greenwood in her inimitable way, gave us dramatic readings in costume. Her personations exceeded anything the writer has seen on the stage or in private life. Charlotte Cushman, Fanny Kemble, Scott Siddons, last but not least, our own Grace Greenwood, make all the stars of the first magnitude that we have now in this particular heaven of genius. Attorney-Gen Williams says 'that he looks upon Grace Greenwood as the best writer and the most gifted woman in the country.' This decision is legal and may be considered final. Years ago the great and good Horace Mann said that she was not only 'the most gifted, but that she was the most beautiful woman he had ever seen'; and his passion for her in youthful days was as pure as though she had been a disembodied spirit. It is so rare that beauty and genius are wedded to one soul. In the opinion of the writer, Grace Greenwood is a handsomer woman at fifty than in the 'long ago.' It is the difference between the budding green of April and the garnered glory of September. If her portrait was taken as she stands before us to-day and hung in the Corcoran gallery, the spectator would say 'this must be a Roman matron who lived before the pall of the Middle Ages darkened the earth.' How does she look?—a brunette of the purest type, with clear-cut features, sorrowful, inquiring eyes, that shine as though a quenchless flame burned somewhere in the solitude of her own soul. There are some pictures which are burned into the human mind. We shall never forget her personation of 'Over the Hills to the Poorhouse,' one of Carleton's poems. The poverty-stricken outfit, the worn carpet bag, the iron-bowed spectacles, the gray hair. From the highest to the humblest of that godly company scarce a dry eye was to be seen. Then she told us what Miss Tattle, from Buttonville, saw at a 'Rejective Session of the Senate.' This was followed by that which proves man to have been the only 'created laughing animal';" m. at New Brighton, Pa., Oct. 17, 1853; Leander K. Lippincott of Washington, D. 825. Jonathan Edwards, b. Oct. 5, 1703. Being an only son was named by his father "the gift of the Lord." When but six yrs. of age he began to learn Latin under his father and elder sisters, all of whom the father had made proficient in that language, and he was carefully instructed at home until he was thirteen years of age. His letters and essays written at a very early period display a remarkable inquisitiveness and acuteness of mind, both as to mental and natural phenomena. A fragment written when he was not more than twelve years old against some one who had contended for the materiality of the soul, shows considerable wit, reach of thought and power of expression. There is also preserved an entertaining and instructive account of the habits of spiders, as observed by himself, written before he was 13. But the very first exercises of his mind were doubtless of the nature of religious meditation, and he could not recollect the time when he was not imbued with a deep sense of religion. In an account of his conversion, written later in life for the benefit of his children, he says: "I had a variety of concerns and exercises about my soul from my childhood, but had two most remarkable seasons of awakening before I met with that change by which I was brought to those new dispositions and that new sense of things that I have since had. The first time was when I was a boy, some years before I went to college, at a time of remarkable awakening in my father's congregation. I was then very much affected for many months, and concerned about the things of religion and my soul's salvation, and was abundant in religious duties. I used to pray five times a day in secret, and to spend much time in religious conversation with other boys. * * * I with some of my school fellows joined together and built a booth in a swamp, in a very retired spot, for a place of prayer, and besides I had particular secret places of my own in the woods, where I used to retire by myself, and was from time to time much affected."

At thirteen years of age he entered Yale College, far advanced in general and classical learning, and in his freshman year read Locke's Essay on the Human Understanding with appreciation and delight, as shown by some of his notes which have been published. His pleasure in reading and annotating on the topics of this great work, has been likened to that of the miser when gathering up handfuls of silver and gold from some newly discovered treasure.

While in the senior class his second awakening took place, which was speedily followed by a second relapse. "In process of time," he writes, "my convictions and affections wore off, and I entirely lost all those affections and delights, and left off secret prayer, at least as to any constant performance of it, and returned like a dog to his vomit, and went on in the ways of sin. Indeed I was at times very uneasy, especially toward the latter part of my time in college, when it pleased God to seize me with a pleurisy, in which he brought me nigh unto the grave and shook me over the pit of hell; and yet it was not long after my recovery before I fell again into my old ways of sin."

At seventeen he graduated with great reputation for both knowledge and wisdom, and he dates his final and entire conversion shortly after. Its chief symptom he thus describes: "From my childhood up my mind had been full of objections against the doctrine of God's sovereignty, choosing whom he would to eternal life, and hardening whom he pleased, leaving them eternally to perish and be everlasting tormented in hell. It used to appear like a horrible doctrine to me; but I remember the time very well when I seemed to be convinced and fully satisfied as to the sovereignty of God, and his justice in thus eternally disposing of men according to his sovereign pleasure." * * * And there has been a wonderful alteration in my mind with respect to the doctrine of God's sovereignty from that day to this, so that I scarce ever have found so much as the rising of an objection against it, in the most absolute sense, in God's showing mercy to whom he will show mercy and hardening whom he will. God's absolute sovereignty and justice, with respect to salvation and damnation, is what my mind seems to rest assured of as much as of anything I see with my eyes; at least it is so at times."

In commenting on this part of his life an eminent writer says: "We cannot avoid giving our readers a little insight into the narrative of his conversion, especially as it contains some passages of deep feeling and sensibility which form a striking contrast to the controversial hardness of his other writings. It is full of bursts of tenderness and even whilst the subject of his earliest meditations were the same dark doctrines in their most tremendous form, which he afterwards defended so ably by the help of his mature reason amidst all the gloom which naturally surrounds them, they seem to have left upon his mind no sentiments but those of gentleness and charity." * * *

In this document of Mr. Edwards' early opinions we have said that, amidst all the horrors of his creed, there are many indications of the natural fineness and sensibility of his spirit. The following passages are remarkably beautiful and have about them a tone of pastoral or rather scriptural poetry. "Not long after I first began to experience these things I gave an account to my father of some things that had passed in my mind. I was pretty much affected by the discourse we had together; and when the discourse was ended I walked abroad alone in a solitary place in my father's pasture for contemplation. And as I was walking there and looked up on the sky and clouds, there came into my mind so sweet a sense of the glorious majesty and grace of God, that I know not how to express it. God's excellency, his wisdom, his purity and love, seemed to appear in everything; in the sun, moon and stars; in the clouds and blue sky; in the grass, flowers and trees; in the water and all nature, which used greatly to fix my mind. I often used to sit and view the moon for a long time, and so in the day time spent much time in viewing the clouds and sky to behold the sweet glory of God in these things; in the meantime singing forth with a loud voice my contemplation of the Creator and Redeemer. I used to be a person uncommonly terrified with thunder; and it used to strike me with terror when I first saw a thunderstorm rising; but now, on the contrary, it rejoiced me. I felt God at the first appearance of a thunder-storm, and used to take an opportunity at such times to fix myself to view the clouds and see the lightning play and hear the majestic and awful voice of God's thunder." * * * There is a poetry and grandeur in some of his passages of this sort, which show a moral sublimity of genius in the midst of enthusiastic reveries, often in inferior minds more productive of dark and disorderly sentiments than of sound and elevated piety. When he comes, however, to reason on his theological and philosophical tenets, he is no longer either an enthusiast or a poet, for then he proceeds with all the pertinacity and ingenuity of a hard-headed dialectician, determined neither to tolerate nor employ any weapon but stern argument.

After graduating he remained two years in New Haven, studying divinity. In the 19th year of his age (1722) he was licensed to preach and in August of that year accepted a call to New York city. His diary while there shows that his mind was constantly employed in religious meditation. On the 12th of Jan., 1723, "I made a solemn dedication of myself to God; and wrote it down, giving up myself and all that I had to God; to be for the future in no respect my own, to act as one who had no right to himself in any respect." About this time he wrote out 70 resolutions which he kept before him as his guides through the remainder of his life. They refer mostly to the governing of his morals and the performance of religious exercises. They are published in his "Life by Dr. Dwight." After a ministry of eight months in N. Y., which gave abundant satisfaction, circumstances induced him to return to his father's house. He formed warm attachments in New York. "My heart seemed to sink within me at leaving the family and city where I had passed so many pleasant days. I went to Wethersfield by water and as I sailed away I kept sight of the city as long as I could." But at Saybrook where he went on shore to spend the Sabbath, he recovered his composure in "a refreshing season walking alone in the fields." The summer of 1723 was devoted to theological studies at his father's house. In the fall he went to New Haven to receive the degree of Master of Arts. Was elected a tutor of Yale College, and continued in this position two years.* "His tutorial renown," says President Stiles, "was great and excellent." He then accepted a call to the church at Northampton, as colleague to his grandfather, Rev. Solomon Stoddard, who was far advanced in years, and whom he shortly succeeded as sole pastor, being installed Feb. 27, 1727. On the 28th of the following July, he m<sup>r</sup>. Sarah, daughter of Rev. James and Mary Hooker Pierpont of N. Hay. She was b. Jan. 9, 1707. Her father was the second pastor of the first church in New Haven, a son of John and Thankful (Stowe) Pierpont of Roxbury, Mass. Her mother was a daughter of Rev. Samuel Hooker of Farmington and a gr. dau. of Rev. Thomas Hooker, the leader and first pastor of the colony at Hartford; her ancestry was noble and she did it no discredit. She was a young lady of uncommon beauty. Not only is this the language of tradition, but Dr. Hopkins who first saw her when the mother of seven children, says "she was more than ordinarily beautiful, and her portrait painted by Smybert in 1740, exhibits that peculiar loveliness of expression, which is the combined result of intelligence, cheerfullness and benevolence." This picture now hangs with that of her husband, by the same artist, in the gallery of Yale College.

To her natural advantages were added all that a superior education could give. In her manners she was gentle, courteous and amiable, and the law of kindness appeared to govern all her conduct and conversation. She was a true example of early piety, warm and animated, and under the control of true delicacy and sound discretion. Mr. Edwards had known her several years before her marriage, and in 1723 (when she was but thirteen years of age) he wrote on the blank leaf of a book, this remarkable description of her: "They say there is a young lady in New Haven who is beloved of that Great Being who made and rules the world, and that there are certain seasons in which this Great Being in some way or other comes to her and fills her mind with exceeding sweet delight, and that she hardly cares for anything except to meditate on Him. That she expects after a while to be received up where He is, to be raised up out of the world and caught up into heaven; being assured that He loves her too well to let her remain at a distance from Him always. That she is to dwell with Him and be ravished with His love and delight forever. Therefore, if you present all the world before her with the richest of its treasures, she disregards it and cares not for it, and is unmindful of any path of affliction. She has a superior purity in her affections; is most just and conscientious in all her conduct, and you could not persuade her to do anything wrong or sinful, if you should give her all this world, lest she should offend this Great Being. She is of a wonderful sweetness, calmness and universal benevolence, especially after the Great God has manifested Himself to her mind. She will sometimes go about from place to place singing sweetly, and seems always to be full of joy and pleasure, and no one knows for what. She loves to be alone, especially in the fields and groves, and seems to have some one invisible always conversing with her."

Devoted as Mr. Edwards was to study he was less acquainted with most of his temporal affairs than many of his neighbors, and seldom knew where or by whom his forage for winter was gathered, or how many milk kine he had; whence his table was furnished, or by what means his wants were provided for. Mrs. Edwards took almost the whole direction of the temporal affairs of the family without doors and within, managing them with great wisdom and prudence as well as cheerfulness. And in the still more delicate and difficult duties of a mother he could safely commit his young and growing family to her love, faithfulness, wisdom and piety. She encouraged exclusively female meetings for prayer and religious conversation, in which she took her proper share, and in this way helped to bring about the frequent revivals for which the Northampton church was remarkable during the ministry of Mr. Edwards. They lived together thirty years, and he was to the end the same enthusiastic admirer. She relieved him from all cares beyond his study, whither every day she carried in a silver bowl his

*The only real estate then belonging to the college was the old Homestead of William Tuttie on which had been erected its first building, and on the very spot where Edwards studied, taught and won "his great and excellent tutorial renown." Elizabeth Tuttie, the grandmother of Edwards, had passed the years of her childhood and youth, until as the wife of Richard Edwards she removed to Hartford and became the ancestress of "a glorious posterity." A posterity that has reflected, perhaps, more lustre on the name of Yale, than that of any pilgrim to these shores from the landing on Plymouth Rock.
